FAMOUS OPERA HOUSES OF EUROPE
Foreword

Opera in America

The opera has at last come into its own in the United States. In former years merely the pastime of the well-to-do in New York City and vicinity, grand opera is now enjoyed for its own sake by millions of hearers throughout the country. Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, New Orleans, San Francisco and Montreal now have their regular opera season; while many other cities have arranged for occasional performances.

The Victor Responsible for Much of this Awakened Interest

During the recent season several hundred performances of grand opera, at an estimated cost of millions of dollars, were given in the United States. This great outlay for dramatic music alone would not have been possible had it not been for the increased interest aroused in opera by the widespread distribution by the Victor during the past ten years of hundreds of thousands of grand opera records, at widely varying prices—from the double-faced records by well-known Italian and French artists of Europe, at 37½ cents per selection, to the great concerted numbers by famous singers at $6.00 and $7.00.

The Opera-Goer and the Victor

Even though fortunate enough to be able to attend the opera, the lover of operatic music is reminded that with the Victor and the operatic records his enjoyment of the opera may be greatly increased. The favorite singers may be heard at home as often as desired, and their voices will be just as natural as in life.

Do you think Caruso the greatest of tenors? Then do not be satisfied with an occasional hearing of his glorious voice at the opera, but let him sing for you and your friends by means of the Victor. Is Sembrich, Farrar, Tetrazzini, Gádski, Calvé, Schumann-Heink, Homer or Amato your favorite singer? The Victor makes it possible to hear these voices at any time, no matter where the artists may be singing.

Voices of Absent Singers

Do you regret that Melba is often in Australia or Europe? There is consolation in the thought that her voice is always here in all its loveliness, indelibly impressed on Victor discs.

Have you memories of Tamagno when he was at his best? The Victor will revive these memories for you by bringing the voice of this singer back from the grave.

The Victor an Excellent Substitute for the Opera

For every person who can attend the opera there are a hundred who cannot. However, many thousands of lovers of the opera in the latter class have discovered what a satisfactory substitute the Victor is, for it brings the actual voices of the great singers to the home, with the added advantage that the artist will repeat the favorite aria as many times as may be wished, while at the opera one must usually be content with a single hearing; and even though the scenery and costumes may be lacking, the absence of these accessories will now be atoned for in some measure by the graphic descriptions and numerous illustrations in this book.

The Victor Opera Season Never Ends

In former years, after the close of the opera season and the annual migration of the artists to Europe, no one seemed to think much about grand opera or opera singers. The Victor, however, has changed all this, and operatic records now form a most important part of the musical life of the home; and at all seasons of the year may be heard the voices of the great singers, a consolation and a delight to opera lovers.

This Book the First of Its Kind

This little work is unique in many respects, and while there are many excellent books describing the plots of the operas, we think that in no other book on opera can be found all of these features:

1. Titles in various languages, with pronunciation of each.
2. Date and place of original production.
3. Date and place of first performance in America.
4. Cast of characters and pronunciation of the same when necessary.
5. Brief and clearly stated synopsis of plots of one hundred different operas.
6. Translations (all or part) of the text of several hundred separate numbers.
7. Every act and scene indicated, with description of the stage setting.
8. Every separate number mentioned in its proper place in the opera, and the numbers placed in the order in which they occur.
9. More than five hundred portraits and pictures, making it the most completely illustrated book on opera ever published.

NOTE—Acknowledgment must be made to Oliver Ditson Co. and G. Schirmer for kind permission to quote occasionally from their copyrighted publications. Both these houses have set new standards with their operatic publications—Schirmer with superbly printed opera scores and collections of opera airs entitled "Operatic Anthology"; and Ditson with the Musicians' Library, masterpieces of music typography.

ACT II—Prison of the Inquisition

As the curtain rises Vasco is seen asleep on a bench, while Selika watches over him. She gazes at the sleeping youth and sings this beautiful lullaby.

ACT III—Decks of Don Pedro’s Ship

Preludio (Prelude to Act III)

By La Scala Orchestra

*62614 10-inch, $0.75

Act III shows the decks of Don Pedro’s vessel. Nelusko, who is secretly plotting to destroy the ship, is brooding over his plans; and his gloomy bearing being noticed by the sailors, they ask him to relate the old legend of Adamastor, king of the seas.

Adamastor, Re dell’ onde profonde (Ruler of Ocean)

By Francesco Cigada, Baritone

(In Italian) *62407 10-inch, $0.75

Nelusko:

Adamastor, monarch of the pathless deep,
Swift o’er foaming waves
To sound of fierce winds tramping;
When his dark steeds vex the misty sea,
Beware, mariner! Beware, mariner!

A storm is threatened, and amid the preparations for resisting the elements a ship is seen, which proves to be di Gama’s. He rashly comes on board, is promptly seized by Don Pedro and is about to be executed, when Selika draws her dagger and threatens to kill Inez unless her lover is released. The tyrant reluctantly yields, but afterward orders Selika to be flogged. The storm breaks, and in its midst the ship is boarded by Indians, fellow-countrymen of Nelusko, and the entire ship’s company are either killed or made prisoners.

ACT IV—Temple of Brahma

Act IV represents the Temple of Brahma in the country of Selika and Nelusko. The act opens with the weird and striking Indian March, played here by the Herbert Orchestra.

The priests, who have crowned Selika their Queen, announce the execution of all the prisoners except Vasco; and he too is condemned to die. The priests and people disperse and Vasco enters, guarded by soldiers. He is entranced with the beauty of this wonderful land, of which he had dreamed, and voices his admiration in the celebrated air, "O Paradiso."

O Paradiso! (Oh Paradise!)
By Enrico Caruso, Tenor (In Italian) 88054 12-inch, $3.00
By Florencio Constantino (In Italian) 74085 12-inch, 1.50
By Evan Williams (In English) 74148 12-inch, 1.50
By Lambert Murphy (In Italian) 70100 12-inch, 1.25

Vasco:
Hail! fruitful land of plenty, beauteous garden, hail!
An earthly paradise art thou!
Oh Paradise on earth!
Oh azure sky, oh fragrant air
All enchant my heart;
Thou fair new world art mine!
Thee, a radiant gift,
On my native land I'll bestow!
O beauteous country—mine thou art at last!

Caruso's singing of this famous air is a magnificent performance, while two other fine records are offered in both Italian and English.

The soldiers are about to kill Vasco, but he is saved by Selika, who announces that he is her chosen husband. Nelusko is forced to remain silent by threats that Selika will destroy herself. Di Gama, forgetting Inez, yields to the spell and weds the Queen by the native rites.

ACT V—SCENE I—The Queen's Gardens

At the beginning of the last act, Inez, who had escaped from the prison, is captured and brought before the Queen, who becomes convinced that di Gama still loves the Portuguese maiden. In a moment of generosity she sacrifices her own feelings and assists the lovers to escape.

ACT V—SCENE II—Promontory Over the Sea

The final scene shows a promontory from which Selika is watching the ship bearing Inez and di Gama toward Portugal. As the vessel disappears from view she advances toward the deadly mancanilla tree, the fumes of which are death.

Selika:
Aye! here I look upon the mighty sea—boundless—infinite
As is my woe!
Its waves in angry fury break, and then anon their course renew,
As doth my sorrowing heart!
(Observing the mancanilla tree.)

Thou leafy temple, thou vault of foliage dark,
After life's weary tumult I now come
To seek repose of thee, and find oblivion from my woes,
Yes! thy shade eternal is like the darkness of the tomb!

Gathering the fatal flowers, she inhales their perfume, sadly saying: "Farewell, my Vasco, I forgive thee!" She is overcome and sinks unconscious beneath the tree. Nelusko, who has come in search of her, finds her dying; and in a frenzy of grief, also inhales the deadly blossoms and falls lifeless by her side.

Priests, Priestesses, Ministers, Captains, Soldiers, Officials, Ethiopian Slaves and Prisoners, Egyptians, etc.

The scene is laid in Memphis and Thebes, in Pharaoh's time.

This opera was written by request of the Viceroy of Egypt, who wished to celebrate the opening of his new Opera House at Cairo by the production of a work upon an Egyptian subject from the pen of the most popular composer of the time. The story originated with Marietta Bey, the famous Egyptologist, and seems to have inspired Verdi to unusual efforts.

Aida, daughter of Amonasro, King of Ethiopia, has been captured by the Egyptians and is a slave at the Court of Memphis, where she and the young soldier Rhadames have fallen in love with each other. Rhadames goes to the Egyptian war, and during his absence the King's daughter, Amneris, discovers his attachment and is furious, as she herself loves Rhadames.

Rhadames returns, covered with glory and bringing many prisoners, among them Amonasro, Aida's father. The King releases all the prisoners except Amonasro, and bestows his daughter on the unwilling Rhadames.

In the next scene Amonasro forces his daughter to persuade Rhadames to become a traitor. The latter's love for Aida and his distaste for the approaching union with Amneris lead him to consent. Amneris, however, has overheard the plot, and after vainly trying to induce Rhadames to abandon Aida, she denounces him as a traitor, and he is condemned to be buried alive. When the vault is sealed he discovers Aida, who had concealed herself there that she might die with him; and the lovers slowly suffocate in each other's arms.

ACT I

SCENE I—A Hall in the Palace. Through the grand gate at the back may be seen the Pyramids and the Temples of Memphis

The opera has no overture. The curtain rises, showing a hall in the palace of the King of Memphis, where Rhadames and the High Priest, Ramfis, are discussing the coming invasion of Ethiopia; and Ramfis hints that some young and brave warrior may be chosen to command the expedition. Rhadames, left alone, hopes that he himself may gain the coveted honor, and promises to lay his triumphs at the feet of his Aida.

Celeste Aida (Heavenly Aida)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor
(In Italian) 88127 12-inch, $3.00

By Leo Slezak, Tenor
(In German) 64113 10-inch, 1.00

Then occurs the splendid gem of Act I, the Celeste Aida, beginning in which Rhadames chants the praises of the peerless Aida. It is seldom enjoyed at the opera, especially in America, as it occurs almost immediately after the rise of the curtain, and is invariably marred by the noise made by late comers. With the Victor, however, it may be heard in all its beauty and the fine renditions by Caruso and Slezak fully appreciated.

Rhadames:
Heavenly Aida, beauty resplendent,
Radiant flower, blooming and bright;
Queenly thou reignest o'er me transcendent,
Bathing my spirit in beauty's light.

Would that thy bright skies once more beholding,
Breathing the soft airs of thy native land,
Round thy fair brow a diadem folding,
Thine were a throne next the sun to stand!

A fine trio, expressing the emotions of the characters in the scene, then follows.

Ohimé! di guerra fremere (Alas! the Cry of War I Hear)

By Elena Ruszcowska, Soprano; Bianca Lavin de Casas, Mezzo-Soprano; Egidio Cuneo, Tenor (In Italian) 88261 12-inch, $3.00

The King’s daughter, Amneris, enters, and seeing the young warrior’s glowing enthusiasm, delicately hints of her secret affection for him, saying:

Amneris:
What unwonted fire in thy glance!
With what noble pride glows thy face!
Worthy of envy—oh, how much—
Would be the woman whose beloved aspect
Should awaken in thee this light of joy!

Rhadames begins to explain his hope of securing the command of the expedition, when Aida enters, and the young soldier’s expressive glance reveals to Amneris his love for the Egyptian slave.

The King and his guards enter and receive a messenger, who reports that Egypt has been invaded by the Ethiopian army, under the command of Amonasro. (“My father!” exclaims Aida aside.) Amid great excitement Rhadames is appointed leader of the army, and is presented with a banner by Amneris.

The King begins another trio, urging the Egyptian forces to guard with their lives the sacred Nile.
Su! del Nilo (Nilus’ Sacred Shores!)
By Elena Ruszcowska, Soprano; Maria Cappiello, Mezzo-Soprano; Tapergi and Davi (In Italian) 88266 12-inch, $3.00

Following the trio comes a grand chorus:
To battle! We’ll hunt the invader down.
On! Rhadames, thy brow may laurels crown!
All depart to prepare for the expedition, while Aida, left alone, gives way to her grief and sings the beautiful Ritorna vincitor, expressing her conflicting emotions.

Ritorna vincitor (Return Victorious!)
By Johanna Gadski, Soprano (In Italian) 88137 12-inch, $3.00

AIDA:
Return victorious! And from my lips
Went forth the impious word! Conqueror
Of my father—of him who takes arms
For me—to give me again
A country; a kingdom; and the illustrious name
Which here I am forced to conceal!
The insane word forget, O gods;
Return the daughter
To the bosom of her father;
Destroy the squadrons of our oppressors!
What am I saying? And my love,
Can I ever forget
This fervid love which oppresses and enslaves,
As the sun’s ray which now blesses me?
Shall I call death on Rhadames—
On him whom I love so much?
Ah! Never on earth was heart torn by more cruel agonies!

She gives way to her emotion for a brief moment, then sings the lovely and appealing

I sacri nomi (The Sacred Names)
By Celestina Boninsegna, Soprano 88223 (In Italian) 12-inch, $3.00

Rousing herself she calls on her gods for aid and goes slowly out as the curtain falls.

SCENE II—The Temple of Vulcan—in the centre an altar, illuminated by a mysterious light from above

Ramfis, the High Priest, and the priests and priestesses have assembled to bless the expedition. The chant in praise of Ptah is heard from an invisible choir. Rhadames enters and receives the consecrated veil.

Ramfis:
Mortal, beloved of the gods, to thee
Is confided the fate of Egypt. Let the holy sword Tempered by the gods, in thy hand become
To the enemy, terror—a thunderbolt-death!

Rhadames:
God, who art leader and arbiter
Of every human war,
Protect thou and defend
The sacred soil of Egypt!

Nume, custode e vindice (God, Guardian and Avenger)
By Antonio Paoli, Tenor; Perello de Segurola, Bass; and Chorus (In Italian) 88268 12-inch, $3.00
Ramfis then sings the closing invocation, in which Rhadames joins. He is invested with the sacred armor, and as the priestesses perform the mystic dance the curtain slowly falls.

ACT II

SCENE I—A hall in Amneris’ apartments

The curtain rises, showing the Princess and her slaves, who are adorning her for the triumphal festival in honor of Rhadames, just returned with his victorious army. Amneris and the slaves sing the ode to the returned hero.

Chi mai fra (His Glory Now Praise)

By Maria Capiello, Mezzo-Soprano, and Chorus (In Italian)

Seeing Aida approaching, the Princess dismisses her slaves and prepares to enjoy her revenge. This scene is expressed in a splendid duet, given here in two records by Mmes. Gadski and Homer, and also by Mmes. Ruszczowska and Lavin de Casas, of the La Scala forces.

Amneris pretends to sympathize with the afflicted girl, saying:

Amneris:

The fate of arms was deadly to thy people.

Poor Aida! The grief Which weighs down thy heart I share with thee.

I am thy friend; Time will heal the anguish of thy heart, And more than time—a powerful god-love.

Aida:

Oh! love immortal! oh! joy and sorrow, Sweetest delirium, dark doubts and woes! As in thy trials new life I borrow, A heav’n of rapture thy smiles disclose.

Amneris (aside):

This death-like pallor, this strong emotion, Plainly reveal the fever of love!

(To Aida):

Among the braves who fought so well, Lost in their country’s service, Has someone a tender sorrow haply waken’d in your heart?

Aida:

What say’st thou?

SCENE I—Lay I Beadore

AMNERIS:
Tremble!, I read thy secret,
Thou lov'st him! lie no longer!
I love him too—dost thou hear?
I am thy rival, daughter of kings Egyptian.

AIDA:
Thou my rival? 'tis well, so be it—
Ah, what have I said? forgive and pity,
Ah, let this my sorrow thy warm heart move.
'Tis true I adore him with boundless love—
Thou art so happy, thou art so mighty,
I cannot live hence from love apart!

Always a highly impressive number, this duet is doubly so when rendered by such famous exponents of the parts of Aida and Amneris. Mme. Gadski's Aida is one of her most effective rôles—splendidly acted and vocally perfect; while Mme. Homer's impersonation of the Egyptian Princess is always a thrillingly dramatic one.

The rendition by the two La Scala artists is one of the finest which has come to us from Milan.

SCENE II—Without the City Walls

The scene changes to a gate of the city of Thebes. The King and his court are assembled on a magnificent throne to receive the conquering army. A splendid chorus is sung by people and priests. The Egyptian troops, preceded by trumpeters, enter, followed by chariots of war, ensigns, statues of the gods, dancing girls carrying treasures, and finally Rhadames, under a canopy borne by twelve slaves; the procession headed by bands of musicians playing the famous Triumphant March.

Grand March (Triumphant March)
By Vessella's Italian Band

Vessella has admirably produced the familiar effect of the two bands playing, at first separately, and then together.

King (descending from the throne to embrace Rhadames):
Saviour of our country, I salute thee.
Come, and let my daughter with her own hand
Place upon you the triumphal crown.

(Rhadames bows before Amneris, who places the crown upon him.)

Now ask of me
What thou most wishest. Nothing denied to thee
On such a day shall be—I swear it
By my crown, by the sacred gods!

The prisoners enter, including Amonasro, who is dressed as an officer. Aida sees him and cries, "What do I see! My father!" All are surprised, and Amonasro signals to Aida not to betray his rank. Amonasro then sings his recital:

Quest' assisa ch'io vesto (This Dress Has Told You)
By Ernesto Badini, Baritone; Sra. Fabris, Soprano; Lavín de Casas, Mezzo-Soprano; Egidio Cunego, Tenor

AMONASRO:
I am her father. I went to war,
Was conquered, and death I sought in vain.
(Pointing to his uniform)
This habit I wear may tell you
That I have defended my king and my country.
Fate was hostile to our arms:
Vain was the courage of the brave!
At my feet, in the dust extended,

The people and prisoners appeal to the King for mercy, while the priests demand that the captives be put to death. Rhadames, seeing the hesitation of the King, reminds him of his vow, and demands life and liberty for the captured Ethiopians. The King yields, stipulating only that Aida and her father be held as hostages, and then announces that Rhadames shall have the hand of Amneris as his reward.

The magnificent finale then follows, Aida and Rhadames gazing at each other in despair, Amneris glorying in her triumph, and Amonasro swearing secret vengeance against his captors. The curtain falls amid general rejoicing.

ACT III

SCENE I—A moonlight night on the banks of the Nile—the Temple of Isis can be seen, half concealed by palm trees.

As the curtain rises on this beautiful scene, a chorus within the Temple is heard in a chant of praise.

O tu che sei d’Osiride (Oh, Thou Who Art Osiris)

By Maria Cappiello, Soprano, and Chorus

Chorus (in the temple):
O Thou who art of Osiris,
Mother immortal and spouse,
Goddess who awakens the beatings
In the heart of human creatures,
Come piteous to our help,
Mother of eternal love.

Amneris:
I will pray that Rhadames may give me
His whole heart—as mine to him
Is consecrated forever!

A boat approaches, bearing Rhadames and Amneris, who go into the Temple. Aida, veiled, cautiously enters, hoping that Rhadames will come thither, and sings a tender and despairing song of that lovely land which she may never see again.

AIDA:
O native land, no more to thee shall I return!
O skies of tender blue, O soft airs blowing,
Where calm and peaceful my dawn of life pass’d o’er,
O hills of verdure, O perfum’d waters flowing,
O home beloved, I ne’er shall see thee more!
O fresh and fragrant vales, O quiet dwelling,
Promise of happy days of love that bore.
Now hope is banish’d, love and yonder dream dispelling,
O home beloved, I ne’er shall see thee more!

Three fine renditions of this air, one of the most effective in the opera, are given here by three celebrated prima donnas, all of whom have been seen in America in this rôle.

Aida is about to depart when she is astonished to see her father. Amonasro reproaches his daughter with her love for his enemy Rhadames, telling her with significant emphasis that she may behold her native land again if she wishes. He tells her that his people have risen again, and proposes that she shall influence Rhadames to betray the plans of his army in the new campaign. She at first refuses, but he bids her be true to her country, and pictures the sufferings of her people.

Rivedrai le foreste imbalsamate (Thou Shalt See Again the Balmy Forests)

By Elena Ruszcowska and Giuseppe Maggi (Italian) 88267 12-inch, $3.00

Profaned our houses, temples and altars;
Mothers, old men and children he slew.
AIDA:
Ah! well I remember those unhappy days,
I remember the grief that my heart suffered.
Amonasro:
Then delay not. In arms now is roused
Our people—everything is ready—
Victory we shall have. It only remains for me to know
What path the enemy will follow.
AIDA:
Who will be able to discover it? Whoever?
Amonasro:
Thyself!
AIDA: Who?
Amonasro:
Rhadames will come here soon—he loves thee—
He leads the Egyptians. Dost thou understand?
AIDA: Horror! What dost thou counsel me? No, no! Never!

Su, dunque! (Up, Then!)

By Johanna Gadski and Pasquale Amato (Italian) 89068 12-inch, $4.00
By Elena Ruszcowska and Ernesto Badini (Italian) 88265 12-inch, 3.00

With growing excitement he describes the consequences of her refusal.

Amonasro (with savage rage):
Up, then!
Rise, Egyptian legions!
With fire destroy our cities—
Spread terror, carnage and death.
To your fury there is no longer check!

AIDA: Ah, father!
Amonasro (repulsing her):
My daughter
Dost thou, call thyself?
AIDA (terrified and suppliant):
It is thy mother—recognize her—
She curses thee!

AMONASRO:
AIDA (in the greatest terror):
Ah, no! Father!

AMONASRO (repulsing her):
Go, unworthy one! Thou'rt not my offspring—
Thou art the slave of the Pharaohs!

AMONASRO (yielding):
Father, their slave I am not—
Reproach me not—curse me not;
Thy daughter again thou canst call me—
Of my country I will be worthy!

AMONASRO:
Courage! he comes—there, I shall hear all.
(Conceals himself among the palm trees.)

Rhadames now enters and tries to embrace her, but she repulses him, saying bitterly:

AIDA:
The rites of another love await thee,
Thou spouse of Amneris!

He protests that he loves Aida alone, but she bids him prove his affection by fleeing with her.

AIDA:
Ah! fly with me, and leave behind
These deserts bare and blighted;
Some country, new and fresh to find,
Where we may love united.
There, 'mid virgin forest groves,
By fair sweet flow'rs scented,
In quiet joy contented, the world will we forget!

He finally consents, and reveals to her that the army will go by the pass of Napata. Amonasro, who has overheard, now enters, and Rhadames is horrified at the knowledge that he has betrayed the army to the King of Ethiopia. His scruples are finally overcome, Amonasro saying:

Amonasro:
No; thou art not guilty—
It was the will of fate.
Come; beyond the Nile await

The brave men devoted to us;
The world will we forget!
There the vows of thy heart
Shall be crowned with love.

Amneris, coming from the temple, pauses behind a pillar and overhears the final words.
Mad with jealousy, she rushes in and denounces the guilty trio. Aida and Amonasro escape but Rhadames is taken in custody as a traitor.

ACT IV

SCENE I—A room in the Palace—on one side a door leading to Rhadames’ prison cell

The curtain rises, disclosing
Amneris in an attitude of despair.
She is torn between her love for Rhadames and a desire for vengeance, and finally orders the prisoner brought before her.

AMNERIS (bitterly musing):
My rival has escaped me—
And Rhadames awaits from the priests
The punishment of a traitor.
Traitor he is not, though he revealed
The high secret of war. He wished to fly—
To fly with her—traitors all!
To death, to death!
Oh, what am I saying? I love him—
Oh! if he could love me!
I would save him—but how?
Let me try. Guards, Rhadames comes.

RHADAMES DENOUNCED AS A TRAITOR
Rhadames enters, and the first great duet of the act occurs.

Gia i sacerdoti adunnasi (The Priests Assemble)
By Louise Homer and Enrico Caruso (In Italian) 89050 12-inch, $4.00
By Pietracewska and Barrera (In Italian) 88269 12-inch, 3.00

Aida a me togliesti (Aida Thou Hast Taken)
By Louise Homer and Enrico Caruso (In Italian) 89051 12-inch, $4.00

Amneris offers to save his life if he will renounce Aida. He scorns her proposal, resolving to die rather than be false to his Ethiopian Princess.

Amneris:
Renounce her forever
And thou shalt live!
Rhadames:
I cannot do it!
Amneris:
Wouldst thou die, madman?
Rhadames:
I am ready to die.

The guards now appear and conduct Rhadames to the judgment room. The ensuing scene is a highly dramatic and impressive one.

Ohimè! Morir mi sento (Ah, me! Death Approaches!)
By Lavin de Casas, Mezzo-Soprano; Rizzo Sant' Elia, Bass; and Chorus
(Excerpt from the opera Aida by Giuseppe Verdi)

Amneris, seeing Rhadames taken out by the Priests, repents her harshness and sinks down desolate on a seat.

Amneris (falling on a chair, overcome):
Ah me! Death's hand approaches! who now will save him?
He is now in their power.
His sentence I have sealed—Oh, how I curse thee,
Jealousy, vile monster, thou who hast doomed him
To death, and me to everlasting sorrow!
(Turns and sees Ramfis and the Priests, who cross the stage and enter the subterranean hall.)
What see I? Behold of death
The ministers fatal, his merciless judges.

Amneris:
Who saves thee, O wretch,
From the fate that awaits thee?
To fury hast thou changed
A love that had no equal.
Revenge for my tears
Heaven will now consummate!

Ah, let me not behold those white robed phantoms!
(Covers her face with her hands. The voice of Ramfis can be heard within.)

Ramfis:
Rhadames, Rhadames: thou hast betrayed
Of thy country the secrets to aid the foe man:
Priests: Defend thyself!
Ramfis:
Rhadames, Rhadames: and thou wast absent
From the camp the very day before the combat!

Priests: Defend thyself!
Ramfis:
Rhadames, Rhadames: and thou hast played
The part of a traitor to King, and to honor!

Ramfis:
He is silent.
All:
Traitor vile!

Ramfis:
Rhadames, we thy fate have decided,
Of all traitors the fate shall be thine—
'Neath the altar whose God thou'st derided
Thou a sepulchre living shall find.

Amneris:
Find a sepulchre living!
Hated wretches!
Ever vengeful, blood-thirsty and blind!
Sacerdoti, compiste un delitto! (Priests, a Crime You Have Enacted!)

By Lavin de Casas, Mezzo-Soprano; F. Rizzi, Bass; and Chorus (In Italian) 88323 12-inch, $3.00

The priests now enter from the crypt and pass across the hall. The wretched woman denounces them.

Priests of Heaven, a crime you have enacted, Amneris:

Impious priesthood, curses light on ye all!

On your heads Heaven's vengeance will fall! (Exit wildly.)

This is one of the most impressive records of the Aida series. The despair of the wretched Amneris, and the solemn reply of the unbending priests are wonderfully expressed by Verdi.

SCENE II—Interior of the Temple of Vulcan—below a Subterranean Apartment

"The work finishes in serenity and peace, and such terminations are the most beautiful. Above, the temple full of light, where the ceremonies continue immutable in the sanctuary of the indifferent gods; below, two human beings dying in each other's arms. Their song of love and death is among the most beautiful of all music."—Camille Bellaigue.

When we hear the expression "the duet from Aida," our thoughts always instinctively turn to this number at the close of the work. There are other duets in the opera, some of them fine numbers, but this is the great one—perhaps the most intensely dramatic and melodiously beautiful of all Verdi's writings.

La fatal pietra (The Fatal Stone)

By Johanna Gadski, Soprano, and Enrico Caruso, Tenor (In Italian) 89028 12-inch, $4.00

By Nicola Zerola, Tenor (Part of scene—"To die, so pure and lovely!") (In Italian) 74225 12-inch, 1.50

This last scene is a highly picturesque one. Above we see the splendid Temple of Ptah, where priests and priestesses are chanting their strange songs. Below, a dark vault, in whose depths Rhadames is awaiting with patience a slow death by starvation.

Rhadames (despairingly):
The fatal stone upon me now is closing!
Now has the tomb engulf'd me!
The light of day no more shall I see!
No more behold Aida!
Aida, where art thou now?
Whate'er befall me, may'st thou be happy!
Ne'er may my frightful doom be told to thine ear!
(Then suddenly in the shadows he sees a form—it is Aida, who has secreted herself in the crypt that she may die with her lover.)
What moan was that?
Is't a phantom, or vision dread?
No! 'tis a human being!
Heaven! Aida!
Aida: Yes!
Rhadames (in great desperation):
Thou, with me here buried!
Aida:
My heart foreboded this, thy dreadful sentence,
And to this tomb that shuts on thee its portal,
I crept, unseen by mortal.
Here, free from all,
Where none can more behold us,
Clasp'd in thy arms, love,
I resolved to perish!
Rhadames: To die! so pure and lovely!
To die! thyself thus dooming,
In all thy beauty blooming,
Fade thus forever!
Thou, whom the gods alone for love created;
Yet to destroy thee, was my love then fated?
Thou shalt not die! so much I love thee,
Thou art too lovely!
AIDA (transported):
See'st thou where death, in angel guise,
With heavenly radiance beaming,
Would waft us to eternal joys,
On golden wings above!

The lovers sing their plaintive farewell to earth in hauntingly lovely strains, while in strange contrast the heathen chanting continues above.

O terra addio (Farewell, Oh, Earth)
By Johanna Gadski, Soprano, and Enrico Caruso, Tenor
(In Italian) 89029 12-inch, $4.00

AIDA AND RHADAMES:

Brief dream of joy,
Condemned to end in woe!

Time and Place: Paris; during the French Revolution.

The story tells of Andrea Chenier, a patriot, poet and dreamer, who was born in Constantinople, coming to Paris for his education. The French Revolution was in full swing, and being a worshipper of liberty and a hater of monarchs, he took vigorous sides, and was arrested, imprisoned and finally guillotined on July 25, 1794. Illica's plot, however, is almost wholly pure fiction.

ACT I

SCENE—Hall in the Castle of Coigny

As the curtain rises the servants of the castle are preparing for a ball, and among them is Gerard, afterward to become the leader of the Revolution. As his old father enters, bent under the weight of a load of furniture, the young man wistfully sings the Son sessant' anni:

Son sessant' anni (My Aged Father)

By Ernesto Badini, Baritone

(In Italian) 45012 10-inch. $1.00

The guests arrive, including Andrea Chenier, the young poet, and during the festivities Madeleine coquettishly asks Chenier to improvise upon the theme of love.
Improvviso—Un di all’ azzurro spazio (Once O’er the Azure Fields)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor
(In Italian) 88060 12-inch, $3.00
By Nicola Zerola, Tenor
(In Italian) 74216 12-inch, 1.50

In this air Chenier sharply criticises the aristocracy, and speaks of the pride of the rich and its effect upon the poor. The guests are displeased at his lack of taste, and later, when Gerard appears with a crowd of ragged men and women, Chenier supports him and goes with the party when it is ordered from the castle.

ACT II

SCENE—A Café on the Seine, Paris. Five years later

Bersi and a spy are dining at one of the tables, while at another table nearby is Andrea. Roucher enters and tells the young man that he is in danger and is being watched, giving him a pass which will enable him to escape in case of necessity. Andrea, however, tells Roucher that he has a rendezvous that evening with an unknown lady, and the latter begs him not to go. Bersi goes into the café with the spy, but presently returning, mingles with the crowd and speaks to Chenier, begging him to await a lady whom she calls Speranza.

As darkness falls Madeleine appears and is recognised by both Chenier and the spy, who is concealed and watching from a distance. He hurries away to report to Gerard, and the young girl begs Chenier to save her from Gerard. They avow their love and are about to fly together when Gerard intercepts them and tries to drag Madeleine away, but Roucher interferes and escorts the girl to her home, while Chenier and Gerard draw their swords. Gerard is wounded, and warns Chenier that he is proscribed and begs him to save Madeleine. Chenier flees and the mob surrounds the wounded Gerard, while he declares his assailant is unknown to him.

ACT III

SCENE—At the Tribunal

At a meeting of the people at which Gerard is spokesman, a spy enters and tells him that Chenier has been arrested and that Madeleine is not far away. The spy urges him to denounce Chenier, and after much hesitation he consents to draw up the necessary papers. He signs them and hands them to the spy, when Madeleine appears and offers herself in exchange for Andrea’s life. Gerard is touched by the young girl’s grief and promises to do what he can.

Andrea is brought before the judges and jury and denounced as a traitor, whereupon he speaks with deep feeling and defends himself with brilliancy.

Si fui soldato (I Was a Soldier)

By Egidio Cunego, Tenor
(In Italian) 45012 10-inch, $1.00

Gerard, regretting that he has signed the papers which condemned Andrea, rushes forward and testifies for him, but the people demand more victims, insisting upon the death sentence, and the prisoner is led away.

ACT IV

SCENE—The Prison of St. Lazare

Andrea is in his cell, writing verses by the light of a lamp. Madeleine succeeds in getting into the prison by impersonating a recently pardoned prisoner, and by bribing his jailer. Gerard conducts her to Andrea and then goes for a last appeal to Robespierre. The lovers cling to each other in the last embrace, and at dawn, when the death wagon comes for Andrea, Madeleine goes to the guillotine to die with him.
IL BARBIERE DE SIVIGLIA

Text by Sterbini, a Roman poet, founded on the celebrated trilogy of Beaumarchais. Music by Rossini. First presented at the Argentina Theatre in Rome, February 5, 1816. First London production March 10, 1818. First New York production November 29, 1825. The opera was at first called “Almaviva, or the Useless Precaution,” to distinguish it from Paisiello’s “Barber of Seville.”

Scene and Period: Seville, the seventeenth century.

Rossini’s opera is a marvel of rapid composition, having been composed in about fifteen days! This seems almost incredible, but the fact is well authenticated. The composer had agreed to write two operas for the Roman carnival of 1816, the first of which was produced December 26, 1815, and on that day he was told that the second would be required on January 20, 1816. He agreed to have it completed, although he did not even know what the subject was! The libretto was given to him by Sterbini in sections, and he wrote the music as fast as the verses were furnished. While the opera did not achieve an instantaneous success, it gradually found favor with opera-lovers on account of its brightness and the manner in which the humor of its action is reflected in the music.

The plot of Barber of Seville is very simple. The Count Almaviva loves Rosina, the ward of Dr. Bartolo, a crusty old bachelor who secretly wishes to wed her himself. Almaviva persuades the village barber, Figaro, to arrange a meeting for him, and gains entrance to the house disguised as a dragoon, but is arrested by the guardian.

Not discouraged, he returns, pretending to be a substitute for Rosina’s music teacher, who, he says, is ill. The appearance of the real Don Basilio spoils the plan, and the Count retreats for the second time, having, however, arranged a plan for elopement.

Bartolo finally arouses Rosina’s jealousy by pretending that the Count loves another, and she promises to forget him and marry her guardian. When the time for the elopement arrives she meets the Count, intending to reproach him, but he convinces her of the base plot of Bartolo, and the lovers are wedded by a notary, just as Bartolo arrives with officers to arrest the Count.
Overture to Barber of Seville
By La Scala Orchestra

ACT I

SCENE I—"A Street in Seville." Day is Breaking

The Count, accompanied by his servant Fiorello and several musicians, enters to serenade the beautiful Rosina. Accompanied by the mandolins, he sings his serenade, Ecco ridente, considered one of the most beautiful numbers in the opera.

Ecco ridente (Dawn, With Her Rosy Mantle)
By Fernando de Lucia, Tenor (Piano acc.) (In Italian)

COUNT:
Lo! smiling in the Orient sky,
Morn in her beauty breaking,
Canst thou, my love, inactive lie—
My life, art thou not waking?
Arise, my heart's own treasure,
All that my soul holds dear;
Oh! turn my grief to pleasure!
Awake, my love, appear!

But, hush!—methinks I view that face,
And all my doubts are vanished;
Thine eyes diffuse soft pity's grace.
And all my fears are banished.
Oh, rapturous moment of delight!
All other blises shaming;
My soul's content, so pure and bright,
On earth no equal claiming!

Even such a lovely serenade as this fails to bring a response from the window, but the Count still lingers, concealing himself in the shadow as he sees Figaro, the jack-of-all-trades of the village and general factotum in the house of Bartolo. Figaro unslings his guitar and sings that gayest and most difficult of all airs, the joy or despair of baritones the world over, which has been recorded for the Victor by three famous baritones.

Largo al factotum (Room for the Factotum)
By Pasquale Amato, Baritone (In Italian)
By Emilio de Gogorza, Baritone (In Italian)
By Titta Ruffo, Baritone (In Italian)

Figaro is thoroughly satisfied with himself, and gives a long list of his numerous accomplishments, of which the following is a sample:

FIGARO: Room for the city's factotum here,
La, la, la, la, la, la.
I must be off to my shop, for the dawn is near,
La, la, la, la, la, la.
What a merry life, what pleasure gay,
Awaits a barber of quality.
Ah, brave Figaro; bravissimo, brave.
La, la, la, la, la, la.
Of men, the happiest, sure, art theu, brave.
La, la, la, la, la, la, etc.

"Oh! what a happy life," soliloquizes the gay barber, "what pleasure awaits a barber of quality!—Oh, brave, Figaro, brave, bravissimo: thou art sure the happiest of men, ready at all hours of the night, and, by day, perpetually in bustle and motion. What happier region of delight; what nobler life for a barber than mine! Razors, combs, lancets, scissors—behold them all at my command! besides the snug perquisites of the business, with gay damsels and cavaliers. All call me! all want me!—dames and maidens—old and young. My peruke! cries one—my beard! shouts another—bleed me! cries this—this billetdoux! whispers that. Figaro, Figaro! heavens, what a crowd. Figaro, Figaro! heavens, what a tumult! One at a time, for merry sake! Figaro here; Figaro there; Figaro above; Figaro below. I am all activity; I am quick as lightning; in a word—I am the factotum of the town. Oh, what a happy life! but little fatigue—abundant amusement—with a pocket that can always boast a doubloon, the noble fruit of my reputation. So it is; without Figaro there's not a girl in Seville will marry; to me the little widows have recourse for a husband; I, under excuse of my comb by day, and under favor of my guitar by night, endeavor to please all in an honest way. Oh, what a life, what a life!"
Three fine records of this great air are given here. Ruffo, in his rendition, proves himself possessed of an admirable sense of humor, and this, with his powerful and flexible voice, enables him to attack this difficult solo in the true opéra-boufffe vein. The result is as fine a performance of the Largo as one would wish to hear. The extreme difficulties are made a vehicle for the display of the baritone’s ample vocal resources, which sweep everything before them; he is indeed a little free with the text, and sings snatches of the accompaniment out of sheer bravado, while bits of comic characterization peep out at every available opportunity. Amato’s rendition is a fine example of how the music of this air should be sung, and is a veritable triumph for the singer.

Signor de Gogorza’s version differs from the others in many respects. It is one of the finest records he has made for the Victor, and exhibits his fine voice and wonderful execution to perfection.

The Count now accosts Figaro, asking him to arrange a meeting with Rosina, telling him that his rank must not be known and that he has assumed the name of Lindor.

Figaro consents to become his ally. Rosina and her guardian come to the balcony, and Rosina, perceiving the Count, manages to drop a note, which he secures. Bartolo leaves the house and orders that no one be admitted.

Figaro now says that he is expecting a military friend to arrive in the village, and suggests the Count dress himself as this soldier and thus gain admittance to the house. He agrees, and retires to assume the disguise.

SCENE II—A Room in Bartolo’s House

Rosina is discovered holding in her hand a letter from the Count. She is agitated and expresses her feelings in her celebrated entrance song.

The number is in the form to which most Italian composers of the period adhered—a slow opening section (here accompanied by occasional chords for the orchestra) succeeded by a quicker movement culminating in a coda which presents many opportunities for brilliant vocal display. Musically the aria is full of charm, and is deservedly popular with those singers whose method enables them to deliver it with the requisite lightness and bravura.
A bewildering array of artists have essayed this charming song, and Victor audiences can choose whether they will have it sung by an Italian, Polish or Spanish prima donna.

Rosina runs out as her guardian and Don Basilio come in. Bartolo is telling Basilio that he wishes to marry his ward, either by love or force. Basilio promises to help him, and says that the Count is trying to make Rosina’s acquaintance. They decide to invent some story that will disgrace him. “A calumny!” says Basilio. Bartolo asks what that is, and Basilio, in a celebrated air gives his famous description, which is a model of its kind.

La calunnia (Slander’s Whisper)

By Marcel Journet, Bass
(In Italian) 74104 12-inch, $1.50

Basilio: Oh! calumny is like the sigh
Of gentlest zephyrs breathing by;
How softly sweet along the ground,
Its first shrill voice is heard around,
Then passing on from tongue to tongue,
It gains new strength, it sweeps along
In giddier whirl from place to place,
And gains fresh vigor in its race;
Till, like the sounds of tempests deep,
That thro’ the woods in murmurs sweep
And howl amid their caverns drear,
It shakes the trembling soul with fear.
Thus calumny, a simple breath,
Engenders ruin, wreck and death;
And sinks the wretched man forlorn,
Beneath the lash of slander torn,
The victim of the public scorn!
(They go out.)

Rosina and Figaro return, and the barber tells her that her guardian is planning to marry her. She laughs at the idea, and then asks Figaro who the young man was she observed that morning. Figaro tells her his name is Lindor, and that he is madly in love with a certain young lady, whose name is Rosina.

Dunque io son (What! I?)

(In Italian) 92501 12-inch, $4.00

Rosina: I could not so—
Figaro: A few lines merely.
Rosina: I blush to write.
Figaro: At what? Why really—may I indite?
Rosina: A letter! Oh, here it is.
(Coming him, she takes a note from her bosom, which she gives him.)
Figaro: Already written! What a fool (astonished)
Rosina: Was I to think to be her master!
Much fitter that she me should school;
Her wits, than mine, can flow much faster.
Oh, woman, woman, who can find
Or fathom, all that's in thy mind?
(Exit Figaro.)

Bartolo comes in and accuses Rosina of dropping a note from the balcony, and when she denies it he shows her ink marks on her finger and calls attention to a cut pen and a missing sheet of paper. She says she wrapped up some sweetmeats to send to a girl friend, and cut the pen to design a flower for her embroidery. Bartolo then denounces her in another famous air:
Manca un foglio (Here’s a Leaf Missing)
By Arcangelo Rossi, Bass
(In Italian) *68144 12-inch. $1.25
BARTOLO:
To a doctor of my rank,
These excuses, Signorina,
I advise another time.
That you better should invent.
Why is the paper missing?
That I would wish to know.
Useless, ma’am, are all your airs—
Be still, nor interrupt me so.
Another time, sweet Signorina,
When the doctor quits his house
He will carefully provide
For the keeping you inside.
And poor innocent Rosina,
Disappointed then may pout:
In her room shall she be locked,
Till I choose to let her out.
(He goes out in a rage, followed by Rosina, who is laughing.)
A loud knocking is heard at the street door,—it is the Count in his soldier disguise. He pushes his way in, and insists that the commandant has ordered him to put up in Bartolo’s house. A long scene follows, full of comedy, finally ending in the arrest of the Count, who, however, privately informs the officer who he is; and the astonished official salutes respectfully and takes his soldiers away. Bartolo is in such a rage that he can hardly speak, and the act ends with the famous quartet:

ACT II
SCENE—A Room in Bartolo’s House
Bartolo is discovered musing on the affair of the soldier, and as he has learned that no one in the regiment knows the man, he suspects that he was sent by the Count.
A knocking is heard and the Count is ushered in, dressed as a music master. He greets Bartolo, beginning the duet, Pace e gioia.
Pace e gioia (Heaven Send You

(In Italian) *62105 10-inch, $0.75
Bartolo says he is much obliged for these kind wishes and wonders who this can be. The Count explains that Don Basilio is ill and he has come in the music master’s place to give Rosina a lesson. He shows Bartolo the note Rosina had written, saying he found it at the inn, and offers to make Rosina believe the Count has shown her note to another lady. Bartolo is pleased with the idea and calls Rosina. Then occurs the celebrated “Lesson Scene” in which Rosina usually interpolates an air. Rossini wrote a trio for this scene, but in some manner it was lost.
Figaro now comes in to shave Bartolo, and in the course of the scene contrives to secure the key to the balcony. At this moment all are pet-rrified at the entrance of Don Basilio, who is supposed to be confined to his bed. Figaro sees that quick action is necessary and asks him what he means by coming out with such a fever.
“Fever?” says the astonished music master. “A raging fever,” exclaims Figaro, feeling his pulse. "You need medicine," says the Count, meaningly, and slips a fat purse in his hand. Don Basilio partially comprehends the situation, looks at the purse and departs.

The shaving is renewed, and Rosina and the Count pretend to continue the lesson, but are really planning the elopement. Bartolo tries to watch them, but Figaro manages to get soap in the Doctor's eye at each of his efforts to rise. He finally jumps up and denounces the Count as an impostor. The three conspirators laugh at him, and go out, followed by Bartolo, who is purple with rage. This scene is amusingly pictured in a famous fresco in the Vienna Opera.

Bertha, the housekeeper, enters, and in her air, Il vecchietto, complains that she can no longer stand the turmoil, quarreling and scolding in this house.

Il vecchietto cerca moglie (The Old Fool Seeks a Wife)

By Emma Zaccaria (Double-Faced—See below) (In Italian) 62105 10-inch, $0.75

"What kind of thing is this love which drives everybody crazy?" she asks. This air used to be called in Rome Aria di sorbetto (sherbet), because the audience used to eat ices while it was being sung!

Don Bartolo now desperately plays his last card, and shows Rosina the note, saying that her lover is conspiring to give her up to the Count Almaviva. Rosina is furious and offers to marry Bartolo at once, telling him that he can have Lindor and Figaro arrested when they arrive for the elopement. Bartolo goes after the police, and he is barely out of sight when Figaro and the Count enter by means of the key which the barber had secured. Rosina greets them with a storm of reproaches, accusing Lindor of pretending to love her in order to sacrifice her to the vile Count Almaviva. The Count reveals himself and the lovers are soon clasped in a fond embrace, with Figaro in a "Bless you, my children," attitude.

Don Basilio, who had been sent for a notary by Bartolo, now arrives. The Count demands that the notary shall wed him to Rosina. Basilio protests, but the sight of a pistol in the Count's hand soon silences him.

This scene is rudely interrupted by the arrival of Bartolo and the soldiers. The officer in charge demands the name of the Count, who now introduces Signor and Signora Almaviva to the company. Bartolo philosophically decides to make the best of the matter. However, he inquires of Basilio:

BARTOLO: But you, you rascal— Even you to betray me and turn witness!

BASILIO: Ah! Doctor, The Count has certain persuasives And certain arguments in his pocket, Which there is no withstanding!

BARTOLO: Ay, ay! I understand you. Well, well, what matters it? Go; and may Heaven bless you!

FIGARO: Bravo, Bravo, Doctor! Let me embrace you!

ROSINA: Oh, how happy we are!

COUNT: Oh, propitious love!

FIGARO: Young love, triumphant smiling, All harsher, thoughts exiling, All quarrels reconciling, Now waves his torch on high!

The Bartered Bride was intended by its composers to be typical of Bohemian life and character—to be a national opera, and so it really is. The work illustrates accurately Bohemian village life, and is based on a simple story full of mirth and sometimes almost farcical.

Marie, daughter of Kruschina, a rich peasant, is betrothed to Hans, her father's servant. Hans and Marie, however, are threatened with separation because the maiden's father has determined she shall marry Wenzel, a half-witted, stuttering lad, who is the son of Kruschina's old friend, Micha. Kruschina and Kezal endeavor to arrange this marriage, but the girl flatly refuses to give up her old lover. Kezal finally offers Hans three hundred crowns if he will renounce Marie. At first the offer is indignantly rejected, but later Hans consents, insisting on a rather strange condition—that these words be inserted in the agreement, "that Marie shall only be married to a son of Micha." Kezal, although he does not understand the reason for this, gladly agrees, and shortly afterward the paper is signed, the entire village being called in to witness the signature.

Marie refuses to believe that her lover has sold her for three hundred crowns, but is compelled to realize the truth when the marriage broker produces Hans' receipt for the money. The young girl meets her ruthless lover, who seems remarkably joyous over the affair, and still declares his love for her. The mystery is not explained until Micha and his wife arrive and recognize Hans to be their long-lost eldest son. So Hans not only wins his bride, but gains 300 crowns, for Kezal has agreed that Marie "shall marry only a son of Micha." As the money remains in the family no one objects save Kezal, who departs in wrath.

The famous Overture to Bartered Bride is a work of delightful melody, and has had numberless performances as a concert number. It is delightfully spontaneous and highly interesting, containing parts of the national airs of Bohemia.

Scene and Period: Paris, about 1830.

Puccini’s Bohême is an adaptation of part of Mürger’s La Vie Bohème, which depicts life in the Quartier Latin, or the Students’ Quarter, in 1830. It being impossible to weave a complete story from Mürger’s novel, the librettists have merely taken four of the principal scenes and several of Mürger’s characters, and have strung them together without much regard for continuity.

The principal characters in Puccini’s delightful opera are the inseparable quartet described by Mürger, who with equal cheerfulness defy the pangs of hunger and the landlord of their little garret. In the scenes of careless gaiety is interwoven a touch of pathos; and the music is in turn lively and tender, with a haunting sweetness that is most fascinating.

Rudolph, a poet; Marcel, a painter; Colline, a philosopher; and Schaunard, a musician, are four friends who occupy an attic in the Quartier Latin, where they live and work together. Improvident, reckless and careless, these happy-go-lucky Bohemians find a joy in merely living, being full of faith in themselves.

ACT I

SCENE—A Garret in the Quartier Latin

The opening scene shows the four friends without money or provisions, yet happy. Marcel is at work on a painting, “Passage of the Red Sea,” and remarks, beginning a duet with Rudolph, that the passage of this supposedly torrid sea seems a very cold affair!

Rudolph says that in order to keep them from freezing he will sacrifice the bulky manuscript of his tragedy. Marcel holds the landlord at bay until Schaunard arrives with an unexpected store of eatables. Having dined and warmed themselves, Marcel, Colline and Schaunard go out, leaving Rudolph writing. A timid knock at the door reveals the presence of Mimi, a young girl who lives on the floor above. She has come to ask her neighbor for a light for the candle, which has gone out. They enter into conversation, and when Mimi artlessly asks Rudolph what his occupation is, he sings the lovely air usually termed the "Narrative."

Caruso has never done anything more perfect in its way than his superb delivery of this number. It is one of his great scenes in the opera, and always arouses the audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm. He has sung it here with a fervor and splendor of voice which holds one spellbound. The tender sympathy of the opening—"Your little hand is cold"; the bold avowal—"I am a poet"; the glorious beauty of the love motive at the end—all are given with characteristic richness and warmth of style by this admired singer, while the final high note is brilliantly taken.

Two entirely different interpretations, though also very fine ones, are given by Mr. Jadlowker and Mr. McCormack, while three other versions—in Italian by Constantino and Hamlin, and in English by Evan Williams—complete a list in which every lover of this beautiful air can find a record to suit his taste and purse.

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano (Italian) 88413 12-in., 3.00
By Alice Nielsen, Soprano (Italian) 74062 12-in., 1.50

Then follows the charming Mi chiamano Mimi, in which the young girl tells Rudolph of her pitifully simple life; of how she works all day making artificial flowers, which remind her of the blossoms and green meadows of the country; of the lonely existence she leads in her chamber up among the housetops.

O soave fanciulla—Duo and Finale, Act I (Thou Sweetest Maiden)
By Nellie Melba, Soprano, and Enrico Caruso, Tenor 95200 12-in., $5.00

"Mimi’s delicate perfection enchanted the young poet—especially her little hands, which in spite of her menial work, she managed to keep as white as snow."—Mürgers La Vie de la Bohème.

This lovely duet occurs just after the Mi chiamano Mimi. The young girl having finished her story, Rudolph hears the shouts of his friends in the courtyard below. He opens the window to speak to them, letting in a flood of moonlight which brightens the room. The Bohemians go off singing. As Rudolph turns to Mimi and sees her in the moonlight, he is struck with her beauty, and tells her how entrancing she appears to him.

Love awakens in the heart of the lonely girl, and in this beautiful duet she pledges her faith to the handsome stranger who has come into her life.

Mme. Melba's singing in this scene is of exquisite beauty, while Caruso's delivery of the passionate phrases of Rudolph is superb. The beautiful motive with which the duet begins is associated throughout the opera with the presence of Mimi, and is employed with touching effect in the death scene in Act III.

Mimi consents to go to the Café Momus, where his friends are to dine, and after a tender scene at the door they go out, and the curtain slowly falls.

ACT II

SCENE—A Students' Café in Paris

This act represents the terraces of the Café Momus, where the artists are holding a carnival. Puccini has pictured with masterly skill the noisy, bustling activity of this scene, and the boisterous merriment of the gay revelers. The Bohemians of Act I are seated at a table with Mimi, when Musetta, an old flame of Marcel's, appears with her latest conquest, a foolish and ancient beau named Alcindoro. Marcel pretends not to see her, but Musetta is determined on a reconciliation, and soon gets rid of her elderly admirer and joins her old friends.

The gem of this gay scene is the charming waltz of Musetta, which Mme. Viafora sings here with spirit and delightful abandon.

Musetta Waltz

By Gina C. Viafora, Soprano (Italian) 64085 10-inch, $1.00

By Guido Gialdini (Whistling) *16892 10-inch, .75

Mme. Viafora's light soprano is heard to advantage in this pretty waltz, which she sings with fluency and skill.

The fun now becomes fast and furious, and Musetta is finally carried off on the shoulders of her friends, while the foolish old banker, Alcindoro, is left to pay the bills of the entire party.

ACT III

SCENE—A City Gate of Paris

This act begins in the cheerless dawn of a cold morning at the city gates, the bleakness of the scene being well expressed in Puccini's music. The snow falls, workmen come and go, shivering and blowing on their cold fingers. Mimi appears, and asks the officer at the gate if he will find Marcel, that good and kind-hearted Bohemian painter, now sojourning at the inn on the Orleans Road and painting, not landscapes, but tavern signs, in order to keep body and soul together. Marcel enters and is surprised to see Mimi, whom he supposes to be in Paris. Noticing that she is melancholy and apparently ill, he kindly questions her and learns her sad story.

This duet is one of the finest numbers in Puccini’s opera, and Miss Farrar and Mr. Scotti have made a strikingly effective record of it, while the other rendition by La Scala artists is also a very fine one.

Mimi tells her friend that she can no longer bear the jealous quarrels with Rudolph, and that they must separate. Marcel, much troubled, goes into the inn to summon Rudolph, but before the latter comes, Mimi secretes herself, and when he enters she hears him again accuse her of fickleness.

(Coldhearted Mimi!)

By Laura Mellerio, Soprano; Gennaro de Tura, Tenor; and Ernesto Badini, Baritone
(In Italian)

88227 12-inch, $3.00
A distressing fit of coughing reveals her presence, and she appears and sings the sad little air which is one of the features of this act.

Addio (Farewell)
By Nellie Melba, Soprano (In Italian) 88072 12-inch, $3.00
By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano (In Italian) 88406 12-inch, 3.00
By Alma Gluck, Soprano (In Italian) 64225 10-inch, 1.00

Most pathetically does the poor girl’s “Farewell, may you be happy” come from her simple heart, and she turns to go. Rudolph protests, something of his old affection having returned at the sight of her pale cheeks. Musetta now enters and is accused by Marcel of flirting. A furious quarrel follows, which contrasts strongly with the tender passages between Mimi and Rudolph as the lovers are partially reconciled.

Quartet, “Addio, dolce svegliare” (Farewell, Sweet Love)
By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano; Gina C. Viafora, Soprano; Enrico Caruso, Tenor; and Antonio Scotti, Baritone (In Italian) 96002 12-inch, $6.00
By Dora Domar, Soprano; Annita Santoro, Soprano; Gino Giovannelli, Tenor; and Ernesto Badini, Baritone (In Italian) 89048 12-inch, 4.00

Like the Rigoletto Quartet, this number is used by the composer to express many different emotions: The sadness of Mimi’s farewell to Rudolph; his tender efforts to induce her to remain; the fond recollections of the bright days of their first meeting—and contrasted to these sentiments is the quarreling of Musetta and Marcel, which Puccini has skillfully interwoven with the pathetic passages sung by the lovers.

In Mimi Miss Farrar has added another rôle to the long list of her successes in America, and her impersonation is a most charming one. She was in superb voice and has given this lovely music most effectively. Caruso sings, as he always does, with a beauty of voice and a sincerity of emotion which cannot fail to excite admiration.

Mme. Viafora, who is always a piquant, gay and interesting Musetta; and Signor Scotti, whose admirable Marcel is one of his finest impersonations, both vocally and dramatically, round out an ensemble which could not be surpassed.

Truly a brilliantly sung and perfect balanced rendition of one of the greatest of concerted numbers. Another version by famous artists of La Scala is also offered.
ACT IV

SCENE—Same as Act I

"At this time, the friends for many weeks had lived a lonely and melancholy existence. Musetta had made no sign, and Marcel had never met her, while no word of Mimi came to Rudolph, though he often repeated her name to himself. Marcel treasured a little bunch of ribbons which had been left behind by Musetta, and when one day he detected Rudolph gazing fondly at the pink bonnet Mimi had forgotten, he muttered: 'It seems I am not the only one!'"—Mürger.

Act IV shows the same garret in which the events of Act I took place. Bereft of their sweethearts, the young men are living sad and lonely lives, each trying to conceal from the other that he is secretly pining for the absent one.

In the opening scene, Marcel stands in front of his easel pretending to paint, while Rudolph, apparently writing, is really furtively gazing at Mimi's little pink bonnet.

Three records of this favorite duet are offered—by Caruso and Scotti, McCormack and Sammarco—and a popular priced version.

The friends, however, pretend to brighten up when Schaunard and Colline enter with materials for supper, and the four Bohemians make merry over their frugal fare. This scene of jollity is interrupted by the unexpected entrance of Musetta, who tells the friends that Mimi, abandoned by her viscount, has come back to die.

The poor girl is brought in and laid on Rudolph's bed, while he is distracted with grief. The friends hasten to aid her, Marcel going for a doctor, while Colline, in order to get money to buy delicacies for the sick girl, decides to pawn his only good garment, an overcoat. He bids farewell to the coat in a pathetic song, which Journel delivers here with much feeling.

Sono andati? (Are We Alone?)

The past is all forgotten and the reunited lovers plan for a future which shall be free from jealousies and quarrels. Just as Mimi, in dreamy tones, recalls their first meeting in the garret, she is seized with a sudden faintness which alarms Rudolph, and he summons his friends, who are returning with delicacies for Mimi. But the young girl, weakened by disease and privations, passes away in the midst of her weeping friends, and the curtain falls to Rudolph's despairing cry of "Mimi! Mimi!"

THE ABDUCTION OF ARLINE—ACT I

THE ABDUCTION OF ARLINE

Text by Bunn; music by Balfe. First produced at Drury Lane Theatre, London, November 27, 1843. First American production November 25, 1844, with Frazer, Seguin, Pearson and Andrews. Bunn took his plot from a ballet written for Ellsler, the dancer, by St. Georges, but transferred the scene from Scotland to Hungary. The work was immediately successful in England, and was eventually translated into almost every language of Europe, and during the next twenty years was produced in Italy as La Zingara; in Hamburg as La Gitana; in Vienna as Die Zigeunerin; and in Paris, with additional numbers, as La Bohémienne.

Time and Place: Presburg, Hungary; nineteenth century.

The story of this opera is quite familiar, and can be dismissed with a brief mention. Thaddeus, an exile from Poland, is fleeing from Austrian troops, and to facilitate his escape he casts his lot with a band of gypsies, headed by Devilshoof. As the tribe is crossing the estate of the Governor of Presburg, Count Arnheim, Thaddeus is enabled to rescue the little daughter of the Count from a wild stag, and in his gratitude the Count invites the gypsies to the hunting dinner. In the course of the festivities Thaddeus refuses to drink the health of the Emperor, and is about to be arrested when Devilshoof interferes and is himself confined in the Castle, while Thaddeus is permitted to go. Devilshoof climbs from a window and steals the little Arline, making his escape good by chopping down the bridge across the ravine as the soldiers pursue him. Twelve years elapse and we see the camp of the gypsies, among whom Arline has grown to be a beautiful girl of seventeen. Thaddeus, who has fallen in love with the young girl, now tells her of his love, and in a beautiful duet the lovers plight their troth. The Gypsy Queen, herself enamored of Thaddeus, is forced to unite him to Arline, but secretly plans vengeance. Her opportunity soon comes, as she contrives to have Arline accused of stealing a medallion from the young nephew of Count Arnheim, who has come to the fair at Presburg, near where the gypsies are camped. Arline is arrested and taken before the Count, who in the course of the examination recognizes her as his daughter, from the scar made by the stag in her childhood.

The third act shows Arline restored to her position, but still secretly pining for her gypsy lover. Deovelshoof contrives to get Thaddeus into the castle and he secures an interview with Arline. They are interrupted, however, by the Count’s approach, and Thaddeus hides in a closet as the guests arrive for a reception in honor of the newly-found heiress.

The Queen, still bent on revenge, now enters, and in a dramatic denunciation reveals the hiding place of Thaddeus. The Count asks for an explanation, and Arline declares she loves Thaddeus even more than her father. The Count, enraged, is about to attack Thaddeus, when the young man reveals his history and proves himself to be of noble blood. The Count then gives his consent and all ends happily.
Many of the most effective numbers from this pretty opera have been recorded by the Victor, besides the brilliant potpourri made by the Opera Company, which includes no less than seven of the most tuneful bits.

VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA—BIZET'S CARMEN

BIZET

Georges Bizet was a native of Paris, where he was born on October 25, 1838. Like Gounod and Berlioz, he won the Prix de Rome (Pree de Roam'); in this case in 1857, the year that his first opera, Docteur Miracle, was produced. Among other productions came Les Pecheurs de Perles, in 1863, an opera recently revived at Covent Garden with Mme. Tetrazzini as Letila. Carmen was produced in 1875, and this most Parisian of all operatic works was received at its production with a storm of abuse. It was immoral, it was Wagnerian—the latter at that time being a deadly sin in France! Nevertheless, the supreme merits of Carmen have won it a place among the two or three most popular operas in the modern repertory.

The talents of Bizet are shown by his remarkable lyric gifts; the power of writing short, compact and finished numbers, full of exquisite beauty and convincing style, at the same time handling dramatic scenes with the freedom demanded by modern opera. His music is more virile, concentrated and stimulating than perhaps any other French composer.

It was probably not a little owing to the hostile reception of this, his finest work, that its composer died three months later. The music Bizet has written, however, is likely long to survive him, and chief among the works into which he ungrudgingly poured his life's energy was Carmen.

THE PLOT

I

Carmen has its opening scene in a public square in Seville, showing at one side a guard-house, where Jose, a young brigadier, keeps guard. Micaela, a peasant girl whom he loved in his village home, comes hither to seek him with a message from his mother. As Jose appears, the girls stream out from the cigarette factory hard by, and with them their leading spirit in love and adventure, Carmen, the gypsy, reckless and bewitching. Headless of the pressing throng of suitors, and attracted by the handsome young soldier, Carmen throws him a flower, leaving him dazed and bewildered at her beauty and the fascinating flash of her dark eyes. A moment later a stabbing affray with a rival factory girl leads to the gypsy's arrest, and she is placed in the care of Jose himself. A few more smiles and softly-spoken words from the fascinating Carmen, and he is persuaded to allow her to escape. There is a sudden struggle and confusion—the soldier lets go his hold—and the bird has flown!

II

Act II takes place in the tavern of Lillas Pastia, a resort of smugglers, gypsies and questionable characters generally. Here arrives Escamillo, the toreador, amid the acclamations of the crowd, and he, like the rest, offers his homage to Carmen. Meanwhile, the two smugglers, Dancario and Remendado, have an expedition afoot and need Carmen to accompany them. But she is awaiting the return of the young soldier, who, as a punishment for allowing her to escape, had gone to prison, and she will not depart until she has seen him. The arrival of Jose leads to an ardent love scene between the two. Carmen dances her wild gypsy measures before him; yet, in the midst of all, he hears the regimental trumpets sounding the retreat. While Carmen bids him remain and join her, the honor of a soldier urges him to return. The arrival of his captain, who orders him back, decides Jose. He defies his officer, who is bound by the smugglers, and Jose deserts his regiment for Carmen.

III

The next scene finds Jose with the smugglers in the rocky camp in the mountains. The career of a bandit, however, is one to which a soldier does not easily succumb. His distaste offends Carmen, who scornfully bids him return home, she also foreseeing, in gypsy fashion, with the cards, that they will end their careers tragically together. In the midst of this strained situation two visitors arrive: Escamillo, the toreador, in the character of a new suitor for Carmen; and Micaela, with a message from Jose's dying mother. The soldier, frustrated in his attempt to kill Escamillo, cannot resist the girl's appeal and departs, promising to return later for his revenge.

IV

The final act takes place outside the Plaza de Toros, at Seville, the scene of Escamillo's triumphs in the ring. Carmen has returned here to witness the prowess of her new lover, and is informed by her friends that Jose, half crazed with jealousy, is watching, capable of desperate deeds. They soon meet, and the scene between the maddened soldier and the gypsy is a short one. The jealous Jose appeals to her to return to him, but she refuses with scorn, although she knows it means death. In a rage Jose stabs her, and thus the end comes swiftly, while within the arena the crowd is heard acclaiming the triumph of Escamillo.
Prelude (Overture)
By La Scala Orchestra
By La Scala Orchestra

The Prelude to Carmen opens with a quick march in 2:4 time, on the following theme:

The march is of an exceedingly virile and fiery description and is taken from the music preceding the bull-fight in the last act. Following this stimulating march comes the "Toreador's Song," leading to the march theme again. These two sections, complete in themselves, are now followed by a short movement in triple time indicating the tragic conclusion of the drama. Here, the appealing notes of the brass, heard beneath the tremolo of the strings, gives poignant expression to the pathos which lies in the jealous love of the forsaken Jose, and expresses the menace of the future death of Carmen. This movement breaks off on a sudden detached chord of the diminished seventh as the curtain rises.

ACT I
SCENE—A Public Square in Seville

The curtain rises on a street in Seville, gay with an animated throng. In the foreground are the military guard stationed in front of their quarters. The cigarette factory lies to the right; and a bridge across the river is seen in the background.

Among the crowd which throngs the stage a young girl may be seen searching for a familiar face. It is Micaela, the maiden whom Jose has left behind in his native village. The soldiers accost her, and from them she learns of her lover's absence. She declines the invitation to remain, and departs hastily.

The cigarette girls now emerge from the factory, filling the air with the smoke of their cigarettes, and with them Carmen, who answers the salutations of her admirers among the men by singing the gay Habanera.

By Emma Calvé, Soprano (In French) 88085 12-inch, 3.00
By Maria Gay, Mezzo-Soprano (In Italian) 92059 12-inch, 3.00

This charming "Habanera" has always been a favorite Carmen number, its entrancing rhythm always being delightful to the ear; and it does not seem strange that Don Jose found it irresistible when sung by Carmen.

Though often attributed to Bizet, the air was not original with him, but was taken from Yradier's "Album des Chansons Espagnoles." The refrain, is a particularly fascinating portion of the number.

* Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED CARMEN RECORDS, page 60.
Ah, love! thou art a wilful wild bird,
And none may hope thy wings to tame,
If it please thee to be a rebel,
Say, who can try and thee reclaim?
Threats and prayers alike unheeding;
Oft ardent homage thou’lt refuse,
Whilst he who doth coldly slight thee,
Thou for thy master oft thou’lt choose.

Ah, love!
For love he is the lord of all,
And ne’er law’s icy fetters will he wear,
If thou me lovest not, I love thee,
And if I love thee, now beware!
If thou me lovest not, beware!
But if I love you, if I love you, beware!

To a large number of opera-goers and music-lovers there is but one emotional soprano—but one exponent of such rôles as Carmen and Santuzza. Calvé’s Carmen, especially, is almost universally accepted as the greatest of all impersonations of the rôle.

Gerville-Réache’s Carmen is a fine impersonation, on quite original lines, her conception being based on a careful study of Mérimée’s story and on the teachings of her Spanish mother: Carmen, according to Mme. Gerville-Réache, was a passionate and fickle woman, but not a vulgar one.

The men invite Carmen to choose a new lover, and in reply she flings a flower in the face of the surprised Jose and laughingly departs.

Now Micaela returns, and finds the soldier she seeks. Her song tells of the message of greeting she brings Jose from his mother, and with it a kiss. The innocence of Micaela is here a foil to the riper attractions of the gypsy, and the music allotted to the maiden possesses the same simple charm; the conclusion of Micaela’s air being a broad sustained melody of much beauty. Jose takes up the strain, as the memories of his old home crowd upon him, and the beautiful duet follows.
Jose:
Ah! tell me of her—my mother far away.

Michaela:
Faithful messenger from her to thee,
I bring a letter,
And some money also;
Because a dragoon has not too much.
And, besides that—
Jose: Something else?

Michaela:
Yes, I will tell you.
What she has given, I will to thee render.
Your mother with me from the chapel came,
And then, lovingly, she kissed me.
"My daughter," said she, to the city go:
When arrived in Seville,
Thou wilt seek out Jose, my beloved son;
Tell him that his mother,
By night, by day, thinks of her Jose:
For him she always prays and hopes,
And pardons him, and loves him ever.
And then this kiss, kind one,
Thou wilt to him give for me."

Jose: A kiss from my mother?

Michaela:
To her son.
Jose, I give it to thee—as I promised.
(Michaela stands on tip-toe and kisses Jose—a true mother's kiss.—Jose is moved and regards Michaela tenderly.)

Jose:
My home in yonder valley,
My mother lov'd shall I e'er see?
Ah fondly in my heart I cherish
Mem'ries so dear yet to me.

Michaela:
That one sweet hope,
'Twill strength and courage give thee.
That yet again thou wilt thy home
And thy dear mother once more see.

The Seguidilla is one of Spain's most beloved dances, and its rhythm is most fascinating. Bizet has given us a brilliant example in this dainty number, which he has set to Michael Carre's words.

Carmen (airily):
Nigh to the walls of Sevilla,
Soon at my friend Lillas Pastia
I'll trip thro' the light Seguidilla,
And I'll quaff Manzanilla,
I'll go seek out my friend Lillas Pastia.

(Plaintively, casting glances at Jose):
Yes, but alone one's joys are few,
Our pleasures double, shared by two!
So just to keep me company,
My beau I'll take along with me!

COPYRIGHT DUPONT CALVE AS CARMEN

CARMEN AND ESCAMICHIO AT THE INN—ACT II
Although Jose says to himself that the girl is only amusing herself, and whiling away the time with her gypsy songs, the words which fall on his ear—of a meeting-place on the ramparts of Seville—of a soldier she loves—a common soldier, all these play upon the feelings of Jose and rouse in him a love for the changeful gypsy, who is fated to be the cause of his downfall.

He unties her hands, and when the soldiers are conducting her to prison she pushes Jose, who falls, and in the confusion she escapes.

Between Acts I and II is usually played a charming entr'acte, which has been rendered for this Carmen series by Mr. Herbert.

Intermezzo (1st Entr'acte)

ACT II

SCENE—A Tavern in the Suburbs of Seville

The second act opens amid the Bohemian surroundings of the tavern of Lillas Pastia; the wild tune with which the orchestra leads off depicting the freedom and gaiety with which the mixed characters here assembled are wont to take enjoyment and recreation.

Les tringles des sistres (Gypsy Song)

By Emma Calvé, Soprano  (In French) 88124 12-inch, $3.00

Carmen again leads them with her song, another lively gypsy tune, in the exulting refrain of which all join, a picture of reckless merriment resulting.

Ah! when of gay guitars the sound
On the air in cadence ringing,
Quickly forth the gipsies springing,
To dance a merry, mazy round.
While tambourines the clang prolong,
In rhythm with the music beating,
And ev'ry voice is heard repeating
The merry burthen of glad song.
    Tra la la la, etc.
But Carmen is thinking of the soldier who went to prison for her sake and who, now at liberty, will shortly be with her. Her musings are interrupted by the arrival of a procession in honor of Escamillo, whose appearance is followed by the famous "Toreador Song," the most popular of all Carmen numbers.

No less than six renditions of this universal favorite are offered by the Victor for the choice of customers. After Escamillo's departure, Carmen's comrades invite her to part upon a smuggling expedition, but she refuses to stir until she sees the soldier for whom she is waiting. Their efforts to persuade her has been put by Bizet into the form of a brilliant quintet.

Quintet—"Nous avons en tete une affaire"
(We Have a Plan)

By Mmes. Lejeune, Soprano; Duchêne, Mezzo-Soprano; Dumesnil, Soprano; Mm. Leroux, Tenor; Charles Gilibert, Baritone (In French) 88237 12-inch, $3.00

This is one of the favorite numbers in Bizet's opera, and at the same time one of the most difficult imaginable. When sung at the tempo indicates, it goes at break-neck speed, and it is only the most capable artists who can do it justice. For the present reproduction, the Victor assembled a most competent corps of singers, who were under the direction of the late Charles Gilibert, himself the most famous of Remendados.

Jose's voice being heard outside, Carmen pushes her companions from the room, and greeting him with joy, questions him about his two months in prison. She then tries her fascinations on the stolid soldier to induce him to join the band of smugglers. Carmen dances for the soldier while he watches her with fascinated gaze. Her efforts are useless, as he is reminded of his duty when he hears the bugle in the distance summoning him to quarters. "Then go, I hate you!" says Carmen, and mocks him, singing:

Ah, this is too mortifying!
All to please you, sir, I gaily sang and danced.
(Aside.) But now ta ra ta! he hears the trumpet call!
Ta ra ta ra! and then off he flies
Like a guest to a feast!

She is furious, and pitches at him his cap and sabre, and bids him begone.

Desperate at the thought of losing her forever, Don Jose shows her the flowers she threw him at their first meeting, and which he had preserved, then sings this lovely romance, beginning:

Andantino. (\text{\(J = 69\)}})

\[\text{\(\text{\(\text{La fleur que tu ma-vais je-te-e Dans ma pri-son m\text{'}\text{tait res-t\text{'}e} e\)}}\)}\]

This flower you gave to me, degraded 'Mid prison walls I've kept, tho' faded;
Thou' withered quite, the tender bloom
Both yet retain its sweet perfume.
Night and day in darkness abiding,
I the truth, Carmen, am confiding;
Its loved odor did I inhale,
And wildly called thee without avail.
My love itself I cursed and hated,
\[\text{\(* * * * * * * * * * * *)}\]

Then alone myself I detested,
And naught else this heart interested,
Naught else it felt but one desire,
One sole desire did it retain,
Carmen, beloved, to see thee once again!
O, Carmen, mine! here as thy slave, love binds me fast,
Carmen, I love thee!

From Schirmer score. Copy't G. Schirmer

The number might have been written expressly for Caruso, so well does it suit his voice and style. One can but marvel at the masterful ease of phrasing, and the warmth of vocal coloring imparted by the singer. The changing moods of the lover are here indicated with dramatic expression—the regret at the havoc Carmen has played with his life mingling with the devotion for her he still feels. This is a remarkable and memorable performance, the whole song being lighted up with that rich vocal beauty and artistic genius which belong only to a Caruso.

Other fine renditions, at varying prices, in both Italian and English, are also offered.

Carmen then paints the joys of the gypsies' life which might be Jose's, if he would desert his regiment and follow her.
Las bas dans la montagne (Away to Yonder Mountains)

The soldier listens with half-willing ears, his voice joining hers at the close, in a lovely duet passage.

CARMEN:
For roof, the sky—a wandering life;
For country, the whole world;
Thy will thy master;
And above all—most prized of all—
Liberty! freedom!
Up yonder, up yonder, if thou lov'st me,
To the mountains, together we'll go.

JOSE:
Carmen!
Wilt come with me?
Up yonder, up yonder, thus will we go
Away, if thou lov'st me, together!

However, in spite of Carmen's fascinations, Jose is about to return to his duty, when the appearance of his superior officer Zuniga, who orders him back, decides the matter. Don Jose resents the overbearing tone his captain uses and defies him. Zuniga is finally overpowered and bound by the gypsies, and the smugglers all depart on their expedition.

The retreat in the mountains is musically described by this pastoral intermezzo. A dreamy melody given to the flute, with a pizzicato accompaniment, is taken up by the other instruments in turn, the strings joining in the coda.

Andantino quasi allegretto.

This is one of the finest records made by the Herbert Orchestra, who have given an artistic and finished rendering of the interlude.
ACT III

SCENE—A Wild and Rocky Pass in the Mountains

As the curtain rises, the smugglers are seen entering their rocky lair. Here occurs the famous sextette, a portion of which is given in the "Gems from Carmen" (page 60).

The smugglers prepare to camp for the night. It is evident that Jose is already repenting of his folly, and that Carmen is tiring of her latest lover. After a quarrel with Jose, she joins Frasquita and Mercedes, who are telling fortunes with cards.

En vain pour eviter (Card Song)

By Lavin de Casas, Mezzo-Soprano (Piano acc.) (In Italian) *62617 10-inch, $0.75

Carmen tells her own fate by the cards, reading death, first for herself and then for her lover. In vain she shuffles and re-tries the result; the answer is ever the same.

This highly dramatic air, one of the most impressive numbers in Bizet’s opera, is effectively sung by Mme. de Casas.

The neighboring camp being ready, the smugglers retire, and the stage is once more deserted.

Into this strange and wild scene now enters Micaela, the peasant sweetheart of Don Jose, who has forgotten her in his fascination for the wayward Carmen. Micaela has braved the dangers of the road to the smugglers’ retreat, whither Don Jose has followed Carmen, to carry to the soldier a message from his dying mother. The innocent girl is frightened by the vast and lonely mountains, and in her aria appeals to Heaven to protect her, ingenuously confessing her love for Don Jose and her detestation of the woman who has led him away from his duty.

Micaela:
I try not to own that I tremble;
But I know I’m a coward, altho’ bold I appear.
Ah! how can I ever call up my courage,
While horror and dread chill my sad heart with fear?
Here, in this savage retreat, sad and weary am I,
Alone and sore afraid.
Ah! heav’n, to thee I humbly pray,
Protect thou me, and guide and aid!
I shall see the guilty creature,
Who by infernal arts doth sever
From his country, from his duty,
Him I loved—and shall love ever!
I may tremble at her beauty,
But her power affrights me not.
Strong, in my just cause confiding,
Heaven! I trust myself to thee.
Ah! to this poor heart give courage,
Protect! guide and aid now me!

The young girl, hearing a shot fired, runs into a cave in fright. Jose, who is guarding the smugglers’ effects, has seen a stranger and fires at him. It proves to be Escamillo, the toreador, who has come to join Carmen. He appears, examining his hat with ryeful gaze, as Jose’s bullet had gone through it. “Who are you?” says the latter. “I am Escamillo, toreador of Granada!” replies the bull fighter.

The duet which follows is given here by two famous artists of the Paris Opéra.

Je suis Escamillo (I am Escamillo!) By Léon Beyle, Tenor, and Hector Dufranne, Baritone
(Double-faced—See page 60) (In French) 62750 10-inch, $0.75

The two men compare notes, and learning that they are rivals, Jose challenges the other to a duel with knives, which is interrupted by the timely arrival of Carmen herself. This dialogue, with the fiery duet at the close, well depicts this exciting scene.

A popular rendition by Beyle and Dufranne, of the Opéra, is listed above.

Finale—“Mia tu sei” (You Command Me to Leave You) By Antonio Paoli, Tenor; Giuseppina Huguet, Soprano; Inez Salvador, and Francesco Cigada (In Italian) 92035 12-inch, $3.00

A dramatic scene between Carmen and Jose is interrupted by Micaela, who begs Jose to return to his mother; and Carmen, with fine scorn, echoes her request. Thus to leave his rival in possession of the field is too much for the soldier, who swears never to be parted from the gypsy until death.

Carmen (to Jose):
Go, and go quickly; stay not here;
This way of life is not for thee!

Jose (to Carmen):
To depart thou dost counsel me?

Carmen:
Yes, thou shouldst go—

Jose (fiercely):
Yes, that thou mayst follow
Another lover—the toreador!
No, Carmen, I will not depart!

Carmen (to Jose):
Be not deaf to my prayers;
Thy mother waits thee there.
The chain that binds thee, Jose
Death will break.

Jose (to Micaela):
Go from hence;
I cannot follow thee.

Micaela:
Mine thou art, accursed one!
And I will force thee to know
And submit to the fate
That both our lives unites!

The message from his dying mother, however, decides him; he will go, but vows to return. In this wild and tumultuous number the jealous anger of Jose gives rise to some highly dramatic singing, delivered with extreme intensity and power by Paoli, the tragic theme at the close being introduced with meaning effect. The Toreador chorus indicates the triumph of Escamillo in the gypsy’s attentions, and this with the orchestral close slowly sinking to rest brings the powerful act to a finish.
ACT IV
(A Square in Seville, with the walls of the Bull Ring shown at the back)

Prelude
By Victor Herbert's Orchestra
70066 12-inch, $1.25

The fourth act opens with a momentary brightness. Outside the Plaza de Toros, in Seville, an animated crowd awaits the procession about to enter the ring. This short movement is a quick bustling one, only the plaintive oboe solo indicating the tragedy which is soon to occur. The playing of this striking prelude is on the same artistic level which marks each of the renditions by this famous orchestra.

This scene, as the orange sellers, hawks of fans, ices and the rest, press their wares on the waiting crowd, is extremely gay, and affords welcome relief from the intensity of the drama. Escamillo, now enters, and all join in the refrain of the Toreador Song in his honor.

Se tu m'ami (If You Love Me)
By Margarete Matzenauer, Mezzo-Soprano; Pasquale Amato, Baritone; with Metropolitan Opera Chorus
(In Italian) 89061 12-inch, $4.00
By Inez Salvador, Mezzo-Soprano, and Francesco Cigada, Baritone
(Double-faced—See page 60) (In Italian) 62102 10-inch, .75

Escamillo takes farewell of Carmen before entering the arena. He promises to fight the better for her presence, and she, half conscious of what is coming, avows her readiness to die for him. This number is full of lovely melodies and one of the most beautiful records of the Carmen series.
As the procession passes on, the warning comes to Carmen that Jose is here, to which she replies that she fears him not.

Duetto e Finale (Duet and Finale)

By Maria Passeri, Mezzo-Soprano; Antonio Paoli, Tenor; and La Scala Chorus

92050 12-inch, $3.00

Jose now enters and makes a last appeal, which is dramatic in its intensity. It takes the form of a swinging melody to an insistent triplet accompaniment. To each request of her lover, Carmen adds her disdainful negative, reckless of the danger which threatens her.

Jose (in desperation):

Now thou refusest my prayers,
Inhuman girl! For thy sake am I lost!
And then to know thee shameless, infamous!
Laughing, in his arms, at my despair!
No, no! it shall not be, by Heaven!
Carmen, thou must be mine, mine only!

Carmen (proudly): No, no, never!

Jose: Ah! weary am I of threats.

Carmen: Cease then,—or let me pass!

Chorus (in bull ring): Victory! victory! Viva Escamillo!

Jose: Again I beseech thee, Carmen,
Wilt thou with me depart?

The selection begins with the brilliant and animated Prelude, the first part of which is given, including the refrain of the famous "Toreador Song." Then is heard (as a cornet solo) the quaint "Habanera," with its curiously varied rhythm, its chromatic melody and the changes from minor to major which are so effective. With the last note the full band takes up the rollicking chorus of street boys from Act I, and after a few measures there appears suddenly the weird strain from Act IV when Carmen hurls at Don Jose her last defiance.

The spirited introductory strain returns, closing the selection.

THE COMPOSER

Pietro Mascagni, son or a baker in Leghorn, was born December 7, 1863. Destined by his father to succeed him in business, the young man rebelled, and secretly entered the Cherubini Conservatory. He began composing at an early age, but none of his works attracted attention until 1890, when he entered a contest planned by Sonzogno, the Milan publisher. Securing a libretto based on a simple Sicilian tale by Verga, he composed the whole of this opera in eight days, producing a work full of dramatic fire and rich in Italian melody, and easily won the prize. Produced in Rome in 1890, it created a sensation, and in a short time has become one of the most popular of operas.

THE STORY

Turiddu, a young Sicilian peasant, returns from the war and finds his sweetheart, Lola, has wedded Alfio, a carter. For consolation he pays court to Santuzza, who loves him not wisely but too well. Tiring of her, he turns again to Lola, who seems to encourage him.

Prelude

By La Scala Orchestra *35104 12-inch, $1.25
By Vessella's Italian Band 31831 12-inch, 1.00

The Prelude takes the form of a fantasia on the principal themes of the opera. Mascagni's lovely melodies are played with exquisite tone and expression, while at the climaxes the entry of the brass is most artistically managed. This is band playing of a high order, and certainly the best record of the Prelude we have heard. The La Scala Orchestra record is also a most interesting one.

During the prelude Turiddu's voice is heard in the charming Siciliana, in which he tells of his love for Lola:

Siciliana (Thy Lips Like Crimson Berries)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor (Harp acc.) (In Italian) 87072 10-inch, $2.00
By Enrico Caruso, Tenor (Piano acc.) (In Italian) 81030 10-inch, 2.00
By George Hamlin, Tenor (Harp acc.) (In Italian) 64387 10-inch, 1.00
By Leo Slezak, Tenor (In German) 61202 10-inch, 1.00
By Carlo Caffetto, Tenor (Piano acc.) (In Italian) *62620 10-inch, .75

It is sung behind the scenes, before the rise of the curtain, making it peculiarly effective. At the close of the number Turiddu's voice is heard dying away in the distance. This decrescendo passage is exquisitely sung by Caruso. This delightful serenade, one of the most popular of the Caruso records, is almost the only bright spot in Mascagni's passionate and tragic operatic melodrama.

The best of the many translations (Schirmer Edition, copy't 1891) is given here.

Turiddu:
O Lola, with thy lips like crimson berries,
Eyes with the glow of love deepening in them,
Cheeks of the hue of wild, blossoming cherries,
Fortunate he who first finds favor to win them;

Yet tho' I died and found Heav'n on me beaming,
Wert thou not there to greet me, grief I should cherish!

Fine renditions in German by Slezak and in Italian by Hamlin and Caffetto are also listed.

SCENE—A Square in a Sicilian Village

After the Siciliana the chorus of villagers is heard, also behind the scenes, and during this chorus the curtain rises, showing a square in the village, with the church at one side and the cottage of Turiddu's mother on the other.

By New York Grand Opera Chorus  (In Italian)  64048  10-inch, $1.00
By La Scala Chorus  (In Italian)  *68218  12-inch, 1.25
This beautiful chorus is rendered here both by the famous organization of La Scala, Milan, and the New York Grand Opera Chorus.
It is Easter Day and crowds of villagers cross the stage and enter the church. Santuzza enters, and knocking at Lucia’s door, asks her if she has seen Turiddu. His mother replies that he is at Francofonte, but the jealous girl refuses to believe it, and suspects that he is watching for Lola.
The cracking of a whip and shouts of the villagers announce Alfio, who appears and sings a merry song.

By Renzo Minolfi, Baritone  (In Italian)  *45003  10-inch, 1.00
He is happy and free, his wife Lola loves him and guards his home while he is gone—this is the burden of his air.
The peasants disperse and Alfio is left with Lucia and Santuzza. When he says he has just seen Turiddu, Lucia is surprised, but at a gesture from Santuzza she keeps silent.
After Alfio has entered the church, the Easter music is heard within and all kneel and join in the singing.

This great number, given by La Scala Chorus, has been combined with the opening chorus noted above on one double-faced record.
All go into the church except Lucia and Santuzza, and the agitated girl now sings her touching romanza, beginning:

Then the thought of her rival, Lola, returns and she gives way to despair, throwing herself at the feet of the gentle mother of Turiddu, who is powerless to aid her and who can only pray for the wretched woman.

Santuzza:
Well do you know, good mother,
Ere to the war he departed
Turiddu plighted to Lola his troth,
Like a man true-hearted,
And then, finding her wedded
Loved me!—I loved him!—
She, coveting what was my only treasure—
Enticed him from me!
She and Turiddu love again!
I weep and I weep and I weep still!

Three fine renditions of this dramatic number, by three famous sopranos, are offered to music lovers.

Lucia tries to comfort her and passes into the church just as Turiddu appears. He asks Santuzza why she does not go to mass. She says she cannot, and accuses him of treachery, which puts him in a rage, and he tells her brutally that she is now nothing to him.

After the storm and passion of the first scene, this lovely number comes as a blessed relief. The curtain does not fall during the playing of the Intermezzo, although the stage is empty.

PART II

A casa, a casa (Now Homeward)
By La Scala Chorus
(The service being over, the people now come from the church, and Turiddu in a reckless mood invites the crowd to drink with him, and sings his spirited Brindisi.)

Brindisi (Drinking Song)
By Enrico Caruso, Tenor (In Italian)
By George Hamlin, Tenor (In Italian)

In striking contrast to the prevailing tragic tone of Mascagni's opera comes this merry drinking song, which Turiddu sings as gaily as if he had not a care in the world, although at that moment the culminating tragedy of the duel was close at hand. Turiddu calls to the crowd about the inn:

then sings the Brindisi, which has a most fascinating swing:

Turiddu:
Hail the red wine richly flowing,
In the beaker, sparkling, glowing,
Like young love, with smiles bestowing,
Now our holiday 'twill bless.

Alfio now enters, and when Turiddu offers him a cup refuses, saying:
Thank you! Poison I might be drinking.

Turiddu throws out the wine, saying carelessly:
Very well! suit your pleasure!

The seriousness of this scene is not lost on the peasants, who now leave the young men together. The challenge is quickly given and accepted after the Sicilian fashion, Turiddu viciously biting Alfio's ear, and they arrange to meet in the garden.

Turiddu now calls his mother from the cottage, and asks for her blessing, bidding her, if he does not return, to be a mother to Santuzza.

Addio alla madre (Turiddu's Farewell to His Mother)
By Riccardo Martin, Tenor (In Italian)
By Gennaro de Tura, Tenor (In Italian)
By G. Ciccolini, Tenor (In Italian)
By Giorgio Malesci, Tenor (Piano acc.)

Turiddu (singing): Mother!
Enter Lucia.)
Exciting surely that wine was,
I must have taken
Too many cups
While we were drinking!
For a stroll I am going,
But first, I pray you,
Give your son your blessing
As when I left you
To become a soldier!
If I return not, you must not falter

To Santuzza be a mother!
I have sworn to shield her
And lead her to the altar.

Lucia:
Why speakest thou so strangely?
My son, oh, tell me?

Turiddu (nonchalantly):
Oh, nothing! the wine
Has filled my brain with vapors!
O pray that God forgive me!
One kiss, dear mother!
And yet another! (He rushes off.)

Finale to the Opera
By Clara Joanna, Soprano; Sra. Rumbelli, Mezzo-Soprano; and Chorus (In Italian)

Lucia is distressed and bewildered, and calls after him despairingly. Confused cries are now heard and a woman screams "Turiddu is murdered!" Santuzza and Lucia sink down senseless, and the curtain slowly falls.

A REHEARSAL OF CAVALIERIA AT THE METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE, NEW YORK
LES CLOCHES DE CORNEVILLE

THE CHIMES OF NORMANDY

COMIC OPERA IN THREE ACTS

Text by Clairville and Gabet; music by Robert Planquette. First produced at the Folies Dramatiques, Paris, April 19, 1877. First N.Y. production at the 5th Avenue Theatre, 1877.

Characters

HENRI, the Marquis of Valleroi .................. Baritone
GRENICHEUX, a young villager ................ Tenor
GASPARD, a miser ................................ Bass
SERPOLETTE, the good-for-nothing .............. Soprano
GERMAINE, the lost Marchioness ............... Mezzo-Soprano
SHERIFF ......................................... Bass

Time and Place: Normandy; time of Louis XV.

The Chimes of Normandy abounds in striking numbers, and the music is full of gayety and French grace. It has had no less than six thousand performances, a testimony to its enduring place in popular appreciation.

The opera opens in an old Norman village, where a fair is in progress. Henri, the Marquis of Valleroi, has just returned to his native town after an absence of many years. The village gossips are discussing with vehemence scandals about Serpolette, the village good-for-nothing, who arrives just in time to vindicate herself by turning the tables on her traducers. Gaspard, the miser, has a plan for marrying his niece, Germaine, to the sheriff, but the young girl objects, telling him that if she must wed she feels it her duty to marry Gericheux, a young villager, in gratitude for his saving her life. To escape the marriage, which is distasteful to both Germaine and Gericheux, and to fly from the vengeance of Gaspard and the sheriff, she and Gericheux take advantage of the privileges of fair time and become servants of the Marquis.

In the second act the ghosts are reported to be roaming the Castle of Valleroi. The Marquis does not credit these stories and soon discovers it is only old Gaspard, the miser, who, when found out, goes crazy through fear of losing the treasures he has concealed there. In the last act the castle is restored to its former splendor and the Marquis is giving a fête to which he invites all the villagers, including the crazy Gaspard. Serpolette is there as a fine lady with Gericheux as her factotum. After a love scene between the Marquis and Germaine, it is discovered that the latter is the rightful heiress and true claimant to the title of Marchioness. The story comes to a fitting conclusion with the betrothal of the Marquis and Germaine, over whom the bells of Corneville ring out sweetly and gladly to tell the happy news.

The Victor offers three band records of the principal airs, and an unusually effective selection of five of the most popular numbers in the opera by the Victor Light Opera Company.

The Composer

No one today doubts the genius of Berlioz, and critics are almost unanimous in praising his originality, his spontaneous force and immense creative power. Le Damnation de Faust, his best known work, originally written as an oratorio, but which has since been adapted for the stage, was first produced in 1846 and met with a cold reception. Ten years after his death, however, what a change began! A Berlioz memorial in Paris, at the Hippodrome, where thousands were turned away; Berlioz monuments erected in Grenoble and other cities of France; and finally, the production of Damnation of Faust as an opera at Monte Carlo in 1903, amid scenes of the wildest enthusiasm.

68
In his “Faust” Berlioz has given us a musical legend which has all the picturesqueness of the original work.

Whatever severe critics may say of its merits in the highest artistic sense, it is nevertheless a wonderful work. Strange eccentricities and rare beauties are found side by side; even the wild orgie of fiends called “Pandemonium,” which almost transgresses the license of genius, must be admired for its astounding orchestral effects. On the other hand, there are melodies of purest beauty, such as the numbers for Marguerite. However, the most striking numbers in the opera are those written by Berlioz for Mephistopheles, three of which have been most effectively rendered for the Victor by Plançon.

THE OPERA

Berlioz, disregarding Goethe’s poem, located the opening scene on a plain in Hungary simply to excuse the interpolation of the Rakoczy March. We quote Berlioz himself here: “The march on the Hungarian Rakoczy theme, written one night at Vienna, made such a sensation at Pesth that I introduced it into my Faust score, taking the liberty of putting my hero in Hungary and making him witness the passage of a Hungarian troop across the plain where he is wandering in reverie.” But Raoul Gunsbourg, who adapted the cantata for the stage, changed the first scene to a room with open windows showing the peasants dancing and the military passing by to the strains of the Hungarian March. Here Faust soliloquizes on the vanity of all things, while the people make merry outside, and the march of the soldiers makes an inspiring finish to the scene.

Hungarian (Rakoczy) March

By Sousa’s Band 31424 12-in., 1.00

This is Berlioz’s treatment of the famous “Rakoczy March,” known as a national Hungarian melody for a hundred years. Its stirring measures so fascinated the composer that, contrary to his original intention, he laid the scene of his “Faust” legend in Hungary in order that he might make use of this wild and pulse-quickening melody. His treatment of it is brilliant in the extreme, and it remains one of the most effective portions of his “Faust.”

In this connection it is interesting to remember that Liszt, although a warm friend of Berlioz, considered himself aggrieved and wrote to Mme. Tardieu in 1882: “My transcription of the Rakoczy March  is twice as long as the well-known version of Berlioz, and it was written before his. Delicate sentiments of friendship for the illustrious Frenchman induced me to withhold it from publication until after his death.  In writing it he made use of one of my earlier transcriptions, particularly in the harmony.”

Scene II shows Faust alone in his study, as in the Gounod version. He is about to take poison, when the strains of the Easter hymn come from the adjoining church and arrest his purpose. Mephistopheles then appears and suggests that they go forth and see the world together, to which Faust consents.

In the third scene Faust and Mephistopheles go to a beer cellar in Leipzig, where students and soldiers are carousing. Brander sings his song of the rat, which as in the Gounod opera, meets with but ironical praise from Mephistopheles, and he volunteers his famous "Romance of the Flea," a curiosity of music as effective as it is difficult to render.

Chanson de la puce (Song of the Flea)
By Pol Plançon, Bass

(In French) 81087 10-inch, $2.00

Gounod's Mephistopheles is mild and innocent by the side of the strange utterances of the Devil as portrayed by Berlioz. This is one of the most interesting numbers in the work, for Berlioz has described, by means of clever forms in the accompaniment, the skipping of the flea in various directions. The words are most fantastic—

Once a king, be it noted, had a fine and lusty flea,
And on this flea he doted, cherish'd him tenderly,
So he sent for his tailor, and to the tailor spake:
"Please to measure this youngster, and coat and breeches make!"

In velvet and in satin
He now was duly drest,
Had jewels rare his hat in,
And medals deck'd his breast!

Faust dislikes the scene, and the two vanish from the gaze of the astonished students amid a fiery glow.

Voici des roses ('Mid Banks of Roses)
By Mattio Battistini, Baritone

(In Italian) 92023 12-inch, $3.00

We next discover Faust asleep in a lonely forest on the banks of the Elbe, where the demon murmurs a softly penetrating melody into his ear, lulling him to slumber with these seductive words—

'Mid banks of roses, softly the light reposes,
On this fair, fragrant bed, rest, O Faust, rest thy head—
Here slumber, while lovely visions haunt thy dream
Of radiant forms, rare lips and eyes that fondly beam!

while the gnomes and sylphs dance through his dreams, and the vision of Marguerite is seen for the first time.

The next scene corresponds to the Garden Scene of Gounod, and shows a room in Marguerite's cottage.
The demon now summons the will-o'-the-wisps in this evocation:

The sprites come flying to Marguerite's door to aid in her enchantment, and the demon continues:

Ye spirits of caprice and of evil, conspire
To enchant and subdue, and win a maiden soul.
Now dance, ye sons of Evil, dance in the name of the devil,
Will-o'-the-wisp and gnome, dance, or away you go!

Then follows the beautiful dance of the will-o'-the-wisps, after which Mephistopheles sings—

"To this lute, I'll sing a serenade . . .
One that shall please the lady . . .
It is moral, her tastes to suit!"

Serenade—Mephistopheles
By Pol Plançon, Bass

(In French) 81034 10-inch, $2.00

Mephistopheles then warbles in his scoffing voice this mocking serenade:

in the accompaniment of which Berlioz has reproduced the peculiar effect of the guitar by pizzicato crescendos for strings.
Mephistopheles:
Dear Katherine, why to the door of thy lover,
Drawest thou nigh? Why there timidly hover? why art there?
Oh, sweet maiden, beware; come away do not enter;
It were folly to venture, Refrain, nor enter there!
Ah, heed thee well, fair lass,
Lest thy lover betray thee; Then good night, alas!
From ill-hap what shall stay thee?
But let thy lover prove the truth of his advances;
When the ring brightly glances,
Ah! then only, believe his love!

Berlioz's Mephistopheles is a much more sardonic and less gentlemanly devil than the one we are accustomed to see in Gounod's opera. Plançon interprets this difficult character admirably, and delivers this sneering serenade with great effectiveness.

While the sprites dance Marguerite apparently sleeps, but soon comes from the house in a kind of trance. She tries to enter the church, but the influence of Mephistopheles prevents, and she returns to the house and falls into the arms of Faust.

The last act contains four scenes. Scene I shows a moonlit room where the unhappy Marguerite sings her lament. This changes to a rocky pass where Mephistopheles informs Faust that Marguerite is about to be executed for the murder of her mother. Faust demands that she be saved, but is first required by Mephistopheles to sign the fatal contract which pledges his soul to the Devil. Summoning the infernal steeds Vortex and Giaour, the wild Ride to Hell commences, shown by a striking moving panorama, while at the close the angels are seen hovering above the town to rescue the soul of the pardoned Marguerite.

MARIE, Vivandière of the 21st ....................................... Soprano
MARCHIONESS OF BERKENFIELD ...................................... Mezzo-Soprano

The scene is laid in the Swiss Tyrol.

Donizetti’s Daughter is a brilliant little opera, with its rollicking songs, its drums, its vivacious heroine and its comic old Corporal.

At the beginning of the opera Marie is a beautiful girl of 17, who had been found on the battlefield as an infant, and brought up by Sulpizio as the daughter of the regiment. Marie is loved by Tonio, a young peasant, who had saved her life in the Alps and who follows the regiment to be near her. The young girl returns his affection, and they decide to appeal to Sulpizio.

In asking for Marie’s hand in marriage Tonio’s suit is brought before the regiment, which decides that he may have the Vivandière providing he joins the army, which he promptly does. Sulpizio meets the Marchioness of Berkenfield and gives her a letter which he had found addressed to her at the time the baby Marie was found on the battlefield. The Marchioness, who had married a French army captain far beneath her own rank, immediately recognizes the young girl as her daughter. The marriage had been a secret one and the child was confined to her father’s care at her birth. Not wishing to acknowledge this marriage even now, the Marchioness declares Marie to be her niece, and dismisses Tonio as a totally unfit person to wed a high-born maiden. Marie assumes her proper position in society, her “aunt” selecting a wealthy Count as a future husband for her. However, in the midst of all her beautiful surroundings Marie continues to long for her sweetheart Tonio. Her mother, still pretending to be her aunt, endeavors to persuade her to give up Tonio and marry the Count, but Marie flatly refuses. In desperation the Marchioness reveals herself as the girl’s own mother, and the maiden then agrees to accede to her wishes and marry the Count. Touched by Marie’s filial devotion, the Marchioness consents to allow her to marry Tonio, who in the meantime, through rapid promotion, has reached a high rank in the French army under Napoleon.

The Victor offers three records from this charming opera; the first being the tuneful Per viver vicino, the song of the lover Tonio. Mr. McCormack gives a spirited performance of this delightful Romanza. Two splendid band records are also offered—a Pryor’s Band rendition of the gay and spirited Overture and a Vessella Band record of the principal airs in the opera.

Place: Breton village of Ploermel.

Although the name of Meyerbeer is usually associated with Robert le Diable, Prophète and Huguenots, his opera, Pardon de Ploermel (afterwards revised and renamed Dinorah), was at one time a favorite work with opera-lovers.

The revival of Meyerbeer’s sparkling opera during the last Manhattan season was most welcome, not only for its tunefulness, but because it was an ideal medium for the exhibition of Mme. Tetrazzini’s marvelous gifts.

Old opera-goers in America will remember the productions of the past—that arranged for Marie Van Zandt in 1892; Patti’s famous performance a dozen years before; and the fine impersonations of Gerster, di Murska and Marimon. But it is safe to say that no exponent of the part of the wandering Breton shepherdess has ever excelled Mme. Tetrazzini in the rôle.

The plot is utterly absurd—its demented goat-girl, seeking a runaway lover; the lover himself, who contrary to operatic precedent is a baritone, and who spends a year chasing an imaginary treasure; a weak-kneed bag-piper. These are the principal characters.

But in the music Meyerbeer has atoned for the triviality of the libretto, and the audience listens to the delightful melodies and pays little attention to the plot.

The action is laid in Brittany. Dinorah, a maiden of the village of Ploermel, is about to be wedded to Hoël, a goat-herd, when a storm destroys the house of the bride’s father. Hoël resolves to rebuild it, and goes off to seek treasure in a haunted region, while Dinorah, thinking herself deserted, loses her reason, and wanders through the country with her faithful goat, seeking the absent Hoël.

ACT I

As the curtain rises, Dinorah enters in her bridal dress, seeking her goat, and finding the animal asleep, sings this lullaby to him. So lovely an air is worthy of a better object.

Si, carina caprettina (Yes, My Beloved One)

By Giuseppina Huguet, Soprano

Mme. Huguet has sung this pretty air with charming fluency, and the record is one of the most attractive in her list. The translation follows:

Slumber, darling, sweetly slumber,
Sleep, my belov’d one, sleep!
Soft the evening breeze is playing,
Neath the cooling shadows here
Flows a streamlet, fresh and clear,
Swift, among the flowers straying,
Alas! six days has she been away,
Nor yet returns!

Perchance she has wandered on the hills
Amid the thorns!
Ah! wert thou to be seized by the wolf—fear not!
I will be there to defend thee—fear not!
Yes, darling sleep in peace,
Sweet little birds your warbling cease,
My beauteous one must sleep,
Awake her not! Yet softer still!

Corentino, a bag-piper, enters and is terrified at the sight of Dinorah, believing her to be an evil fairy about whom he had heard, who causes the runaway traveler to dance till he dies. Dinorah, in a spirit of mischief, makes him dance until he is exhausted, and runs away laughing.

Hoël enters, still seeking the treasure, and confides in Corentino, telling him that the wizard with whom he had lived for a year had instructed him to seek for a white goat which would guide him to the gold. The bell of Dinorah's goat is heard, and Hoël pursues it, dragging with him the terrified Corentino.

ACT II

The second act begins with the famous shadow dance, for which Meyerbeer has furnished some most beautiful music. Dinorah enters, and seeing her shadow in the moonlight, imagines it is a friend and sings and dances to it.

Ombra leggiera (Shadow Song)

By Luisa Tetrazzini, Soprano 88298 12-inch. $3.00
By Maria Galvany, Soprano 88222 12-inch. 3.00

| Light flitting shadow, companion gay | Go not away! |
| Play here beside me, dark fears betide me | Ah! go not away, go not away! |
| When thou dost go far from me! | Each coming morn I thee would find, |
| Ah! go not away, go not away! | Ah prithee stay and dance with me! |
| If thou wilt stay, nor go away, | Thou thus shalt hear me sing. |
| Thou thus shalt hear me sing. | Know'st thou not that Hoël loves me? |
| Our two hearts to unite! | That as his bride he claims me! |

(A cloud passes over the moon—the shadow disappears.)

This dance is accompanied by a waltz, which is full of the most brilliant vocal effects, including a florid cadenza for voice and flute, as in Lucia.

The act closes with the rescue of Dinorah by Hoël when the bridge, on which she was crossing a ravine, gives away.

ACT III

Act III opens with the famous "Hunter’s Song," long a favorite concert number.

Chant du Chasseur (Hunter’s Song)

By Pol Plançon, Bass (Piano acc.)

(In French) 81065 10-inch. $2.00

On, on to the hunt!
To follow the trace of beast or bird.
The day is awake,
The mist from the lake
Rising, passes over,

The fresh morning breeze
Plays light in the trees,
Like a young, a young and happy lover!
Hunting is jolly, when night is over.

Hoël enters, bearing the form of Dinorah, who is still senseless. Thinking her dead, he bitterly reproaches himself in the great air, Sei vendicata

Hoël:
'Twas on this self-same spot—a year ago
When from the tempest an asylum my Dinorah sought:
Within these arms I pressed her: and now!
Dead!—ah! heaven, I'll not believe it yet!
Look up again, dear angel, thy pardon I implore!

(He anxiously watches Dinorah, who gradually recovers.)
Great heaven! my pray'r hath risen unto thee!
Yes! she breathes again: her eyes she opens!
But why thus fixedly they gaze upon me?
O heaven, I had forgotten
That grief of reason had bereft her!

Dinorah now opens her eyes and recognizes Hoël, her reason having been restored by the shock. The reunited lovers go to the village, are greeted by their friends, and the curtain falls on preparations for the wedding.
DON CARLOS

(Don Kahr'-los)

OPERA IN FOUR ACTS

Libretto by Mêry and Du Locle; music by Verdi. First produced at Paris, March 11, 1867; in London, at Her Majesty's Theatre, June 4, 1867.

The libretto is based on Schiller's drama of Don Carlos, and tells of the erratic and morbid son of Philip II of Spain, who was engaged to Elizabeth of France, but subsequently became her stepson. The conduct of Don Carlos finally became so scandalous that his father placed him under arrest and confined him in the Madrid prison, where he died in 1568, at the age of twenty-three.

The same plot had previously been used by Bona, Milan, 1847; Costa, London, 1844; Moscuzza, Naples, 1862; and also by Ferrari.

Don Carlos is not one of Verdi's popular operas, but the music is dramatic, effective and full of genuine Italian warmth and passion. Schiller's drama has been much changed, and made to conform to the dramatic requirements of the stage and the music.
Don Carlos, son of Philip II of Spain, is in love with Elizabeth of Valois, daughter of the French King, Henry II. For state reasons, however, Henry has arranged that his daughter shall marry King Philip, and accordingly the royal ceremony takes place. The passion which Carlos feels for his young stepmother is as intense as ever, and he confides in Rodrigo, Marquis of Posa, who entreats the Prince to leave the Spanish Court in the hope that he will forget his love. Carlos begs the Queen to obtain Philip's permission for him to join the Flemings in their struggle against the cruelties of the Spaniards. Time seems to have but strengthened the mutual affection of the pair, and the Queen is unable to conceal from Carlos the fact that her love for him is greater than ever.

Princess Eboli, who is herself in love with Carlos, learns of the Queen's affection for the Prince. Her jealousy is aroused and she tells all to Philip. This maddens the King, who is already angry with his son for his sympathy with the Flemings, and, on the advice of the Grand Inquisitor, Carlos is thrown into prison. Rodrigo visits the Prince there, and is shot by friends of the King, who suspect him of helping the Flemings. Carlos is freed and goes to St. Just Monastery to keep a tryst with Elizabeth. The King surprises them there, and his anger being once more aroused, he hands over Carlos to the Officers of the Inquisition, who bear him away to his death as the curtain falls.

Scene and Period: Seville, in the middle of the seventeenth century.

Mozart's Don Giovanni was written in 1787 and produced during the same year at Prague. Da Ponte, the librettist, was a Viennese Court dramatist, who had also written Le Nozze di Figaro. The plot of the opera was probably founded upon a play entitled El Burlador de Sevilla y Contrada de piedra, attributed to Tirso de Molina, a Spanish monk and prior of a monastery at Madrid. This had also served as a basis for numerous other "Don Juan" plays and operas by Fabrizzi, Gardi, Raimondi, Carnicer and latterly Dargomyjsky, the Russian composer.

ACT I

SCENE I—The Courtyard of the Commandant’s Palace at Seville. It is Night

The wicked Don Giovanni, ever pursuing his gay conquests, attempts to enter Donna Anna's apartments. She cries for help and he tries to escape, but is pursued by the angry girl, who endeavors to penetrate his disguise. Her father comes to the rescue and is mortally wounded by the Don, who makes his escape, followed by Leporello, his servant. Donna Anna is overcome with grief, and charges her betrothed, Don Octavio, to avenge her father’s death.

SCENE II—An Inn in a Deserted Spot Outside Seville

Don Giovanni and Leporello enter and conceal themselves as a lady approaches in a carriage. Hoping for a new conquest, the Don comes forward, hat in hand, but is surprised to find that it is Donna Elvira, a young woman whom he has lately deceived and deserted. She denounces him for his baseness and he makes his escape, leaving Leporello to explain as best he can. Leporello rather enjoys the situation, produces his diary and adds to the lady's anger by reading a list of the mistresses of the Don. This list is recited by Leporello in the famous Il catalogo.

Viscount—'Ev'ry kind of 'eesee.
Womenfolk of all conditions,
Ev'ry form and ev'ry state!

Journet's Leporello is a unique performance of its kind, and his characterization always stands forth as an admirable foil to the polished villainies of the suave and distinguished Don. This great buffo number, usually called the Catalogue Song, is full of the broadest humor, and is given by this artist with all the sly humor, gaiety, irony and sentiment which it requires.

Donna Elvira is horrified and drives off, swearing vengeance.

SCENE III—In the Suburbs of Seville. Don Giovanni's Palace Visible on the Right

A rustic wedding party comprising Zerlina, Masetto and a company of peasants are enjoying an outing. Don Giovanni and Leporello appear, and the Don is charmed at the sight of so much youthful beauty. He bids Leporello conduct the party to his palace and give them refreshments, contriving, however, to detain Zerlina. Masetto protests, but the Don points significantly to his sword and the bridegroom follows the peasants.

The Don then proceeds to flatter the young girl and tells her she is too beautiful for such a clown as Masetto. She is impressed and coquettes with him in the melodic duet, La ci darem, the witty phrases and delicate harmonies of which make it one of the gems of Mozart's opera.

(In Italian) 92024 12-inch, 3.00
This celebrated number, which has been sung by many famous artists during the one hundred and twenty years since its first hearing, is one of the best examples of the many sparkling concerted numbers which Mozart has written. Always interesting, it is wholly delightful when sung by such artists as those who have rendered it for the Victor. Not less than four versions, by famous exponents of the characters of Zerlina and Don Giovanni, are presented here.

Don Giovanni:
Nay, bid me not resign, love, coldly the hand
I press,
Oh! say thou wilt be mine, love, breathe but that one word "yes."

Zerlina:
I would and yet I would not, I feel my heart misgive, Shouldst thou prove false, I could not, become thy scorn and live.

Don Giovanni:
Come then, oh come then, dearest.

Zerlina:
Yet should thy fondness alter.

Don Giovanni:
Nay, love, in vain thou fearest.

Both:
Yes, hand and heart uniting, each other's cause requiting.
Our joy no bounds shall know!

Miss Farrar's Zerlina is a dainty and fascinating character, and she sings the music brilliantly. It is hardly necessary to say anything about Scotti's Don Giovanni, as it is quite familiar to opera-goers, ranking among his best impersonations. The rendition by Mme. Eames and Mr. de Gogorza is a most delightful one, while two other records by famous European artists are also offered.

Giovanni is about to lead Zerlina away, when Donna Elvira, who has been watching, rescues the young girl and carries her off, to the chagrin of the Don. Donna Anna now enters with Octavio, who asks the help of his friend Don Giovanni in tracing the murderer of Donna Anna's father. The Don assuages them of his devotion, and goes to his palace, while Donna Anna tells her lover that she recognizes by his voice that Don Giovanni is the one who slew her father. They depart, and Leporello and the Don enter. The servant tells his master that when Donna Elvira and Zerlina arrived at the palace, and Elvira attempted to tell the peasants the truth about the Don, he led her gently outside the gate and then locked it. He is complimented by his master, who bids him prepare for the feast of the evening. Left alone, the gay Don sings his brilliant Drinking Song, famous in every land.

The scene changes to Don Giovanni's garden. Zerlina is endeavoring to make her peace with Masetto, but he is sulky. She then sings her lovely Batti, batti.

Batti, batti, o bel Masetto (Scold Me, dear Masetto)

By Marcella Sembrich, Soprano
(In Italian) 88026 12-inch. $3.00

This gentle number is in striking contrast to the brilliant writing in the lighter bits of Zerlina's music.

Chide me, dear Masetto,
Chide Zerlina at your will;
Like the patient lamb I'll suffer,
Merk and mute and loving still,
Ah! I see, love, you're relenting,
Pardon, kneeling, I implore!

Abott and Renaud as Zerlina and Don Giovanni

Night and day, to thee, devoted,
Here I vow to err no more.
Masetto is only half appeased, but goes in to dance with his bride. Donna Anna, Donna Elvira and Don Octavio, disguised and masked, enter and sing a trio, in which they pledge themselves to have revenge on the traitor.

The scene changes to the interior of the palace, where the ball is in progress. Don Giovanni continues his efforts to get Zerlina away from her jealous and watchful lover, and finally succeeds, but Zerlina calls for help and Masetto and the three conspirators rush to her assistance. They denounce Don Giovanni, who defies them with drawn sword, and makes his escape from the palace.

ACT II

SCENE I—A Square in Seville. Donna Elvira’s Residence on the Left. It is a Moonlight Night

Don Giovanni, followed by his servant, enters, wrapped in a mantle and carrying a mandolin. He has heard of a pretty servant whom Donna Elvira possesses, and is plotting to get the mistress out of the way. As Elvira sits at her window, he addresses her, pretending to be repentant, but when she comes out he pushes Leporello forward to impersonate him. While they are conversing, the Don makes a great outcry and the pair run off in fright. The coast clear, the Don sings his famous Serenade to the fair waiting maid.

Don Giovanni:
Ope, ope thy casement, dearest,
Thyself one moment show;
Oh, if my prayr’st thou hearest,
Wave but that arm of snow.
Canst thou my ceaseless sighing
With cold indif’rence greet?
Ah! wouldst thou see me dying
Despairing, at thy feet?
Thy lip outvies Hymettian-bonied bowers;
Virtue worthy an angel, thy heart doth cherish;
Thy sigh were balm amid a heav’n of flowers;
O, for one kiss, this soul would perish!

Ruffo’s impersonation of Don Giovanni is admirable in every respect. He is the profligate nobleman and irresistible wooer to the life, and sings the difficult score with ease. Scotti’s rendition of this famous serenade is given by the baritone with the grace and ease which never fail him, while two lower priced records are also offered.

His amours are rudely interrupted by Masetto, who appears with a company of villagers, all armed with muskets, seeking the villain. The Don, pretending to be Leporello, offers to put them on the right track. Then follows a series of amusing situations, ending with the capture of the supposed Don by the three conspirators, but it proves to be Leporello, who takes advantage of the situation to make his escape.

* Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED DON GIOVANNI RECORDS, page 81.
The next scene shows the Cathedral Square, with the statue of the murdered Commandant in the centre. The Don and Leporello enter, and are discussing the events of the evening, when the statue speaks to them. Leporello is terrified, but the Don defies all spirits and boldly invites the statue to supper.

The scene changes to the banquet hall in the palace of the Don. In the midst of the festivities a loud knocking is heard. The guests flee in terror, the lights go out, and the gigantic figure of the Commandant appears at the door. Leporello cowers in terror under the table, but Don Giovanni is defiant until the ghost seizes his hand, when he feels for the first time a terrible fear. The statue sinks, flames appear on all sides, and demons rise and seize the guilty libertine.

Le Donne Curiose is a genuine comedy. The plot is very simple, and deals with the scheming of Beatrice, Rosaura, Eleanora and Colombina to gain entrance to the Friendship Clubhouse, of which their husbands and lovers are members. Over the door of the club may be seen the motto, "No Women Admitted." Each woman has her own theory as to the doings behind closed doors, and they seek in various ways to gain an entrance. In reality the men are enjoying themselves with simple masculine pleasures, and chuckling over the intense curiosity of their wives and sweethearts.

With the help of Colombina and Arlecchino, and by luring the keys from the pocket of one of the members, the ladies finally succeed in making an entrance within the sacred walls, and are surprised to find the men enjoying themselves harmlessly at dinner. On being discovered by the husbands they are forgiven, and the evening ends happily with a merry dance.

The Victor offers two interesting airs from Act II. The first, Tutta per te mio bene, is sung by Rosaura as Beatrice and Colombina go off together to try to effect an entrance into the Club, and the second is the love duet of Rosaura and Florindo, sung after she has induced him to give her the keys.

Scene and Period: Rome; the beginning of the nineteenth century.

This brightest of genuine lyric comedies always appeals to that class of opera-goers who find the present-day comic opera or musical comedy to be cheap, gaudy and lacking in genuine humor. Don Pasquale is pure entertainment, nothing else, the true spirit of comedy being found in the music as well as the plot; and both are delightful when the opera is presented by such artists as the Victor has assembled for this series.
ACT 1

SCENE—A Room in Don Pasquale’s House

The Don is eagerly awaiting the arrival of Dr. Malatesta, who has promised to obtain for him a young and lovely bride.

Son nov’ore (‘Tis Nine O’Clock!)

By Antonio Pini-Corsi, Baritone, and Ernesto Badini, Baritone

(In Italian) *68273 12-inch, $1.25

The Doctor enters, declares he has found the bride, and proceeds to describe the charmer. The Don is overjoyed, and insists on seeing the lady at once. When the Doctor leaves, Pasquale gives vent to his feelings in an amusing air.

Un foco insolito (A Fire All Unfelt Before)

By Antonio Pini-Corsi, Baritone, and Ernesto Badini, Baritone

(In Italian) *62104 10-inch, $0.75

His nephew enters, and is again urged by his uncle to give up Norina, whom the uncle calls a vain, coquettish widow. Ernesto refuses, and Don Pasquale announces his intention of marrying and disinheriting his nephew. The young man, at first incredulous, is finally convinced that his uncle is in earnest and gives way to despair, beginning his first air:

Sogno soave e casto (Fond Dream of Love)

By Giuseppe Acerbi, Tenor

(In Italian) *62624 10-inch, $0.75

Before leaving his uncle, Ernesto begs him to consult Dr. Malatesta for advice, but Don Pasquale says it was the Doctor himself who proposed the plan and offered his own sister as the happy bride. Ernesto is astonished to hear that the Doctor, who he thought was his friend, had deserted him.

SCENE II—A Room in Norina’s House

Norina is reading a romance, and at the beginning of her air quotes from the book:

Quel guardo (Glances so Soft)

By Giusepina Huguet, Soprano

(In Italian) *68272 12-inch, $1.25

Cavatina—So anch’io la virtù magica (I, Too, Thy Magic Powers Know)

By Amelia Pollini, Soprano

(In Italian) *62103 10-inch, $0.75

She then declares that she too knows the value of a glance and smile.

Norina:

I, too, thy magic virtues know,
Of glance well tim’d and tender,
A gentle smile, born to beguile,
I know—an old offender!
A hidden tear, a languor near,

I know the mode, oh, dear,
Of love’s bewitching wiles,
His facile arts and guiles...
To lure with wanton smiles,
I know the modes, oh, dear!

*Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED DON PASQUALE RECORDS, page 90.
A servant gives her a letter from Ernesto, just as the Doctor enters and informs her that he has conceived a scheme to force her lover's guardian to consent to the marriage. Norina declares she will have nothing to do with it, bidding him to read Ernesto's despairing letter, in which the young man tells her he is disinherit and will leave Rome, bidding her a last farewell.

The Doctor soothes her, telling her he will induce Ernesto to remain, and then reveals the details of the plot against Don Pasquale, in which he proposes to play on the vanity of the old bachelor, by pretending to find him a young and lovely wife. They decide that Norina shall play the part of this girl, and go through a mock marriage with Don Pasquale. Norina is delighted and begins to rehearse her new rôle. This takes the form of a charming duet, which ends the first act and which is always greatly admired. Two records of this sprightly duet, at widely varying prices, are cataloged here.

Pronta io son (My Part I'll Play)

By Marcella Sembrich, Soprano, and Antonio Scotti, Baritone

(In Italian) 89002 12-inch, $4.00

By Giuseppina Huguet, Soprano, and Ernesto Badini, Baritone

(In Italian) *68272 12-inch, 1.25

Doctor:
Bravo, bravo, capital!
It can't be better—all goes well!

Norina:
Head turned aside—"Oh fie! oh fie!"

Doctor:
Pursed-up mouth—"Ashamed am I."

Norina:
"I'm quite confus'd, my thoughts take wing—"

Doctor:
Oh, clever creature! Just the thing!

Both:
Of this old fool, all sense who spurn'd:
This time the head will be quite turn'd!

The scene is continued in another sprightly duet, which closes the act.

Vado corro (Haste We!)

By Giuseppina Huguet and Ernesto Badini

(Italian) *62097 10-inch, $0.75

Act II

Scene—A Richly Furnished Hall in Don Pasquale's House

Don Pasquale, in the most youthful of wedding garments, enters and struts up and down, admiring himself, until the Doctor arrives with Norina, who is closely veiled. She pretends to be shrinking and frightened, and the Doctor, beginning a delightfully humorous trio, the first of the concerted numbers in this act, begs her to have courage.

The pretended notary now arrives, and another comical scene ensues as the mock ceremony is performed. Pasquale, so much in love that his judgment is clouded, is not only induced to sign over one-half his property to his wife, but agrees that she shall be absolute mistress of the house. As Norina is signing, Ernesto's voice is heard outside demanding admission, having come to bid his uncle farewell. He is amazed to see Norina posing as the Doctor's sister and about to be wedded to his uncle, and tries to interfere, but is restrained by Malatesta.

The moment Norina affixes her signature to the contract her manner changes, and when Pasquale attempts to embrace her she coldly asks him not to be so rude. Pasquale is astonished and Ernesto laughs, which enrages the old man so that he orders his nephew from the room. Norina stops him and says that as Don Pasquale is too old, fat and feeble to attend a young wife, she must have a young cavalier to attend her, and signifies that Ernesto is her choice. Don Pasquale is thunderstruck and attempts to protest, but Norina warns him that if her words are not sufficient to keep him in his place she will beat him! This is the last straw, and the bewildered old man stands in a daze, his brain refusing to comprehend what has happened!

This tableau is followed by the quartet, E rimasto.

E rimasto la impietrito (He Stands Immovable)

By Linda Brambilla, Soprano; Antonio Pini-Corsi, Baritone;
Gaetano Pini-Corsi, Tenor; Agusto Scipioni, Bass

Pasquale:
Dream I? Sleep I? What's amiss?
Kicks—cuffs: good—a fine pretext—
'Tis well she warn'd me now of this—what's that mean?
We shall see what's coming next!
Don Pasquale, she'd think meet
To trample underneath her feet!
Norina and Ernesto:
He stands petrified, and seems—

The great finale to Act II then follows, and the curtain always descends amid a gale of laughter from the audience. Norina rings a bell, summoning the servants, and announces that she is now sole mistress of the house. She orders new servants engaged, two carriages, new furniture, etc., planning expenditures on a lavish scale. Don Pasquale attempts to protest, but is silenced, and in a voice choked with rage and astonishment begins the finale.

Son tradito (I Am Betrayed!)

By Giuseppina Huguet, Soprano; Antonio Pini-Corsi, Baritone;
Gaetano Pini-Corsi, Tenor; Agusto Scipioni, Bass

Pasquale:
I am betray'd. trod down and beat,
A laughing stock to all I meet;
Oh! with mingled rage and spite
I am suffocating quite!
Norina (to Ernesto):
Now you see, ungrateful heart,
How unjust was your suspicion:
Love, to bring him to submission,
Counsel'd me to play this part.
Ernesto (to Norina):
You are justified, dear heart;
Momentary my suspicion.
Love, to bring him to submission,
Counsel'd thee to play this part.

ACT III

(Same as Act I—On the floor and furniture are piled up dresses, bandboxes, furs, etc., in great pro- fusion. Servants are running to and fro with bustle and excitement)

Don Pasquale is seen amid the confusion, looking with utmost consternation at a huge pile of bills. He throws them down in despair, and as Norina approaches resolves to make one last attempt to remain master in his own house.

Signorina in tanta fretta (My Lady, Why This Haste?)

By Emilia Corsi, Soprano, and Antonio Pini-Corsi, Baritone

Pasquale:
Prithee, where are you running in such haste,
Young lady, may I beg you will inform me?
Norina:
Oh! that's a thing that very soon is told:
I'm going to the theatre to divert me.
Pasquale:
But the husband, with your leave—excuse me
Saying so—may perchance object to it.
Norina:
The husband sees, and wisely holds his tongue:
For when he speaks there's no one listens to him.
Pasquale (with rising warmth):
Not to put me to the trial, Madame,—
It is for your own good that I advise you—
You'll to your chamber go, this very instant—
Remain content at home—stay in the house.
Norina (ironically):
Oh, really!

Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED DON PASQUALE RECORDS, page 90.
As she goes out she intentionally drops a note which Don Pasquale seizes and peruses. He is petrified to find that it reads:

"Adored Sophania—
Between the hours of nine and ten this evening,
I shall be at the bottom of the garden—"

This is too much, and the unhappy man runs in search of Malatesta. Ernesto and the Doctor enter, discussing the plot, and the young man, after being instructed to be at the garden rendezvous at nine that evening, goes out.

Pasquale returns, and going solemnly up to the Doctor, exclaims:

Pasquale:
Brother-in-law, in me, alas, you see
A dead man, walking upright!

and tells him of the contents of the note. Malatesta pretends to sympathize and proposes that they lie in wait for the guilty lovers that evening and teach them a severe lesson. Pasquale gloats over his coming triumph, and begins the duet.

Aspetta aspetta cara esposina (Wait, Wait, Dear Little Wife)
By Antonio Pini-Corsi, Baritone, and Giovanni Polese, Baritone

Pasquale:
Wait, wait, dear little wife,
I soon reveng'd will be:
E'en now 'tis near, my life.
This night, without delay,
Thou must the reckoning pay!
Thou'llt see what little use
Now will be each excuse—
Useless thy tender smiles,
Sighs, and tears—and wiles—
All I have now at stake,
Conquer'd, again I'll take!

Malatesta (aside):
Oh, the poor fellow!
Vengeance he's prating;
Let the dolt bellow—
He knows not what's waiting!
He knows not he is building rare
Castles in the empty air:
He sees not, the simpleton—
That in the trap, poor elf,
He of his own accord
Now goes to throw himself!
(Exit together.)

SCENE II—Don Pasquale's Garden—It is Night—Ernesto is Discovered Waiting
This scene begins with the beautiful serenade, the most melodious of the airs in Donizetti's work.

Serenata—Com'e gentil (Soft Beams the Light)
By Enrico Caruso, Tenor

Ernesto:
Oh! summer night, thy tranquil light
Was made for those who shun the busy day,
Who love too well, yet blush to tell
The hopes that led their hearts astray!
All now is still, on dale, on hill,

Two renditions of this exquisite air are listed here, headed by Caruso's, familiar to admirers of the great tenor. A fine record by Giorgini, a tenor now much liked in Italy, follows.

Norina joins Ernesto, and they are reconciled in a duet, Tell Me Again. Pasquale and the Doctor, with dark lanterns, enter softly and hide behind the trees, but the irate old man can contain himself no longer and rushes out to denounce the lovers. Ernesto vanishes and Norina calmly declares there was no one with her, that she had merely come out to get fresh air. Pasquale is so beside himself with rage and chagrin that Malatesta considers it time to end the farce, and proposes to rid Pasquale of his bride by marrying her to Ernesto, revealing that the first marriage was not a real one, and that the lady was not his sister but Norina. Pasquale is so glad to be rid of such an extravagant termagant that he pardons the deception, consents to the union, and settles an income on the happy pair.

SCENE FOR ACT II AT METROPOLITAN OPERA

(English)
THE ELIXIR OF LOVE

OPERA IN TWO ACTS

Cast

ADINA, a wealthy and independent young woman .................................. Soprano
NEMORINO, a young peasant, in love with Adina ................................. Tenor BELCORE, sergeant of the village garrison ....................................... Bass
DOCTOR DULCAMARA, a quack doctor ........................................... Buffo
GIANNETTA, a peasant girl .............................................................. Soprano
A Landlord, a Notary, Peasants, Soldiers, Villagers.

Scene and Period:  A little Italian village; the nineteenth century.

This delightful example of Donizetti’s work is a real opéra bouffe, and while simple and unconventional in plot, it has always been a favorite because of the lovely songs with which it abounds.

Adina, a lively village beauty and heiress, is loved by a young peasant, Nemorino, who although handsome and manly, is afraid to press his suit; but while the beauty treats him rather coolly she is by no means indifferent to him.

ACT I

SCENE—The Homestead of Adina’s Farm

Adina and her companion are seated under a tree reading. Nemorino is near, pensively observing his innamorata, and sings his first Cavatina.

Quant’e bella!  (Ah! How Lovely)

By Emilio Perea, Tenor  (In Italian) *62626 10-inch, $.75

NEMORINO:
Ah! how lovely! ah! how dear to me!
While I gaze I adore more deeply;
Ah! what rapture that soft bosom
With a mutual flame to move.
But while reading, studying, improving,
She hath learning and every attainment,
While I can nothing do but love!

Adina then reads to her friends a legend of a cruel lady who coldly treated a knight who loved her, and only smiled on him when he gave her a love potion. Nemorino wishes he could find the receipt for this potent elixir.

Martial music is heard and Belcore, a dashing sergeant stationed near the village, appears with a bouquet for Adina. She has but few smiles for the military man, which cheers Nemorino somewhat, and when Belcore deparths he renews his suit, but the fair one tells him that it is useless.

A commotion among the villagers is heard, and Dulcamara, a quack doctor, comes on the scene, riding in a splendid carriage. He announces his wonderful medicines in a famous song, Udite, udite o rustici, the delight of buffos for more than eighty years.

Udite, udite o rustici (Give Ear, Ye Rustics)

By Antonio Pini-Corsi, Baritone  (In Italian) *68152 12-inch, $1.25
By Emilio Perea, Tenor  (In Italian) *62626 10-inch, $.75

* Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see list on page 93.
After the Doctor has recited the wonderful effects of his medicines, saying:

DULCAMARA:
I cure the apoplectical,
The asthmatical, the paralytical,
The dropical, the diuretical,
Consumption, deafness, too,
The rickets and the scrofula—
All evils are at once upset
By this new and fashionable mode!

Nemorino exclaims, "Heaven itself must have sent this miraculous doctor to our village!" He draws the quack aside, and asks him if he has an elixir that can awaken love. The Doctor, of course, says that he is the original inventor of the liquid, and soon has Nemorino's last coin in exchange for the coveted potion, which is in reality a bottle of strong wine.

This scene is in the form of an amusing duet, Obbligato.

Obbligato, obbligato (Thank You Kindly)

By Fernando de Lucia, Tenor, and Ernesto Badini, Baritone
(In Italian) 91079 10-inch, $2.00

As soon as the Doctor has departed Nemorino drinks the elixir, and at once feels a new courage in his veins. He begins to sing and dance, and Adina, coming in, is astonished to see her love-sick swain so merry. Feeling sure that the potion will bring the lady to his feet, he pays no attention to her, which piques her so much that when the sergeant arrives and renew his suit, she consents to wed him in three days. Nemorino laughs loudly at this, which further enrages the lady, and she sets the wedding for that very day. This sobers Nemorino, who fears that the marriage may take place before the potion works, and he pleads for delay. Adina and Belcore laugh at him, and the curtain falls as preparations for the wedding are begun.

ACT II

SCENE I—Interior of the Farmhouse

The wedding feast is in progress, but the notary has not arrived. Dulcamara is present, and produces the latest duet from Venice, which he asks Adina to sing with him.

Io sono ricco e tu sei bella (I Have Riches, Thou Hast Beauty)

By Mme. Passari, Soprano; Antonio Pini-Corsi, Baritone; La Scala Chorus
(In Italian) *16566 10-inch, $0.75

This amusing dialogue, supposed to occur between a rich old man and a young girl, is given here by two well-known singers of La Scala, supported by the chorus.

The company now goes to an adjoining room to dance; all but the Doctor, who says he doesn't know when another free dinner will come his way, and therefore remains at the feast. Nemorino enters, distracted, and tells the Doctor that the elixir has not yet taken effect.

"Take another bottle," says the Doctor, "only twenty crowns." Nemorino says he has no money, so the Doctor promptly pockets the bottle and goes in to the dancers, telling the unhappy youth to go out and raise the amount.

Belcore, the sergeant, comes in, and learning that Nemorino's distress is caused by lack of money, suggests that he enlist as a soldier and be richer the fee of twenty crowns. Nemorino jumps at the chance, signs the articles, runs in search of the Doctor, and drinks the second bottle!

The peasant girls, having heard that the death of Nemorino's uncle has just made him rich, begin to pay him attentions. The Doctor tells Nemorino that this popularity is the result of the elixir he has just sold him. Adina, woman-like, when she sees her lover in such demand, promptly regrets having treated him so coldly, and runs out on the verge of tears. Nemorino, noting her downcast looks, feels compassion for her, and gazing after her sadly, sings the lovely romanza, famous in every land.

Una furtiva lagrima (Down Her Cheek a Pearly Tear)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor  (In Italian) 88339 12-inch, $3.00
By Enrico Caruso, Tenor (Piano acc.) (In Italian) 81027 10-inch, 2.00
By John McCormack, Tenor (In Italian) 74219 12-inch, 1.50
By Florencio Constantino, Tenor (In Italian) 74065 12-inch, 1.50
By Emilio Perea, Tenor (In Italian) *68152 12-inch, 1.25

* Double-Faced Records—For title of opposite side see page 93.
Neglected as the opera, as a whole, has been for many years, this lovely romanza, the song which Nemorino sings to the tear that stood in his Adina's eye, will always keep the opera from being forgotten. This is one of the most famous of the Caruso records, and his exquisite singing of this beautiful number is something to be long remembered.

Down her soft cheek a pearly tear
Stole from her eyelids dark,
Telling their gay and festive cheer,
It pained her soul to mark;
Why then her dear presence fly?
When all her love she is showing?
Could I but feel her beating heart
Pressing against mine own;
Could I my feeling soft impart, and mingle sigh with sigh,
But feel her heart against mine own,
Glady I then would die,
All her love knowing!

Mr. McCormack's rendition is also a most attractive one. Very few English singers are able to sing an Italian aria in a manner that would be acceptable to Italian audiences, but McCormack is one of these, and his rendering of Donizetti's exquisite air is an example of this mastery of the old school of vocalization.

The crafty Dulcamara now suggests to Adina that she try the wonderful elixir in order to win back her lover, but she says she needs not such aids.

When Nemorino has sung his air Adina comes on with the soldier's contract, which she has bought back, and tells him that he must not go away. All misunderstandings are now cleared away, and Belcore arrives to find his bride-to-be embracing another. However, he is philosophical and saying, "There are other women!" marches off, while the villagers tell Adina and Nemorino of the latter's good fortune. The Doctor claims credit for the reconciliation, and the curtain falls as he is relieving the peasants of their wages in return for bottles of his wonderful Elixir of Love!

ACT I

SCENE I—The Mountains of Aragon

_Elvia_, a Spanish lady of rank, is about to be married to the elderly _Don Gomez de Silva_, a Grandee of Spain. _Ernani_, a bandit chief (in reality John of Aragon, become a brigand after his estates were confiscated), loves _Elvira_ and resolves to prevent this unwelcome marriage. The first scene shows a mountain pass where _Ernani_ and his men are encamped.

_Beviam_, beviam (Comrades, Let’s Drink and Play)

By La Scala Chorus
_In Italian_
*35168_ 12-inch.  $1.25

The opera opens with this spirited chorus of bandits and mountaineers, who are drinking and gambling in their stronghold. With reckless satisfaction in their lot they sing:

“What matters to the bandit
If hunted and branded
So wine be his share!”

__Ernani__, their chief, appears on a neighboring height with a melancholy brow. His men remark at his gloomy appearance, and he tells them that he is powerless to prevent the marriage of his betrothed to the aged _Silva_ on the morrow. He describes the peerless _Elvira_ in a fine aria, The Sweetest Flow’r.

_Come rugiada al cespite_ (The Sweetest Flow’r)

By Luigi Colazza, Tenor
_In Italian_
*62627_ 10-inch.  $0.75

The bandits offer their lives, if need be, in the service of their chief, and it is decided to rescue _Elvira_ that night.

_O tu che l’alma adora_ (O Thou, My Life’s Treasure)

By Martinez Patti, Tenor, and La Scala Chorus
_In Italian_
*16567_ 10-inch.  $0.75

_Ernani_, in this passionate aria, sings of the charms of his beloved.

_Ernani:_

Oh thou, my life’s sole treasure,
Come, come to my arms adoring,
Death at thy feet were pleasure,
The joy of heav’n is mine where’er thou art.

I love thy starry glances,
Thy smile my heart entrances,
Most blessed he of mortals
To whom thou gav’st thy heart!

_Ernani_ and his men depart in the direction of _Silva_’s castle and the scene changes.

SCENE II—Elvira’s Apartment in the Castle

_Elvia_ is discovered alone, brooding over the prospect of the sacrifice, which she seems powerless to prevent.

_Elvira:_

’Tis near the dawning, and _Silva_ yet returns not! Ah! would he came no more—with odious words of loving, more deeply confirming my love for _Ernani_!

_Ernani involami_ (Ernani, Fly with Me)

By Marcella Sembrich
88022_ 12-inch.  $3.00

By Frieda Hempel, Soprano
88383_ 12-inch.  3.00

By Maria Grisi
*63173_ 10-inch.  .75

In this beautiful but despairing number she calls on her lover to save her, singing:

_Ernani, fly with me:
Prevent this hated marriage!
With thee, e’en the barren desert
Would seem an Eden of enchantment!

Two brilliant renditions of this famous number are given, by Mme Sembrich and Mme. Hempel; while a popular-priced record is contributed by Mme. Grisi, of La Scala.

_Elvia_’s ladies-in-waiting now enter, bringing her wedding gifts, and in the graceful chorus with which this record begins, congratulate her.

Quante d'Iberia giovani (Noble Hispania's Blood)
By Ida Giacomelli and La Scala Chorus (In Italian) *16567 10-inch. $0.75
She thanks them, saying: "Each kindly wish awakes a response in my own heart;" then sings, aside, a second number, "Tutto sprezzo che d'Ernani," in which she tells of her hope of rescue. The chorus joins in the concluding strain.

Da quel di che t'ho veduta (From the Day when First Thy Beauty)
By Angela de Angelis, Soprano; Francesco Cigada, Baritone
(In Italian) *35168 12-inch. $1.25
We come now to one of the greatest scenes in the opera. Elvira, who has left the room with the ladies, returns and is amazed to discover in her boudoir the King, who has been secretly in love with her. She appeals to his honor, saying:
"In pity, sire, leave me!"
The record begins with the dramatic dialogue between Carlos and Elvira. Carlos then declares his love in the aria "Da quel di" leading up to a dramatic duet, which concludes this sixth number.

Tu se' Ernani! (Thou Art Ernani!)
By Giacomelli, Martinez-Patti and Pignataro (Italian) *16568 10-inch. $0.75
The King, maddened by Elvira's resistance, is about to carry her away by force. She snatches a dagger from Carlos’ belt and cries: "Go, or with this dagger I will slay us both!"
The King is about to summon his guard, when suddenly a secret panel door opens and Ernani appears. Carlos recognizes him and exclaims: "Thou art Ernani, the assassin and bandit," and in the spirited trio which follows the rivals declare their hatred, while Elvira, almost distracted, endeavors to protect her lover.

Infelice e tu credevi (Unhappy One!)
By Marcel Journet, Bass (In Italian) 74008 12-inch. $1.50
By Perello de Segurola, Bass (In Italian) *55007 12-inch. 1.50
By Aristodemo Sillich, Bass (In Italian) *63421 10-inch. .75
In the midst of this thrilling tableau now appears Silva, who does not recognize the King and who is naturally astounded to find two rivals in the apartments of his future bride, quarreling for her possession. He summons his squires and soldiers, then addresses himself to Elvira and reproaches her in this well-known and impressive Infelice, one of the most beautiful of bass arias. Four records of this favorite number are available—by Journet (in both 10 and 12-inch), by de Segurola and by Sillich.
The editor regrets that he is unable to give satisfactory English translations for the majority of the Ernani airs, but most of the available translations of Ernani are so distorted as to be almost meaningless. The few extracts which are given have been revised and made somewhat intelligible. "Opera in English," about which we hear so much nowadays, cannot be permanently successful without new translations for some of the older works.
For instance, here is a specimen translation of the text of this very air of Infelice.

Ah, to win, to win back summer's blossom
In my breast were tho' too gaineless,
Winter lords it within this my bosom.
Far congealing, far congealing to the core,
Far congealing unto the core.

Far congealing unto the core.
Winter lords it in this bosom.
Far congealing, far congealing to the core,
Upto the core, congealing unto the core!

Now anyone who can tell just what this means is certainly a highly gifted individual!
In this connection, however, it should be stated that several American music publishers are entitled to praise for their efforts to improve opera translations, especially G. Schirmer, with many beautiful new editions of the older operas and collections of opera airs; and Oliver Ditson Company, whose Musicians' Library, a splendid piece of music typography, contains many new translations. The editor of this catalogue is indebted to both these firms for permission to quote from their new translations.

Vedi come il buon vegliardo
(Well I Knew My Trusty Vassal)
By Maria Grisi, Soprano; Carlo Ottoboni, Bass; Remo Sangiorgi, Tenor; and Giuseppe Sala, Baritone
(In Italian) *35169 12-inch, $1.25

Having reproached his bride for her supposed treachery, Silva thinks of vengeance, and calling for his armor and a sword, demands that the intruders follow him to combat. Before they can reply, the King's squires enter and salute their sovereign. The astounded Silva, though secretly enraged, kneels to his King, saying: "Duty to my King cancels all offenses." The great finale then begins with Carlos' solo, sung aside to his squires:

"Well I knew my trusty vassal
Fierce in hate, in passion tender
Would his wrath and love surrender
In the presence of his King."

This is one of the most impressive records of the Ernani series.

Finale, Act I

By Maria Grisi, Soprano; Carlo Ottoboni, Bass; Remo Sangiorgi, Tenor; and Giuseppe Sala, Baritone
(In Italian) *16568 10-inch, $0.75

The finale to Act I is continued in this record. The situation at the close of the act may be understood by these quotations from the words the librettist has given to the various characters:

Carlos (to Ernani):
I will save thee!

(Aloud to Silva):
Let this trusty friend depart.

Ernani,
I thy friend? Never! unto death my vengeance will pursue thee!

Elvira:
Fly, Ernani, let love teach thee prudence!

Ernani yields to Elvira's pleadings and in the confusion makes his escape. The curtain falls on an impressive tableau.

ACT II

SCENE—A Hall in Silva’s Castle

After his escape from the castle, nothing has been seen of Ernani. Elvira believes the rumors of his death and despairingly consents to wed Don Silva.

Esultiam (Day of Gladness)
By La Scala Chorus
(In Italian) *16569 10-inch, $0.75

The first scene of Act II occurs in a magnificent hall in the castle. The company of knights and pages of Silva, and ladies in attendance on Elvira sing the opening chorus in praise of the noble Silva and his peerless bride.

Oro quant’ oro (I am the Bandit Ernani)
By Maria Bernacchi, Soprano; Luisi Colazza, Tenor; and Torres de Luna.
(Bass)

Silva, attired as a Grandee, enters. His squire, Jago, announces a holy man, who craves the hospitality of the castle. Ernani, disguised as a pilgrim, enters, then throws off his disguise and exclaims, beginning this fine trio:

"I am the bandit Ernani . . . My men are dead or in chains . . . My enemies are without the castle . . . Seize me and deliver me up, for I am weary of life!"

Silva, however, refuses to betray one whom he has received as a guest. The trio, which is one of the great scenes of the opera, then follows.

La vedremo, o veglio audace (I Will Prove, Audacious Greybeard)
By Mattia Battistini, Baritone, and Aristodemo Sillich, Bass
(In Italian) 92007 12-inch, $3.00
By Ernesto Caronna, Baritone, and Torres de Luna, Bass
(In Italian) *16570 10-inch, .75

The retainers bring news that the King and his warriors are without the castle. Silva hides Ernani in a secret passage and orders that the King be admitted. Don Carlos inquires, with irony, why Silva's castle is so well guarded, and demands that he surrender Ernani or lose his own life. Silva refuses. The soldiers are ordered to search the castle. This duet then occurs, beginning:

CARLOS: I will prove, audacious greybeard,
If thou'rt loyal to thy King!
In my wrath I will destroy thee!
SILVA: Oh King, be just; I cannot yield!

Vieni meco (Come, Thou Dearest Maiden)
By Emilia Corsi, Soprano; Mattia Battistini, Baritone; and La Scala Chorus
(In Italian) 92008 12-inch, $3.00
By Maria Grisi, Soprano; Francesco Cigada, Baritone; Carlo Ottoboni, Bass; and La Scala Chorus
(In Italian) *16570 10-inch, .75

This record begins with a chorus of soldiers, who have explored the castle but have found no trace of Ernani. The King is about to torture Silva into revealing the secret, when Elvira rushes in and begs the mercy of his Majesty. Carlos turns to her, and sings consolingly of the bright future before her as his Queen, and in the great trio which follows the conflicting emotions of those in the scene are expressed in Verdi's fiery music.

A te scegli, seguimi (Choose Thy Sword, and Follow!)
By Luigi Colizza, Tenor, and Torres de Luna, Bass
(In Italian) *35169 12-inch, $1.25

The King, his followers, and the Lady Elvira having retired, Silva exclaims: "Hell cannot hate with the hatred I bear thee, vile King!" He then takes down two swords from the armory, and releasing Ernani from his hiding place, challenges him to combat. Ernani refuses, saying that his life belongs to Silva, who has saved it. Silva taunts him with cowardice and Ernani consents to fight, but asks for one look at Elvira. Silva replies that the King has taken her away. "Fool!" cries Ernani to the astonished Grandee, "the King is our rival!" and agrees to combine with Silva against their mutual foe. Once their revenge is accomplished, Ernani agrees to yield his life at Silva's call, and gives him a hunting horn which shall be the signal for his (Ernani's) death. For this magnificent number Verdi has written some of his most dramatic music.

In arcion, cavalieri (To Horse, Ye Warriors)
By Giuseppe Sala, Tenor; Cesare Preve, Baritone; and La Scala Chorus (Italian) *16571 10-inch, $0.75

The act closes with the spirited duet and chorus by Ernani, Silva and the warriors of the Don, who prepare to pursue the King to the death.

It was the youthful dream of the great composer, Verdi, to write a comic opera, but it was not until he was nearing eighty years of age that his dream was realized. The music of Falstaff denotes in all things almost the antithesis of the style and methods and ideals of Verdi's early operas. The music is vivacious and sparkling, being interspersed with delightful fragments of melody.

Sir John Falstaff is a merry rogue, so conceited as to believe himself irresistible to all womankind. His egotism leads him to think he has fascinated both Mistress Page and Mistress Alice Ford, and he writes each of the ladies a love letter identical in contents. The two women compare the notes and plan to punish the Knight for presuming to address them in such terms of affection.

Ford learns of Falstaff's advances to his wife and flies into a jealous rage. Mistress Ford sends Dame Quickley to Sir John with an invitation to call, which he is quick to accept. Scarcely does he arrive at Ford's house than Dame Quickley reports the coming of Mistress Page, and Falstaff is compelled to hide behind a screen. Then the angry Ford appears with his friends, determined to capture Falstaff, but the latter takes refuge in a clothes basket. Mistress Ford has the basket thrown into the ditch, and the unlucky suitor receives a good shaking-up before the jeering crowd.

Falstaff, undaunted by his basket experience, arranges to meet Lady Ford again, the trysting place this time being at Herne’s Oak, in Windsor Park. Ford and his men, including Pistola and Bardolfo, who have turned against Falstaff because of his bad treatment of them, overhear the arrangements and plan to be there also. Now, Ford’s daughter, Nanetta, is in love with Fenton, but her father demands that she marry Dr. Caius. Ford tells the doctor that this is a good time for him to secure Nanetta, and promises to aid him. Dame Quickley, however, learns of this, and the women plan to have Fenton spoil the designs of the physician.

Falstaff’s love scene with Mistress Ford is interrupted by Ford’s friends, disguised as elves and fairies, who thrash the fat knight soundly. In the confusion Dr. Caius mistakes Bardolfo for Nanetta, Ford is finally won over, and his daughter and Fenton are happily married.

The Victor offers two very fine records of two of the best known airs from the opera: the Quand’ ero paggio, sung by Falstaff to Mistress Alice Ford in Act II; and the Sul fil d’un soffio from Act III, sung by Nanetta as the pretended fairies gather in Windsor Park.

Faust, the Aged Philosopher, Wearies of Life
FAUST

Fifty-four years have elapsed since the first production of this masterpiece by Gounod; and it is to-day sung throughout the world more than any other five operas combined. At the Paris Opéra alone it has been given more than 1500 times, and the new setting recently provided for it there cost not less than 150,000 francs, a sum which would not be risked on any other opera whatever.

It seems strange now, in view of the overwhelming success of Faust, to recall that it was received with indifference in Paris, and all but failed in Milan. The London production, however, with Titiens, Giuglini, Trebelli, Cassier and Santley, was quite successful; and in the following June Patti sang Marguerite for the first time, the opera receiving a tremendous ovation.

The story is familiar to almost every one and will be but briefly sketched here. The libretto by Barbier and Carre does not attempt to follow the Goethe drama, but merely makes use of the Faust-Marguerite incident. This is sufficient, however, to provide an intensely interesting subject for Gounod's lovely music.

Prélude to Faust

By L'Orchestre Symphonique, Paris

The prelude to Faust is a short one, merely giving a clue to the drama which is to follow. The fateful single note of the full orchestra with which it opens and the mysterious chromatic chords stealing in from the strings form a fitting introduction to a drama of such unusual portent.

The tempo is then accelerated and a passage suggesting Faust's mental struggles leads to the lovely melody in F major (Dio possente).

This number is rarely heard apart from the opera, and so excellent a reproduction as this one by the orchestra will be highly appreciated.

ACT I—The Compact

The first act reveals the studio of Faust, an aged philosopher and alchemist, who is seen surrounded by musty parchment rolls and the rude scientific apparatus of the fifteenth century. The fitful light of the expiring lamp is a symbol of the despair in the heart of the aged Faust, as after a lifetime spent in the pursuit of learning, he realizes that he knows but little of true knowledge. Tired of the struggle, he resolves to end it with a poisonous draught, and raises the goblet to his lips; but pauses as the songs of the happy peasants float through the open window. He goes to the window, and filled with rage at the sight of human happiness, he curses all earthly things and calls on Satan to aid him.

This scene is given in a most impressive record by De Tura and the La Scala Chorus.

La vaga pupilla (Rise, Slumb'ring Maiden)

By Gennaro De Tura and La Scala Chorus (In Italian) 76019 12-inch, $2.00

Chorus of Peasant Girls (passing without the window):
Ah! careless, idle maiden,
Wherefore dreaming still?
Day with roses laden
Cometh o'er the hill,
Brooks and bees and flowers
Warble to the grove,
Who has time for sadness?
Awake to love!

FAUST:
Foolish echoes of human gladness,
Go by, pass on your way!
(His hand trembles.)
Goblet so often drained by my father's hand so steady.
Why now dost thou tremble in mine?

Chorus of Reapers (without):
Cometh forth, ye reapers, young and hoary!
The earth is proud with harvest glory!
Rejoice and pray.

FAUST:
If I pray there is none to hear—
To give me back my love,
Its believing and its glow.
Accurst be all ye thoughts of earthly pleasure!
Fond dreams of hope! ambitions high,
And their fulfillment so rare!
Accurst, my vaunted learning,
And forgiveness and prayer!
Infernal king, appear!
(Mephistopheles appears.)
Mephistopheles, attired in the dress of a gallant, promptly appears in response to the call and proposes that the good Doctor shall enter into a compact with him. In return for riches, glory, power, anything he desires, Faust shall merely give up his soul. The aged philosopher, spurning gold or power, cries out for youth, only youth!

Io voglio il piacer (The Pleasures of Youth)

By Gaetano Pini-Corsi, Tenor; Aristodemo Sillich, Bass
(In Italian) *63174 10-in., $0.75

The bargain is soon agreed upon and Faust is about to pledge his soul in return for youth and love, but as he still hesitates, Mephisto says, "See how fair youth invites you! Look!"

O merveille (Heavenly Vision)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor; Marcel Journet, Bass
(In French) 89039 12-in., $4.00

Then follows the delicate passage for strings which accompanies the vision. Faust, gazing rapturously on the beautiful Marguerite, sings:

The scroll is signed in letters of fire, Faust drains the magic potion and is transformed into a youth. The spirited duet which follows, ending the first act, is sung with fine effect; both of the Victor renditions being most attractive ones.

ACT II—The Fair

(The scene shows a fair in progress in the public square of a German town)

A motley crowd of students, soldiers, old men, young women and matrons are dispersing themselves—drinking, talking, flirting, quarreling; and this animated chorus, with which the Kermesse Scene begins, graphically pictures the whole.

Kermesse Scene

By La Scala Chorus (In Italian) *68160 12-inch, 1.25

Each group delivers its quota in distinctive fashion, the soldiers' sturdy declaration contrasting with the laughing, chattering passages allotted to the women; the high-pitched falsetto of the gossiping old men always proving a favorite portion of this number. At the close the different groups combine into a chorus of six parts. This wonderful piece of choral writing is reproduced in a striking manner, and gives a most realistic picture of the Kermesse.

*Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED FAUST RECORDS, page 125.
Here Valentine, the brother of Marguerite, is found among the crowd of soldiers just about to depart for the war, and he sings the noble Dio possente, a farewell to his sister and his home.

Dio possente (Even the Bravest Heart)

By Antonio Scotti, Baritone (In Italian) 88203 12-inch, $3.00
By Emilio de Gogorza, Baritone (In Italian) 88174 12-inch, 3.00
By Titta Ruffo, Baritone (In Italian) 92043 12-inch, 3.00
By Francesco Cigada (Double-faced—See page 125) (Italian) 68275 12-inch, 1.25

In the preceding recitative he speaks of his fears in leaving his sister Marguerite alone, and contemplates with affection the amulet she has given him to bring good fortune.

VALENTINE:
Dear gift of my sister,
Made more holy by her pray'r.
However great the danger,
There's naught can do me harm,
Protected by this charm!

The familiar "Cavatina" then follows:

Even bravest heart may swell,
In the moment of farewell,
Loving smile of sister kind,
Quiet home I leave behind;
Oft shall I think of you,
Where'er the wine-cup passes 'round,
When alone my watch I keep
And my comrades lie asleep

Upon the tented battleground.
But when danger to glory shall call me,
I still will be first in the fray,
As blithe as a knight in his bridal array,
Careless what fate may befall me,
When glory shall call me,
Oft shall I sadly think of you
When far away, far away.
This Dio possente was not in the original production of the opera, but was written by Gounod especially for Santley in the English production at Her Majesty's Theatre, 1864.

The Victor offers a wide choice to buyers of this fine “Cavatina.” Scotti’s Valentine is always a revelation in dramatic possibilities. This rôle, too often allotted to a mediocre artist, is filled by him with dignity; and he makes a serious and soldierly Valentine, singing the music with admirable richness of tone and beauty of expression.

Although Mr. de Gogorza has not sung the number in opera, it is frequently seen on his concert programs, and he sings it superbly. Other fine renditions in Italian are the ones by Ruffo, the famous Italian baritone, who has recently made such a success in this country, and Cigada, a well-known European baritone, who has not yet visited America.

Le veau d’or (The Calf of Gold)

By Pol Plançon, Bass (In French) 81038 10-inch, $2.00
By Marcel Journet, Bass (In French) 64036 10-inch, 1.00

We are now in the full bustle of the Fair Scene, where in front of an inn a crowd of drinkers are listening to one of their number, Wagner, singing a somewhat coarse ditty concerning a rat. Mephistopheles breaks in upon the revelers, and offers to sing a song of his own, “The Song of the Golden Calf.” After the diabolically suggestive introduction by the orchestra, with its semi-quavers and descending chromatics, we hear the bold opening passage of this anthem in praise of Mammon, of which the calf is symbolic.

Mephistopheles:

Calf of Gold! aye in all the world
To your mightiness they proffer,
Incense at your fane they offer
From end to end of all the world.
And in honor of the idol
Kings and peoples everywhere
To the sound of jingling coins
Dance with zeal in festive circle,
Round about the pedestal,
Satan, he conducts the ball!
Calf of Gold, strongest god below!
To his temple overflowing
Crowds before his vile shape bowing,
As they strive in abject toil,
As with souls debased they circle
Round about the pedestal,
Satan, he conducts the ball!

Two renditions of this effective bass song are offered by the Victor. Plançon’s rendition is a spirited one, the number always being sung by him with a full appreciation of its caustic raillery. Journet’s record is also a splendid one in many respects, and shows the magnificent voice of this artist to great advantage.

Mephistopheles now proceeds to astonish the company by his feats of magic, first reading their palms and then drawing wine from the barrel of Bacchus—the inn sign perched up aloft—each man drawing the wine he likes the best.

The scene which follows, a most dramatic one, is given in a splendid record by Amato, Journet and the Metropolitan Chorus.
Faust—Scene les Épées (Scene of the Swords)

By Pasquale Amato, Baritone; Marcel Journet, Bass; and Metropolitan Opera Chorus

Giulio Setti, Director

(In French) 89055 12-inch, $4.00

The record begins with the invocation to Bacchus.

Mephistopheles:
I drink to you all!
(Throwing it out with a wry face.)
Bah! what rubbishy wine.
Let me see if I cannot find you better!
(Striking the image of Bacchus with his sword.)
What ho, Bacchus! up there! some liquors!
Come while you can,
And each one drink the wine he likes the best!

He then affronts Valentine by proposing the health of Marguerite, and the soldier draws his sword, only to find that some unforeseen force has made it powerless in his hand.

Mephistopheles:
I propose the health of the dearest of all dears,
Our Margarita!

Valentine:
Enough!
Bridle thy tongue, or thou diest by my hand!

Mephistopheles:
Come on! (Both draw)

Chorus:
Come on!

Mephistopheles (mocking):
So soon afraid, who so lately defied me?

Valentine:
My sword! O disgrace! In my hand is powerless!

Valentine, however, turns the handle upwards, thus making the Sign of the Cross, the soldiers doing likewise, and they now face the Tempter with confidence.

Valentine and Soldiers:
Gainst the powers of evil our arms assailing,
Strongest earthly might must be unavailing.

Valentine:
But know thou art powerless to harm us!

Valentine: (Holds up his sword to form a cross.)
Look hither!

Mephistopheles is discomfited, and cowers in terror as the soldiers sing the choral, with its striking unison passage for male voices, alternated with bursts of harmony.

This is a remarkably fine reproduction, the men's voices being rich and sonorous, and the dramatic feeling intense.

The delightful waltz, which has been a model of its kind ever since the first performance of Faust, now begins.

Waltz from Kermesse Scene

By Pryor's Band (Double-Faced—See page 125) 16552 10-inch, $0.75

This favorite number is played by the band with the absolute precision and daintiness which are indispensable to its proper performance.

Faust now observes Marguerite and approaching her, greets her respectfully, offering his escort.

Faust:
High-born and lovely maid,
Forgive my humble duty,
Let me, your willing slave,
Attend you home to-day?

She modestly declines, saying:

Marguerite:
No, my lord, not a lady am I,
Nor yet a beauty;
And do not need an arm,
To help me on my way.

The waltz now re-commences and the act ends in a wild and exciting dance, in which all join—students, soldiers and women.
ACT III—The Garden Scene

The Garden Scene of Faust is undoubtedly Gounod’s finest inspiration; and the sensuous beauty of the music with which the composer has surrounded the story of Marguerite’s innocence and trust betrayed, has held many millions in rapt attention during the fifty years since it was first heard.

Flower Song—Le parlate d’amor (In the Language of Love)

By Louise Homer, Contralto  (In Italian) - 87075 10-inch, $2.00
By Corinne Morgan, Contralto  (In English) *35086 12-inch, 1.25
By Rita Fornia, Soprano  (In French) 64162 10-inch, 1.00
By Emma Zaccaria, Mezzo-Soprano  (In Italian) *62085 10-inch, .75

This fresh and dainty song of Siebel ushers in the act. The gentle boy enters Marguerite’s garden, thinking of the dark prophecy of Mephistopheles, who had told him (in Act II):

“Each flower that you touch,
Every beauty you dote on Shall rot and shall wither!”

Siebel now thinks to put this curse to a test, and prepares to send a message of love to Marguerite by means of a flower, singing

“In the language of love, oh gentle flow’r, Say to her I adore her.”

Then gathering a blossom he exclaims, as he sees it fade:

*Double-Faced Record—for title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED FAUST RECORDS, page 125.
But the happy thought occurs to him to dip his fingers in the font of holy water by the side of the cottage. He does so, and is delighted to find the spell broken. The first strain then reappears, closing the aria.

This popular number is offered in Italian by Homer and Zaccaria, in French by Fornia, and in English by Miss Morgan.

Salut demeure (All Hail, Thou Dwelling)

By Enrico Caruso (In French) 88003 12-inch, $3.00
By John McCormack (In Italian) 74220 12-inch, 1.50

Mephistopheles and Faust, who have been secretly watching Siebel, now appear; the Tempter being in high spirits at the apparent success of his schemes, while Faust gazes in rapture at the garden where his beloved one is wont to walk, and sings his lovely cavalina. He thus rhapsodizes the modest dwelling of Marguerite:

All hail, thou dwelling pure and lowly!
Home of an angel fair and holy,
What wealth is here, what wealth outbidding gold,
Of peace and love, and innocence untold!
Bounteous Nature!
'Twas here by day thy love was taught her,
Here thou didst with care overshadow thy daughter
In her dream of the night!
Here, waving tree and flower
Made her an Eden-bower of beauty and delight.

The Caruso record of this number, which the tenor sings in French, is one of the finest in his entire list; while the other rendition is a splendid one by McCormack, in Italian.

Le Roi de Thule (Ballad of the King of Thulé)

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano (French) 88229 12-in., $3.00

Then rebuking herself for her idle fancies, she applies herself to her spinning and begins this plaintive chanson:

"Once there was a king in Thulé
Who was until death always faithful,
And in memory of his loved one
Caused a cup of gold to be made."
Then her thoughts return to Faust, and breaking off the song, she sings as if to herself:

\text{Adagio.} \\
\text{Il a vait bonne grâce, à ce qu'il me semblé} \\
He was so gentle in bearing his voice was so kind.

Again impatient with her wandering mind, she finishes the ballad.

Miss Farrar sings this beautiful folk-song with surpassing loveliness of voice, and in the dreamy sentimental style which it requires.

Finding herself in no humor to spin, Marguerite moves toward the house and sees the flowers, which she stops to admire, thinking them from Siebel. The box of jewels then catches her eye, and after some misgivings she opens it. Then follows the bright and sparkling “Jewel Song,” or Air des bijoux, in which childish glee and virginal coquettishness are so happily expressed.

“Oh Heav’n! what brilliant gems!
Can they be real?
Oh never in my sleep did I dream of aught
so lovely!”

exclaims the delighted Marguerite.

Air des Bijoux (Jewel Song)

By Nellie Melba, Soprano
(In French) 88066 12-inch. $3.00

By Marcella Sembrich, Soprano
(In French) 88024 12-inch. 3.00

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano
(In French) 88147 12-inch. 3.00

By Giuseppina Huguet (Double-faced—See page 125) (In Italian) 68160 12-inch. $1.25

No less than four fine records of this well-known and popular air are presented for the choice of Victor opera lovers.

Melba’s rendition is a most delightful one, her voice exhibiting the most entrancing smoothness; in its loveliness, flexibity and brilliancy it seems absolutely without a flaw.

Sembrich’s Marguerite was always a fine impersonation, and her delivery of the number is exceedingly artistic, being one of the cleanest and most finished bits of colorature singing ever heard in opera.

Miss Farrar’s brilliant Marguerite has been much admired during the past few seasons, and this number shows well the loveliness and flexibility of her voice. A fine record at a lower price is contributed by Mme. Huguet, doubled with the Kerbesse record described in Act II.

Quartet—Seigneur Dieu! (Saints Above, What Lovely Gems!)

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano; Enrico Caruso, Tenor; Marcel Journet, Bass; and Mme. Gilibert, Mezzo-Soprano
(In French) 95204 12-inch. $5.00

The first of the great quartet records begins with the entrance of Martha, a susceptible matron who is companion to the motherless girl. The duenna is struck with astonishment at the sight of the jewels, and begins to question Marguerite, when she is interrupted by Mephistopheles, who appears with Faust; and to excuse his entrance tells Martha that her husband is dead. This announcement is received with cries of grief and sympathy from the women, and the impressive pause which ensues is followed by the beautiful quartet, in which Gounod expresses the various emotions of the characters.

Mephistopheles then begins to flatter the vain matron and pay her mock attentions, so that Faust may have an opportunity to plead his cause without interruption. This dialogue with the susceptible duenna furnishes the only touch of comedy in the opera.

Mephistopheles:
Happy will be the man
Whom you choose for your next!
I trust he may be worthy!

Faust urges the timid girl to take his arm, at which she demurs, while the crafty Tempter continues his flattering attentions to Martha. The second quartet bit then follows, closing the record.

Quartet—Eh quoi toujours seule?
(But Why So Lonely?)

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano; Enrico Caruso, Tenor; Marcel Journet, Bass; and Mme. Gilibert, Mezzo-Soprano

(In French) 95205 12-inch, $5.00

The second part of the scene begins with the beautiful dialogue between Marguerite and Faust. She confides to him her loneliness, and in an exquisite passage speaks of her dead sister.

Marguerite: My mother is gone; At the war is my brother; One dear little sister I had, But the darling, too, is dead!

Faust is tender and sympathetic, and the impressionable girl's heart turns more and more toward the handsome stranger, who seems all that a lover should be.

The record closes with the final quartet passage, by far the most effective bit of concerted writing in the opera. It is magnificently sung here, the balance of the voices being absolutely perfect.

The recording of so complex and varied a piece of concerted music as is contained in these two records is a marvelous piece of work, and one of the most amazing achievements in the reproduction of operatic music yet heard. The solo, duet, and quartet parts which constitute it, the short pieces of dialogue between various persons, not forgetting the important orchestral interludes—all these are portrayed with the utmost fidelity, making a marvelous musical picture of one of the most interesting pages of Gounod's charming score.

Mephistopheles has succeeded in getting rid of Martha, who vainly looks for him in the garden, and he now watches with satisfaction the lovers, who are wandering among the trees in the moonlight.
Marguerite's Surrender
The Tempter now sings the famous Incantation, in which he calls upon night and the flowers to aid him in his diabolical plot against the soul of Marguerite.

Invocation Mephistopheles (Oh Night, Draw Thy Curtain!)

By Marcel Journet, Bass
(In French)
64119 10-inch, $1.00

Stretching out his arms, he invokes the powers of Night, that its mysterious scents and seductive charms may aid him in his work of the lovers' undoing. In this stately passage the singer drops for a time the satirical vein of the previous quartet, and gives the invocation with befitting solemnity and grandeur.

Mephistopheles:

- It was high time—
- See, 'neath the balmy linden,
- Our lovers devoted approaching; 'tis well!
- Better leave them alone,
- With the flow'rs and the moon.

O night! draw around them thy curtain!
Let naught waken alarm, or misgivings ever!
Ye flowers, aid the enchanting charm,
Her senses to bewilder; till she knows not
Whether she be not already in Heaven!

This is the most impressive passage in the whole part of Mephistopheles, and it is magnificently sung by Journet.

The lovers appear again, and Mephistopheles discreetly retires from view. The first part of the exquisite duet then follows.

Tardi si fa! (The Hour is Late!)

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano, and Enrico Caruso, Tenor
(In French)
89032 12-inch, $4.00

By Giuseppina Huguet, Soprano, and Fernando de Lucia, Tenor
Piano Acc. (In Italian)
92053 12-inch, 3.00

Marguerite, finding herself alone with Faust, looks in vain for Martha, and not seeing her, endeavors to bid farewell to her lover.

Marguerite:

- The hour is late! Farewell!!
- Bright and tender, lingers o'er me!
- To love thy beauty too!

Faust:

- Oh, never leave me, now, I pray thee!
- Why not enjoy this lovely night a little longer?
- Let me gaze on the form before me!
- While from yonder ether blue
- Look how the star of eve,

Oh! how strange, like a spell,
Does the evening bind me!
And a deep languid charm
I feel without alarm,
With its melody enwind me,
And all my heart subdue!

The second part of the duet begins with the lovely Sempre amar, in which Marguerite and Faust pledge their love.

Dammi ancor (Let Me Gaze on Thy Beauty)

By Alice Nielsen, Soprano, and Florencio Constantino, Tenor
(In Italian)
74076 12-inch, $1.50

Eternelle (Forever Thine)

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano, and Enrico Caruso, Tenor
(In French)
89031 12-inch, $4.00

And now the lovers plighted their troth in the fateful word "Eternelle," which, with the solemn chords in the wood wind, sounds like a true lover's sigh.

Faust, in an exquisite strain, calls on Heaven, the moon and stars to witness that his love is true.

Faust:

- O tender moon, O starry Heav'n
- Silent above thee where angels are enthron'd,
- Hear me swear how dearly do I love thee!
  (Struck with a sudden fear, the timid girl begs Faust to depart):

Marguerite:

- Ah! begone! I dare not hear!
- Ah! how I falter! I faint with fear!
- Pity, and spare the heart of one so lonely!

Faust (tenderly protesting):

- Oh, dear one, let me remain and cheer thee,
- Nor drive me hence with brow severe!
- Marguerite, I implore thee!

Marguerite:

- By that tender vow that we have sworn,
- By that secret torn from me,
- I entreat you only in mercy to be gone!

Faust:

- Oh, fair and tender child!
- Angel, so holy, thou shalt control me.
- I obey—but at morn?

Marguerite (eagerly):

- Yes, at morn, very early!
- At morn, all day!

Faust:

- One word at parting! Thou lovest me?
  (She hastens toward the house, but stops at the door and wafts a kiss to Faust) I love thee!

Faust (in rapture):

- Were it already morn! Now away!
Elle ouvre sa fenêtre (See! She Opens the Window!)
By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano, and Marcel Journet.
(In French) 89040 12-inch, $4.00

Ei m’ama (He Loves Me!)
By Celestina Boninsegna, Soprano
(In Italian) 88256 12-inch, $3.00
(This is the same selection as 89040 with the short dialogue between Faust and Mephistopheles omitted)

Hurrying away full of thoughts of the morrow, when he will see his Marguerite again, Faust is confronted by the sneering Mephistopheles, who bars his way.

Mephistopheles (contemptuously):
Thou dreamer!
Faust:
Thou hast overheard?
Mephistopheles:
I have—your parting with its modest word!
Go back, on the spot, to your school again!
Faust:
Let me pass!
Mephistopheles:
Not a step; you shall stay and overhear
That which she telleth the stars!
See! She opens the window!

Marguerite (leaning out in the moonlight):
He loves me! He loves me! Repeat it again, bird that callest!
Soft wind that failest!
He loves me! Ah, our world is glorious,
And more than Heaven above! The air is balm!
With the very breath of love!
How the bows embrace and murmur!
Ah, speed, thou night, away!

One of the most original and beautiful of the Faust melodies, this makes a fitting termination of the exquisitely beautiful Garden Scene. A lovely melody in 9/8 time, divided between flute and clarionet, forms the basis of the movement, and in this the soprano joins in short dreamy phrases.

Her longing for the passing of night and the return of Faust, expressed in the last ecstatic phrase, is answered by the cry of her lover, and Mephistopheles, who has been holding Faust back, now releases him.

Faust (rushing to the window):
Marguerite!
Marguerite:
Ah! (she faints in his arms).
Mephistopheles (with sardonic laughter):
There! Ha, ha, ha, ha!
(The curtain slowly falls.)

Marguerite had entered the house, but returns to the window, looks out at the night and stars, and pours forth her soul in song.

Fantasie from Garden Scene

By Mischa Elman, Violinist (Piano acc.)

For those who wish to enjoy some of the exquisite melodies of this act in an instrumental form only, the potpourri by Elman is included here.

In this record the young artist does not show us feats of execution, but brings out all the sensuous beauty of the music which Gounod composed for this immortal scene. It is one of the loveliest bits of violin playing imaginable.

ACT IV—The Desertion

Quando a te lieta (When All Was Young)

By Louise Homer, Contralto

(In Italian) 88200 12-inch, $3.00

The opening of the fourth scene shows the unhappy Marguerite seated at her spinning wheel, brooding over the sorrows which have overtaken her young life. Siebel, her faithful friend, enters and talks of vengeance against the absent Faust, but Marguerite defends him and sadly goes into the house. Left alone, Siebel, with gentle melancholy, sings this exquisite romance, beginning:

This song has long been a favorite number with many famous contraltos, and its lovely melody is frequently used in our churches as a setting to "Come Unto Me," and other sacred words.

Siebel:

When all was young and pleasant May was blooming,
I, thy poor friend, took part with thee in play;
Now that the cloud of Autumn dark is glooming,
Now is for me, too, mournful the day!

Hope and delight have pass'd from life away!
We were not born with true love to trifle!
Nor born to part because the wind blows cold:
What tho' storm the summer garden rifle,
O Marguerite! Still on the bough is left a leaf of gold!

From Ditson libretto, copy 't 1896.

The scene abruptly changes to the square in front of the cathedral, with the house of Marguerite shown at one side. The victorious soldiers, just returned from the war, enter, accompanied by delighted wives and sweethearts, and sing their famous Soldiers' Chorus, a jubilant inspiring number, and one of the finest marches ever composed.

SOLDIERS' CHORUS—ACT IV
This number was written for a previous opera by Gounod, but was taken bodily and added to Faust, a happy thought which added another splendid touch to a successful work.

Several renditions of this great chorus are offered, both vocal and instrumental, and a complete translation of the words is given.

(English) (Italian) (French)
The Soldiers' Chorus—Deponiam il brando—Déposons les armes

Fold the flag, my brothers,
Fold the flag, my brothers,
Lay by the spear!
We come from the battle once more;
Our pale praying mothers,
Our wives and sisters dear,
Our loss need not deplore,
Yes! 'tis a joy for men victorious,
To the children by the fire, trembling in our arms,
To old age of old time glorious,
To talk of war's alarms!

Glory and love to the men of old,
Their sons may copy their virtues bold,
Courage in heart and sword in hand,
Ready to fight or ready to die, for Fatherland!
Who needs bidding to dare, by a trumpet blown?

Who lacks pity to spare, when the field is won?
Who would fly from a foe, if alone, or last?
And boast he was true, as cowards might do
When peril is past?
Glory and love to the men of old, etc.

Now to home again we come,
The long and fiery strife of battle over;
Rest is pleasant after toil as hard as ours
Beneath a stranger sun.
Many a maiden fair is waiting here
To greet her truant soldier lover,
And many a heart will fail and brow grow pale,
To hear the tale of peril he has run!
Glory and love to the men of old, etc.

The unhappy Marguerite, shunned by her companions and deserted by all save the faithful Siebel, is brooding within the cottage, fearing to meet her brother, who has just returned from the war. Mephistopheles, not content with the evil he has already wrought, returns to taunt the maiden with her fault, and sings this insulting and literally infernal song, each verse of which ends with a mocking laugh.
Serenade—Mephistopheles (Catarina, While You Play at Sleeping)

By Pol Plançon, Bass

By Marcel Journet, Bass

After the second verse occurs this famous passage—

Mephisto. f

\[ \text{Ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! etc.} \]

with its beginning on a high G and its octave jumps to the low G, concluding with a peal of Mephistophelean laughter.

Two versions, by two famous exponents of the part of Mephistopheles, are offered for your choice.

Mephistopheles:

Thou who here art soundly sleeping,
Close not thus thy heart,
Close not thus thy heart!
Caterina! wake thee! wake thee!
Caterina! wake! 'tis thy lover near!
Hearken to my love-lorn pleading;
Let thy heart be interceding,
Awake, love, and hear!
Ha, ha, ha, ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! etc.

Caterina! cruel, cruel!
Cruel to deny to him who loves thee—
And for thee doth mourn and sigh—
A single kiss from thy rosy lips...
Thus to slight a faithful lover,
Who so long hath been a rover,
Too bad, I declare!
Ha, ha, ha, ha, ha!
Not a single kiss, my dear,
Unless the ring appear!
Ha, ha, ha, ha! etc.

Plancon's Mephistopheles was invariably a finished performance—witty, elegant, debonnaire and sonorous. It is a polished Devil that he pictured; yet beneath the polish we could see the sinister Satan ever present. In his record of this mocking serenade he is at his best, and the number is sung with the brilliancy and vocal finish to be expected of this fine artist.

Journet's impersonation has also been highly praised, and he sings the music superbly, acting with freedom and with an elegance that exhibits the Prince of Darkness as a gentleman, though we never lose sight of his inner nature. The famous serenade is given with much spirit by this artist.

Que voulez-vous, messieurs? (What is Your Will?) (Duel Scene)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor; Antonio Scotti, Baritone; and Marcel Journet, Bass

By Ellison Van Hoose, Tenor; Marcel Journet, Bass; and Emilio de Gogorza, Baritone

Valentine, smarting with shame of his sister’s disgrace, comes from the house and exclaims, “What is your will with me?” Mephistopheles replies in his most mocking voice that their “serenade” was not meant for him. “For my sister, then!” cries Valentine in a rage, and draws his sword. The great trio then follows, leading up to a splendid climax.

This thrilling trio forms one of the most effective scenes in the opera, and is closely followed by the duel, in which Valentine is wounded.
Morte di Valentino (Death of Valentine)
By Antonio Scotti, Baritone, and Grand Opera Chorus
(In French) 88282 12-inch, $3.00

Leaving the wounded Valentine on the ground, the assailants rapidly depart, and a crowd of soldiers and women assemble around the dying soldier, the chorus here crying out in accents of pity, in which Marguerite joins. Valentine, seeing his sister, utters curses upon her, the solemnity of the scene enhanced by the sustained trumpet tones in the accompaniment. The throng endeavor to mitigate the dying man's anger, and Marguerite begs forgiveness, but Valentine dies with the curse upon his lips.

This dramatic scene is vividly pictured in the wonderful painting by Kreling, reproduced on the opposite page.

Scene de L'Eglise (I) (Church Scene, Part I)
By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano, and Marcel Journet, Bass
(In French) 89035 12-inch, $4.00

We now come to the impressive and almost terrible scene outside the church.

Marguerite, cursed by her dying brother, abandoned by all but the faithful Siebel, is kneeling at a small altar. Fearing to enter, and endeavoring to seek consolation in prayer, she supplicates Heaven to accept her repentance.

MARGUERITE:
Oh, Thou who on Thy throne
Giv'st an ear for repentance!
Here, before Thy feet, let me pray!

MEMENTO (invisible):
No! thou shalt pray no more!
Let her know ere she prayeth,
Demons of ill, what is in store!

CHORUS OF DEMONS:
Marguerite!

MARGUERITE (faintly):
Who calls me?

DEMONS:
Marguerite!

MARGUERITE (terrified):
I falter—afraid!
Oh! save me from myself!
Has even now the hour of torture begun!

As this terrible prophecy is heard from the invisible Evil Spirit, Marguerite is overcome with terror and sinks down almost fainting.

Scene de L'Eglise (II) (Church Scene, Part II)
By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano; Marcel Journet, Bass; and Metropolitan Opera Chorus
(In French) 89037 12-inch, $4.00

The unhappy girl, beside herself with terror, cries out wildly:

Ah! what sound in the gloom,
Is beneath me, around me?
Angels of wrath? is this your sentence of cruel doom?

121
Then as the chorale is heard from within the church, she endeavors to break the encircling Satanic spell and kneels again in prayer.

Choir (within the church):
When the book shall be unsealed,
When the future be revealed,
What frail mortal shall not yield?
Marguerite:
And I, the frailest of the frail,
Have most need of Thy forgiveness!
Mephistopheles:
No! Let them pray, let them weep!
But thy sin is deep, too deep,
To hope forgiveness! No!
Choir:
Where shall human sinner be,
How lie hid in earth and sea,
To escape eternity?
Marguerite (wildly):
Ah, the hymn is round and above me,
It bindeth a cord 'round my brow!
Mephistopheles:
Farewell, thy friends who love thee!
And thy guardians above thee!
The past is done! the payment now!
Marguerite and Choir:
O Thou! on Thy throne, who dost hear me,
Let a tear of mercy fall near me,
To pity and save!
Mephistopheles:
Marguerite! Mine art thou!
Marguerite: Ah!

Tormented beyond further endurance, the unhappy girl's reason gives way, and with a terrible cry she falls lifeless before the church.

Words are pitiful things in describing such a scene as this, given as these two artists render it. The conflict in the soul of Mephistopheles as he strives to prevent his victim from praying, while the sombre strains of the Dies irae issue from the church, form a musical picture which cannot be adequately described.

THE WALPURGIS NIGHT

At the period of the first production of Faust, a ballet was an absolutely essential part of an opera, if it were to be given at the Paris Opera, though to-day it is seldom performed. Gounod placed his ballet between the death of Valentine and the Prison Scene; called it a Walpurgis Night, set it in a mountain fastness amid ruins, and called to the scene the classic queens, Helen, Phryne and Cleopatra, who danced to weird and distorted versions of melodies from the opera.

Ballet Music (Part I—Valse, “Les Nubiennes”)

By L'Orchestre Symphonique, Paris
By Vessella's Italian Band

The first part, which in the opera accompanies the dance of the Nubian Slaves, is a most striking portion, beginning with introductory chords, followed by the violins in this delicious melody:

afterward repeated with bassoon obbligato.

Ballet Music No. 2—Adagio (Cleopatra and the Golden Cup)

By L'Orchestre Symphonique, Paris

The second part is the adagio movement accompanying the scene in which the Nubian Slaves drink from golden cups the poisons of Cleopatra, who herself moistens her lips from a vase in which she has dissolved her most precious pearls.

Ballet Music—Finale, “Danse de Phryne”
By L’Orchestre Symphonique, Paris
58021 12-inch, $1.00

The finale is brisk in movement, rising to a wild climax and ending suddenly with a crashing chord. It is a most effective and exciting bit of ballet composition, and companions the dance of Phryne, who surpasses all her rivals and wins the favor of Faust, arousing the anger and jealousy of the courtesans—Helen, Cleopatra, Aspasia and Lais—and the dance develops into a bacchanalian frenzy, graphically pictured in Gounod’s music.

ACT V

SCENE—The Prison Cell of Marguerite

The short final act of Faust is truly one of the grandest of operatic compositions, Goethe’s story giving Gounod ample opportunity for some most dramatic writing. Marguerite’s reason is gone—grief and remorse have driven her insane, and in a frenzy she has destroyed her child. Condemned to death, she lies in prison, into which Mephistopheles and Faust, defying bolts and bars, have entered.

“Mon coeur est pénétré d’effouvanter!” (My Heart is Torn)
By Geraldine Farrar and Enrico Caruso
(In French) 89033 12-inch, $4.00

Gazing at the unhappy girl, who is sleeping on a pallet of straw, Faust cries:

and, as the full measure of his own guilt comes to him, continues:

FAUST:
Oh, what anguish! She lies there at my feet
A young and lovely being, imprisoned here
As if herself, not I, were guilty!
No wonder that her fright has reason to enrage away!
Marguerite! Marguerite!

Marguerite (awaking):
Ah, do I hear once again, the song of time gone by—
’Twas not the cry of the demons—
’Tis his own voice I hear!

She forgets all but that her loved one is before her, and sings in a transport of love

Marguerite:
Ah! I love thee only!
Since thou cam’st to find me
No tears more shall blind me!
Take me up to Heaven,
To Heaven by thy aid!

Attends! voici la rue (This is the Fair)
By Geraldine Farrar and Enrico Caruso
(In French) 89034 12-inch, $4.00

Marguerite’s mind wandering, she sings dreamily of the Fair, where first Faust appeared to her:

’Tis the Fair!
Where I was seen by you, in happy days gone by,
The day your eye did not dare
To meet my eye!

Marguerite now rehearses the first meeting with Faust, his respectful greeting, and her modest and dignified reply:

“High born and lovely maid, forgive my humble duty;
Let me your willing slave, attend you home to-day?”

“No my lord! not a lady am I, nor yet a beauty,
Not a lady, not a beauty,
And do not need an arm to help me on my way!”

FAUST (in despair):
Come away! If thou lov’st me!
Marguerite (dreamily, her thoughts in the past):
How my garden is fresh and fair!

Every flower is incense breathing,
And through the still evening air
A cloud of dew, with perfume wreathing;
Hark! how the nightingale above
To every glowing crimson rose
Fondly murmurs thy love!

FAUST (arguing her):
Yes! but come! They shall not harm thee!
Come away!
There is yet time to save thee!
Marguerite! Thou shalt not perish!

Marguerite (listlessly):
’Tis all too late! Here let me die!
Farewell! My memory live to cherish!

* Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED FAUST RECORDS, page 125.
The impassioned duet then follows, Faust endeavoring to persuade her to escape; but the poor weak mind cannot grasp the idea of safety. The duet is interrupted by the impatient Mephistopheles, whose brutal "Alerte" begins the final trio.

Trio—Alerte! ou vous êtes perdus! (Then Leave Her!)

(In French) 95203 12-inch, $5.00
By Victor Opera Trio
(In English) 60097 10-inch, .75
By Huguet, Lara and de Luna
(Double-faced—See below) 62085 10-inch, .75

Mephistopheles, fearing the coming of the jailers, and uncertain of his own power, cries out:

Then leave her, then leave her, or remain to your shame; if it please you to stay, mine is no more the game!

Marguerite (in horror, recognizing the Evil One, the cause of all her woes):

Who is there? Who is there? Dost thou see, there in the shadow;

As he sings, the tramping and neighing of horses are heard in the accompaniment.

Marguerite (with fresh courage, defying him):

Away, for I will pray! (in rapture)

Holy Angels, in Heaven bless'd

My spirit longs with thee to rest!

FAUST: Come, ere 'tis too late to save thee!

The inspiring trio, perhaps the most thrilling and moving of all operatic compositions, then commences; Marguerite continuing her prayer, Faust urging her to follow him, while Mephistopheles, in desperation, repeats his warning to Faust.

Mephistopheles:
Let us leave her!
Come away! the dawn is grey,
Come, ere they claim thee!
FAUST:
Lean on my breast.
O come! I'm here to save thee!

At the close of the trio, Mephistopheles is about to triumph over the soul of his victim, when a company of angels appear and announce that Marguerite is saved. The Evil One, dragging Faust with him, disappears in a fiery abyss.

Scene and Period: The action is supposed to take place in Castile, about the year 1340.

Favorita so abounds with charming airs, fine music and striking dramatic situations that it is difficult to account for the neglect of it in America. The opera was revived, it is true, in 1905, with Caruso, Walker, Scotti and Plaçon, but has not since been given.

However, for the consolation of those who admire Donizetti's beautiful work, the Victor has collected all the best airs and several of the stirring concerted numbers, so that the opera, given by famous artists, may be enjoyed in the comfort and seclusion of the home.

ACT I

SCENE—The Monastery of St. James

The rise of the curtain discloses a Spanish cloister with its secluded garden and weather-stained wall, while in the distance is a glimpse of the tiled roofs of the city. Ferdinand, a novice in the monastery, confesses to the Prior, Balthazar, that he has seen a beautiful woman and has fallen in love with her. He describes his meeting with the fair one in a lovely song, Una vergine.

Una vergine (Like An Angel)

By Florencio Constantino, Tenor

The good Prior is horrified and urges him to confess and repent.

Non sai tu che d'un giusto (Know'st Thou)

By Gino Martinez-Patti, Tenor, and Cesare Preve, Bass

BALTHAZAR:
Ah, my son, I love thee! May thy innocence rescue thee still! Thou, thou who shouldst be my successor, And all my solemn duties fill.
FERDINAND:
Ah, father, I love thee!
BALTHAZAR:
This woman, wretched one! oh, knowest thou Who has lur'd thee thus to shame? Knowest thou her, for whom thy holiest vow Is forfeit? Her rank—her name?
FERDINAND:
I know her not; but I love her!
BALTHAZAR:
Begone! too profane! Fly these cloisters Far, far from hence!—avoid my sight.

FERDINAND (in rapture):
Yes, ador'd one! this heart's dearest idol! For thee I will break ev'ry tie! To thee all my soul I surrender— At thy dear feet content to die! Forgive me! Father, I go!
BALTHAZAR:
Hence, audacious! away in madness! I'll not curse thee! no—depart! If Heaven spare thee, soon in sadness, Thou'll hither bring a broken heart!
FERDINAND:
Ah, dear Idol! this heart so enchanting, In vain thy spell! I strive to break! To thee only my truth maintaining, My cloister I forsake!
The Prior's pleading fails to restore Ferdinand to his duty, and he leaves the convent to search for the beautiful unknown. As he goes he turns and stretches out his arms toward Balthazar, who averts his head.

The scene changes to the island of Leon, where Inez, an attendant of Leonora, and a chorus of maidens are gathering flowers. They sing a melodious chorus,

Bei raggi lucenti (Ye Beams of Gold)
By Ida Roselli, Soprano, and La Scala
Chorus (In Italian) *62635 10-inch, $0.75
which tells of the love which their mistress feels for a handsome youth whom she has seen but once, and who is now on his way to the Isle at Leonora's request.

Ferdinand, who, shortly after his departure from the monastery, had received a note bidding him come to the Isle of Leon, now arrives in a boat, blindfolded, is assisted to land by the maidens, and the bandage removed. He gazes around him wonderingly, and asks Inez the name of the unknown lady who has sent for him. She smilingly refuses, and tells him only her mistress may reveal the secret. Leonora now appears, and the maidens depart. A tender love scene follows, but the Favorite is anxious, fearing that Ferdinand will learn that she is the King's mistress. She shows him a parchment which she says will insure his future, and then bids him leave her forever.

Fia vero! lasciarti! (Fly From Thee!)
By Clotilde Esposito and Sig. Martinez-Patti *68309 12-inch, $1.25
Ferdinand, beginning the duet, indignantly refuses, saying:

Ferdinand:
Fly from thee! Oh, never!
'Twere madness to try
From thee to sever;
'Twere better to die!
Leonora:
Farewell! Go; forget me!

Inez enters and whispers to Leonora that the King has arrived at the villa. Leonora gives Ferdinand the parchment and bids him again to depart, then exits hastily. Ferdinand reads it and is delighted to find that it is a captain's commission, and declares that he will win great honors to lay at the feet of his love.

ACT II
SCENE—Gardens of the Alcazar Palace

The King enters and admires the beauty of the palace, which he has just acquired from the Moors by the victory of his army, led by the young captain, Ferdinand. A message comes from Balthazar, the King's father-in-law, who is at the head of the powerful Church party, and Alfonso is threatened with the wrath of the Church if he does not give up Leonora. In a fine air he declares he will not submit.

Vien Leonora (Leonora, Thou Alone)
By Francesco Cigada, Baritone (In Italian) *68061 12-inch, $1.25
Leonora enters and the King tenderly asks the cause of her melancholy. She tells him her position is intolerable, and asks that she be allowed to leave the Court. She begins the duet, Quando le soglie.

Quando le soglie (From My Father's Halls)

Leonora recalls the circumstances connected with her departure from her father's home.

MLLE. BAILAC AS FAVORITA

They are interrupted by the entrance of Balthazar, who brings the mandate from the Pope. The King defies him, saying:

King:
My will is sacred! On my brow
Rests the royal diadem!

Balthazar then begins the finale, one of the most impressive of the concerted numbers.

Ah! paventa il furor (The Wrath of Heaven)

By Amelia Codolini, Francesco Cigada, Aristodemo Sillich and La Scala Chorus

(In Italian) *16536 10-inch, $0.75

King:
Still this sudden tempest
Shall not bend me nor break me;
Calm thee, my Leonora,
Bright is thy destiny.

Balthazar (denouncing Leonora):
All ye that hear me
Shun the adulteress;
Accurs'd of Heaven is she!

The curtain falls on a dramatic tableau,—Leonora weeping with shame, the King hesitating between love and ambition, while the terrible Balthazar thunders the papal curse down upon the guilty pair.

ACT III

SCENE—A Room in the Palace

Ferdinand, who has won distinction in the wars, is received by the King, who asks him to name his own reward. The young captain asks for the hand of a noble lady to whom he owes all his renown, and when the King asks her name he points to Leonora. Alfonso gazes at her coldly and sternly and sings his ironical air.

He consents to the marriage, however, and announcing that they must prepare to wed in an hour, goes out with Ferdinand. Leonora, left alone, decides to sacrifice her own feeling and renounce Ferdinand. She gives expression to her mingled joy and despair in a noble air:

O mio Fernando (Oh, My Ferdinand)

By Margarete Matzenauer, Mezzo-Soprano (In Italian) 88363 12-inch, $3.00

Leonora:

Oh, my Ferdinand, were mine this earth's whole treasure—

Mine, too, each star of yon blue heav'n:

To purchase thee one pleasure,

All, all at once by this fond hand were giv'n!

All should be thine, save my poor name degraded;

And thine should be, too, my life's latest sigh!

Ah! But ere I give to thee a name thus clouded,

Her resolution is no sooner taken, however, than she resolves to tell him all and throw herself on his mercy.

She calls Inez, and bidding her seek out Ferdinand and reveal all, goes to her apartments to prepare for the wedding. Inez prepares to obey, but on her way is arrested by the order of the King.

The King enters with Ferdinand, to whom he gives the title of Count of Zamora. Leonora appears and is overjoyed to see Ferdinand still looking at her lovingly, not knowing that Inez has failed in her mission, and that he is yet ignorant of her secret.

The ceremony is performed and the pair are presented to the Court, but are met with cold and averted looks. Ferdinand, although not aware of the cause, resolved this and is about to draw his sword when Balthazar enters and demands peace.

When he learns of the wedding he is horrified, and tells Ferdinand he has married the King's mistress. Ferdinand is furious and denounces the King, who, seized with sudden remorse, begins the great finale to Act III.

Orsu, Fernando (Stay! Hear Me, Ferdinand!)

By Maria Cappiello, Mezzo-Soprano; Giuseppe Acerbi, Tenor;

Francesco Cigada, Baritone (In Italian) 62659 10-inch, $0.75

Ferdinand hurls at the King's feet his badge of honor and his broken sword and leaves the Court, followed by Balthazar. Leonora faints as the curtain falls.

ACT IV

SCENE—The Cloisters of the Monastery

The opening number in this act is the impressive Splendon piu belle, considered by many critics to be the finest of the Favorita numbers. The scene represents the cloister at the Convent of St. James of Compostella, illumined by the rays of the rising sun. The monks have assembled to welcome back the prodigal Ferdinand, who, heartbroken at the falseness of Leonora, is returning to renew his vows. The ceremonies are conducted by Balthazar, who begins this great number.

Splendon piu belle in ciel le stelle (In Heavenly Splendor)

By Marcel Journet and Metropolitan Chorus 74273 12-in., $1.50

By Torres de Luna, Bass, and La Scala Chorus (In Italian) 68061 12-in., 1.25

By Perello de Segurola, Bass, and La Scala Chorus (Italian) 16551 10-in., .75

Balthazar entreats him to lift his eyes from earthly things and contemplate the stars, which typify a forgiving Heaven.

The monks now go into the chapel to prepare for the final rites, and Ferdinand, left alone, casts a look behind him to the world he has left forever, and sings his lovely Spirto gentil.

Spirto gentil (Spirit So Fair)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor (In Italian) 86004 12-inch, $3.00

By Gennaro de Tura, Tenor (In Italian) 76012 12-inch, 2.00

*Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED LA FAVORITA RECORDS, page 130.
The monks now lead Ferdinand to the chapel. Leonora, who has come hither disguised as a novice to entreat forgiveness of her lover, hears him take the final vows and despairingly falls at the altar. Ferdinand comes from the chapel, and seeing a poor novice, assists him to rise. He is at first horrified to recognize Leonora, and bids her begone, but she pleads for mercy.

Leonora:
Ah, heavenlike, thy mercy showing,
Turn not thy heart away from me!

Ferdinand (his love returning):
Yet more power hath love;
Come, could I possess thee
There's naught I would not brave,
Aye, here and hereafter!

Ferdinand:
In thee delighting, all else scorning,
A father's warning, my country, my fame!
Ah, faithless dame, a passion inviting,
Fair honor blighting, branding my name,
Grief alone thou leav'st, phantom of love!

Waken once more in my heart!
(Impetuously.)
I love thee!
Come, ah, come, 'tis vain restraining
Passion's torrent onward that dashes,
O'er my bosom still art thou reigning
And we together will live and die!

Pietoso al par d'un Nume (As Merciful as God)
By Clotilde Esposito, Soprano, and Martinez-Patti, Tenor
(Double-faced—See below) (In Italian) 62659 10-inch. $0.75

Again gently reminding him of his vows, she falls from weakness and privation.

Leonora (feeably):
Heav'n forgive me, now I'm dying,
Ferdinand, I am happy,
We shall hereafter meet no more to be parted,
Farewell, now, farewell!
(Shedies.)

Fidelio must ever be regarded with great interest as being the only opera written by one of the greatest composers. Originally given as Fidelio, it was rewritten and condensed into two acts by Breuning, still a third revision being made in 1814 by Treitschke. At the time of the second production in 1806 the title was changed to Leonore, Beethoven writing a new overture, now known as Leonore No. 3. A portion of this splendid number has been played here by Pryor’s Band, while the complete overture is given in three parts by the Victor Concert Orchestra.

Leonore Overture No. 3

(Parts I and II) 35268 12-inch, $1.25

By Victor Concert Orchestra (Part III)
Adagio from Fourth Symphony (Beethoven) Vessella’s Italian B 35269 12-inch, 1.25

The action of the opera occurs in a fortress near Seville. Don Florestan, a Spanish nobleman, has been imprisoned here for life, and to make his fate certain his mortal enemy, Don Pizarro, Governor of the prison, has announced his death, meanwhile putting the unfortunate man in the lowest dungeon, where he is expected to die by gradual starvation, thus rendering unnecessary a resort to violent means.

One of the best numbers in the opera is this fine air in D minor, which has been sung for the Victor by Mr. Goritz.

Ha, welch ein Augenblick (Fateful Moment)

By Otto Goritz, Baritone (In German) 64165 10-inch, $1.00

In this the wicked Governor unfolds his hatred and his malignant intentions toward Florestan.
VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA—BEETHOVEN'S FIDELIO

GOVERNOR:
Fateful moment! My revenge is near!
Long I've waited for this hour,
Fearful lest he should escape me!
Over my enemy I triumph;
He who would my life have taken!
Oh, fateful moment!
Ah, what a day is this!
My vengeance shall be sated,
And thou, thy doom is fated.
Once in the dust I trembled
Beneath thy conquering steel,
But fortune's wheel is turning
In torments thou art burning
The victim of my hate!

An extremely pleasant and agreeable person this Spanish Governor must have been! Goritz, whose Pizarro is one of his greatest impersonations, sings this striking air in a highly effective manner, fairly exuding the spirit of revenge.

Don Florestan, however, has a devoted wife who refuses to believe the report of his death. Disguising herself as a servant, and assuming the name of Fidelia, she secures employment with Rocco, the head jailor. Rocco's daughter falls in love with the supposed handsome youth, and he is soon in such high favor that he is permitted to accompany Rocco on his visits to the prisoner.

Hearing that the Minister of the Interior is coming to the prison to investigate the supposed death of Florestan, the Governor decides to murder him, and asks Rocco's help. Fidelio overhears the conversation and gets Rocco to allow her to dig the grave. Just as Don Pizarro is about to strike the fatal blow, Fidelio rushes forward, proclaims herself the wife of the prisoner and shields him. The Governor is astonished for a moment, but recovers himself and is about to sacrifice both, when a flourish of trumpets announces the coming of the Minister, and Don Pizarro is soon disgraced, while Florestan is pardoned and given back to his faithful wife.

THE STORY

One of the most melodious of Wagner's operas, and the most popular in Germany to-day, Fliegende Holländer is also the one which was most promptly condemned by the critics after its production. Its present vogue is a notable example of the change in musical taste since 1843.

Wagner was led to write the Flying Dutchman after reading Heine's legend of the unhappy mariner, who, after trying long in vain to pass the Cape of Good Hope, had sworn that he would not desist if he had to sail on the ocean to eternity. To punish his blasphemy he is condemned to the fate of the Wandering Jew, his only hope of salvation lying in his release through the devotion unto death of a woman; and to find such a maiden he is allowed every seven years to go on shore.

Flying Dutchman Overture

By Pryor's Band 31787 12-inch, $1.00

The overture is a complete miniature drama, embodying the events of the opera to follow. Driven by the gale, the Phantom Ship approaches the shore, while amid the fury of the tempest is heard the theme of The Curse:

![Musical notation]

The storm increases and reaches its height in a wonderful piece of writing. No composer ever succeeded in portraying a raging storm with such vivid effect. Amid a lull in the tempest, we hear the melancholy complaint of the Dutchman from the great air in the first act, 'Wie oft... Mein Grab, es schloss sich nicht?' (My grave—I find it not!) A gleam of hope appears in the Redemption theme, and a joyous strain is heard from the sailors of Daland's ship, which is safe in the harbor.

Thus the various events of the drama are presented in miniature; and the overture is in fact a complete résumé of the opera, summarizing the leading motifs. It is superbly played by Mr. Pryor's fine organization.

ACT I

SCENE—The Coast of Norway

The curtain rises showing a rocky sea coast in Norway, with the ship of Daland anchored near the shore. As the crew furl the sails, Daland goes ashore, and climbing the cliff, sees that he is only seven miles from home, but as he must wait for a change in the wind, bids the crew go below and rest.

The Steersman remains on watch, and to keep awake sings a sailor ballad:

Steersman:

Through thunder and wars of distant seas,
My maiden, come I near!
Over towering waves, with southern breeze,
My maiden am I here!
My maiden, were there no south wind,
I never could come to thee;
O fair south wind, to me be kind!
My maiden, she longs for me!
Ho-yo-ho! Hallo-ho!

From the shores of the south, in far-off lands,
I oft on thee have thought;
Through thunder and waves from Moorish sands,
A gift I thee have brought.
My maiden, praise the sweet south wind—I bring thee a golden ring.
O fair south wind, to me be kind!
My maiden doth spin and sing.
Ho-yo-ho! Hallo-ho!
Senta and the Maidens  (Mme. Gaski on the Right)
He soon falls asleep, however, and fails to see the Flying Dutchman, which now appears, with blood-red sails and black masts, for one of her periodical visits.

Wie oft in Meeres tiefsten Schlund (In Ocean's Deepest Wave)

By Otto Goritz, Baritone

The spectral crew furl the blood-red sails and drop the rusty anchor. The Dutchman stands on the deck, and delivers his great soliloquy. He gloomily gazes at the land, and sings his preliminary recitative:

The term is past, and once again are ended the seven long years; The weary sea casts me upon the land. Ha! haughty ocean! A little while and thou again wilt hear me! Though thou art changeful, unchanging is my doom! Release, which on the land I seek for, Never shall I meet with! True, thou heaving ocean, am I to thee Until thy latest billow shall break, Until at last thou art no more!

An introduction in 6-8 allegro molto leads to the aria:

DUTCHMAN:

Engulf'd in ocean's deepest wave, Oft have I long'd to find a grave; But ah! a grave, I found it not! I oft have blindly rushed along, To find my death sharp rocks among; But ah! my death, I found it not. And oft, the pirate boldly daring, My death I've courted from the sword, Here, cried I, work thy deeds unsparing, My ship with gold is richly stor'd!

When thou didst tell me how to gain release? A single hope with me remaineth, A single hope still standeth fast; When all the dead are raised again, Destruction then I shall attain. Ye worlds, your curse continue not! Endless destruction be my lot!

Daland comes on deck and is astonished to see the strange ship. He wakes the Steersman and they hail the stranger, who asks Daland to give him shelter in his home, offering him treasure from his ship. On hearing that Daland has a daughter he proposes marriage. The simple Norwegian is dazzled by such an honor from a man apparently so wealthy, and freely consents, providing his daughter is pleased with the stranger.

The wind changes and Daland sails for his home, the Dutchman promising to follow at once.

ACT II

SCENE—A Room in Daland’s Home

Trafit ihr das Schiff (Senta’s Ballad)

By Johanna Gadski, Soprano

(In German) 88116 12-inch, $3.00
The maidens are busily spinning—all but Senta, Daland’s daughter, who is idly dreaming, with her eyes fixed on the fanciful portrait of the Flying Dutchman which hangs on the wall.

The legend of the unhappy Hollander has made a strong impression on the young girl, and he seems almost a reality to her. The maidens ridicule her, saying that her lover, Eric, will be jealous of the Dutchman. Senta rouses herself and commences the ballad, which begins with the motive of The Curse. With growing enthusiasm she goes on, describing the unhappy lot of the man condemned to sail forever on the sea unless redeemed by the love of a woman. Then with emotion she cries:

This is the theme of Redemption by Woman’s Love, and as Senta sings the beautifully tender and melodious phrase, she runs toward the portrait with outstretched arms, hardly conscious of the now alarmed maidens.

SENTA:

Saw ye the ship on the raging deep
Blood-red the canvas, black the mast?
On board unceasing watch doth keep
The vessel’s master pale and ghast!
Hui! How roars the wind! Yo-ho-hoe! Yo-ho-hoe!
Hui! How bends the mast! Yo-ho-hoe! Yo-ho-hoe!
Hui! Like an arrow she flies
Without aim, without goal, without rest!
(She gazes at the portrait with growing excitement)
Yet can the spectre seaman,
Be freed from the curse infernal,
Find he a woman on earth
Who’ll pledge him her love eternal.
Ah! that the unhappy man may find her
Pray, that Heaven may soon
In pity grant him this boon!

Mme. Gadski, whose Senta is always a fine impersonation, sings this dramatic number most expressively. The difficult attack on the high G, which occurs several times, is beautifully taken and perfectly recorded.

The maidens are so alarmed at Senta’s outburst of passion that they run out and call Eric, who meets them at the door with news of the Dutchman’s arrival. They run to the shore while Eric remains and reproaches Senta. She refuses to listen and the distracted lover runs out.

Suddenly the door opens and the Dutchman appears. Senta is transfixed with surprise as she involuntarily compares the portrait with the living man. A long silence follows. The Dutchman, his eyes fixed on the glowing face of the maiden, advances toward her. Daland soon observes that the others pay no attention to him, and well satisfied with the apparent understanding between the stranger and his daughter, leaves them together.

The Hollander sees in Senta the angel of whom he had dreamed and who is to banish the curse, and she sees the original of the portrait on which the sympathy of her girlish and romantic heart had been lavished. The Hollander asks Senta if she agrees with her father’s choice of a husband. She gladly consents, and a long love duet follows, the final theme of which is “faith above all.”

Wie aus der Ferne (Like a Vision)
By Otto Goritz, Baritone (In German) 74322 12-inch. $1.50

Versank ich jetzt (Do I Dream?)
By Johanna Gadski, Soprano, and Otto Goritz, Baritone (In German) 88370 12-inch. $3.00

Wohl konn’ ich Weibes (Woman’s Holy Duties)
By Johanna Gadski, Soprano, Otto Goritz, Baritone (German) 88371 12-inch. $3.00
At the close of the duet, The Dutchman and Senta rejoice at his deliverance from the spell:

THE FLYING DUTCHMAN:
A healing balm for all my sorrows
From out her plighted word doth flow.

SENTA:
'Twas surely wrought by pow'r of magic
That I should his deliv'ry be.

THE FLYING DUTCHMAN:
Hear this! Release at last is granted!
Hear this, ye mighty:
Your power is now laid low!

SENTA:
Here may a home at last be granted,
Here may he rest, from danger free!
What is the power within me working?
What is the task it bids me do?
Almighty, now that high Thou hast raised me,
Grant me Thy strength, that I be true!

Daland re-enters and is delighted to find such a complete understanding between the two. He invites the Dutchman to the fête that evening in celebration of the safe arrival of the Norwegian ship. Senta repeats her vow unto death, and a magnificent trio closes the act.

ACT III

SCENE—Daland’s Harbor

This scene shows the ships anchored in the bay near Daland’s home. Daland’s vessel is gay with lanterns, in contrast to the gloom and silence which marks the Dutchman’s ship. A gay Norwegian chorus is followed by a spirited hornpipe with a most peculiar rhythm. Bits of these numbers are to be heard in the Pryor’s Band records of the Overture and Fantasia.

The maidens now appear with baskets of eatables, and are joyfully received by the sailors. Having supplied the wants of their own countrymen, they approach the Dutchman’s ship and call to the sailors, but only a ghostly silence rewards them. Piqued at this neglect, they turn their remaining baskets over to the Norwegian sailors and return home.

Suddenly the sea around the Dutchman begins to rise, and a weird glow lights the ship. The crew appear and begin a sepulchral chant, which causes the gay Norwegians to cease singing and cross themselves in terror, and finally to go below. With mocking laughter, the crew of the Dutchman also disappear and the ship is in darkness.

Senta and Eric appear and a stormy scene ensues. He has heard of her engagement to the strange captain, and is beside himself. He kneels and begs her to have pity on him. Suddenly the Hollander comes upon the scene and is horror-stricken at the tableau. Believing Senta to be false, he cries, “All is lost; Senta, farewell!”

The crews of both ships appear and the townsmen rush to the scene. The Dutchman reveals his identity and declares himself cursed forever. He springs upon his ship—the crimson sails expand as if by magic and the ship departs, with the crew chanting their weird refrain.

Senta, in wild exaltation, rushes to the highest rock, calling to the departing vessel,
"I am faithful unto death," and throws herself into the sea. The Flying Dutchman sinks beneath the water, and rising from the wreck can be seen the forms of Senta and the Dutchman clasped in each other's arms. The curse has been banished—true love has triumphed!

This brilliant selection contains some of the finest music of this wonderful masterpiece, in which Wagner has portrayed the story of the Dutchman condemned to sail forever on the stormy sea unless redeemed by the love of a woman.

Two variations of the exquisite theme representing Redemption by Woman's Love are given. We first hear the magnificent strain played by the orchestra in Act III when Senta plunges into the sea, after the Dutchman, believing her false, has sailed away; then follows the theme first heard in Senta's ballad, one of the finest numbers in the opera. Then appears the second of the two principal themes: the Flying Dutchman motive:

!Motive of the Flying Dutchman

a weird melody representing the restless wanderer. In strong contrast comes the rollicking chorus of Daland's sailors, "Steersman, Leave the Watch," and the fantastic dance which follows:

!Dance

The Fantasia is brought to an effective close with a portion of the great duet between Senta and the Dutchman, leading up to a splendid climax.

Scene and Period: Spain and Italy; about the middle of the eighteenth century.

Verdi's opera of La Forza del Destino was never a great success; its story, which is taken from a drama of the Duke of Rivas, entitled Don Alvaro o la Fuerzer del Sino, being doleful and so crowded with horrors that not even the beautiful music could atone for the gloomy plot. Old opera-goers will remember the last production of the opera at the Academy in 1881, with Annie Louise Cary, Campanini, Galassi and Del Puente in the cast.

The only production in America subsequent to that time was that of the Lombardi Opera Company in San Francisco several years ago.

The overture is a most interesting and rather elaborate one.

Overture  (Double-faced—See page 145)

By Arthur Pryor's Band 35215 12-inch, $1.25
La Scala Orchestra 68009 12-inch. 1.25

It opens with a trumpet blast which sufficiently foreshadows the tragic character of the opera, this being followed by an air in the minor, leading up to a striking theme which steals in softly from the strings.

This is the beautiful subject of the Madre Pietosa, afterwards heard with such magnificent effect in the opera.

Part II opens with a light and pretty pastoral melody quite in the Italian vein. A notably brilliant passage for strings brings us again to the Madre Pietosa melody, this time delivered in a triumphant fortissimo, after which the overture works up to a truly animated and powerful finale.
ACT I

SCENE—Drawing Room in the House of the Marquis of Calatrava

Don Alvaro, a noble youth from India, becomes enamored with Donna Leonora, the daughter of the Marquis of Calatrava, who is strongly opposed to the alliance. Leonora, knowing her father's aversion, determines to make her escape with Alvaro, aided by Curra, her confidant.

She is in the act of eloping when her father appears, and is accidentally slain by her lover. Leonora, horror-stricken, rushes to her father, who curses her with his dying breath.

ACT II

SCENE I—An Inn at Hornacuelos

The second act begins in a village inn, where Don Carlo, son of the murdered Marquis, is disguised as a student in order to better avenge his father. Leonora, who is traveling in male attire, arrives at the inn, and is horror-stricken at seeing her brother, who has sworn to kill her lover Alvaro and herself. She flees to the convent of Hornacuelos, arriving at night.

SCENE II—The Convent of Hornacuelos

Kneeling in the moonlight, she prays to the Virgin to protect her. This beautiful prayer is splendidly sung here by Mme. Boninsegna, accompanied by the chorus of La Scala.

Madre, pietosa Vergine (Holy Mother, Have Mercy)

By Celestina Boninsegna, Soprano, and La Scala Chorus

(In Italian) 92031 12-inch, $3.00

The effect produced by the solo voice with the background of male voices singing the Venite in the chapel is powerful and thrilling, and forms one of the finest of the Victor reproductions of Verdi's scenes.

Leonora:
Oh, Holy Virgin,
Have mercy on my sins!
Send help from Heaven
To erase from my heart
That ungrateful one.
(The friars are heard in their morning hymn.)

The Friars:
Venite, adoremus et procelamus
An te Deum, ploremus, ploremus
Coram Domino, coram Domino qui fecit nos.

Leonora: I will go to the holy sanctuary.
The pious father cannot refuse to receive me.
O Lord! Have mercy on me,
Nor abandon me.

(She rings the bell of the convent.)

Leonora is admitted to the convent by the Abbots, to whom she confesses. He procures her a nun's robe and directs her to a cave, assuring her that a curse will rest upon anyone who seeks to know her name or to enter her abode. In her gratitude she sings the second great air.

La Vergine degli angeli (May Angels Guard Thee)

By Celestina Boninsegna, Soprano, and La Scala Chorus

(In Italian) 91075 10-inch, $2.00

Again we have the effect of the solemn chant of the priests blending with the prayer of Leonora.

The Friars:
La Vergine degli Angeli
Vi copra del suo manto,
E voi protegga vigilè
Di Dio l'Angelo santo.

Leonora:
Let the Holy Virgin
Cover you with her mantle,
And the angels of God
Watch over you!

(Leonora kisses the hand of the Abbots and goes to her retreat. The monks return to the church.)

ACT III

SCENE—A Military Camp near Velletri

In Act III we are transported to Italy, where we meet Alvaro, who has enlisted in the Spanish army. In a sad but beautiful air he recounts his misfortunes, and appeals to heaven for pity.

O tu che in seno agli Angeli (Thou Heavenly One)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor

(In Italian) 88207 12-inch, $3.00
Leonora! Seville! The desert educated me; unknown is my royal descent! My ancestors aspired to a throne. Alas! They were beheaded! Oh, when will my misfortune cease? Thou who hast ascended in heaven, all beautiful and pure from mortal sins, do not forget to look on me, a poor sufferer, who without hope fights eagerly for death against destiny! Leonora, help me and have mercy on my sufferings!

In the next scene he saves the life of Don Carlo, whose wanderings in search of vengeance have led him to this region. Both having assumed fictitious names, they do not know each other, and swear eternal friendship. Shortly afterward, during an engagement, Don Alvaro, wounded, is brought in on a stretcher by his soldiers. Thinking himself dying, he sends away the soldiers and requests that he be left alone with Don Carlo. The great duet, the finest number in the opera, then occurs.

Solenne in quest'ora (Swear in This Hour)
By Enrico Caruso, Tenor, and Antonio Scotti, Baritone
(In Italian) 89001 12-inch, $4.00
By Lambert Murphy and Reinald Werrenrath
(In Italian) 70103 12-inch, 1.25
By Carlo Barrera and Giuseppe Maggi
(In Italian) *68213 12-inch, 1.25
By Luigi Colazza and Ernesto Caronna
(In Italian) *63174 10-inch, .75

The wounded man confides a case of letters to his friend Don Carlo to be destroyed, making him swear that he will not look at the contents. Carlo swears, and the friends bid each other a last farewell.

Alvaro:
My friend... swear that you will grant with me... when I am dead destroy my last wish.

Carlo: I swear! Alvaro: Look at my breast. Carlo: A key!

Alvaro (feeably):
Open this case and you will find a sealed parcel. I trust it to your honor. It contains a mystery which must die.

Carlo: Put thy trust in heaven! Both: Adieu!

The Caruso and Scotti rendition of this number is considered by many to be one of the most perfect and beautiful of all the Red Seal Records. It is certainly the most wonderfully lifelike reproduction of these two great voices which could be imagined. The Purple Label Record by Mr. Murphy and Mr. Werrenrath is an excellent one, exhibiting the fine voices of these two young singers to great advantage.

Just at this point it may be well to settle a controversy which has been raging ever since the issue of this record in 1906. This argument concerns the identity of the voices in the opening measures, and is the natural result of a remarkable similarity between Caruso's lower register and the medium tones of Scotti's voice. The Victor Catalogue Editor now appoints himself a court of final appeal, and declares that contrary to the usual impression it is Caruso, not Scotti, who begins the record. Here are the opening measures just as sung by the artists:

* Double-Faced Record — For title of opposite side see the double-faced list on page 145.
Alvaro, however, does not die, and in the next scene his identity becomes known to Don Carlo, who challenges him. They fight, and Alvaro, thinking he has killed his enemy, resolves to end his days in a monastery.

ACT IV

SCENE—Same as Act II, Scene II

Five years have now elapsed and the last act reveals again the cloister of Hornacuelos, where Alvaro, now Father Raphael, is discovered by Don Carlo, who with a persistence rivaling that of a Kentucky mountaineer, revives the feud and tries to force him to renew the combat. Alvaro finally consents, and they agree to fight in a deserted spot near by. This agreement is expressed in a fiery duet.

Invano Alvaro! (In Vain, Alvaro!)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor, and Pasquale Amato, Baritone

(In Italian) 89052 12-inch, $4.00

The host of Victor opera-lovers who are familiar with the wonderful duet from Act III, by Caruso and Scotti, will note with delight the issue of another famous duet from this opera, sung by Caruso and Amato.

This great scene has been recorded in two parts. Carlo demands that Alvaro renew the feud, but the priest refuses, saying that vengeance is with God. Don Carlo taunts him with a terrible persistence, until the monk, goaded past endurance, consents to fight to the death.

Carlos:
In vain, Alvaro,
Thou hast hid from the world,
And concealed thy coward heart
With the habit of a monk!
My hate and desire for vengeance
Have enabled me to persist
Until I have discovered your retreat!
In this lonely spot
We shall not be disturbed,
And your blood shall wipe out
The stain upon my honor:
That I swear before God!

Alvaro (recognizing him):
Don Carlos! Thou livest!

Carlos:
Yes! and for long years
I have sought and now find thee.
By thy hand I fell,
But God restored my strength
That I may avenge thy crimes!
Here are two swords,
Thy choice now make!

Alvaro:
Leave me! By this holy habit
Thou may'st see my repentance!

Carlos (in fury):
Coward!
Thou shalt not hide behind thy robes!

Alvaro (agitated):
Coward! Oh, God
Give me strength to forgive thee!

Le minaccie, i fieri accenti (Thy Menaces Wild!)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor, and Pasquale Amato, Baritone

Alvaro recovers his poise and endeavors to appeal to the reason of his enemy, showing him the futility of reopening the feud. Part II begins as follows:

Alvaro (firmly):
Thy menaces wild
Be heard only by the winds,
I cannot listen!
Brother, let us submit to fate
And the will of God!

Carlos:
Thou hast left me
A sister deserted and dishonored!

Alvaro:
No! I swear it!
I adore her with a holy love.

Carlos (furiously):
Thy cowardly pleadings
Cannot move me to pity.
Take thy sword and fight!

Alvaro:
Brother, let me kneel to thee.
(He kneels.)

Carlos:
Ah, by such an act
Thou showest thy base origin!

Alvaro (rising, unable to control himself):
My lineage is brighter than a jewel—

Carlos (sneeringly):
A jewel flawed and discolored!

Alvaro (in fury):
Thou liest!
Give me a sword. Lead on!

Carlos:
At last!

Alvaro (recovering himself):
No, Satan shall not thus triumph.
(Throws down his sword.)

Carlos:
Then coward, I brand thee with dishonor!
( Strikes him.)

Alvaro:
Oh, God, no more!
(To Don Carlos)
Defend thyself!

Both:
We both must die,
Our hatred will be appeased
And Satan will claim us for his own!
ACT V

SCENE—A Wild Spot Near Hornacuelos

The scene changes to the vicinity of Leonora’s cave. Pale and worn, the unhappy woman comes from the cave, and in another great air implores Heaven to let her die, as she is unable to forget her lover.

Pace mio Dio (Mercy, O My Lord)

By Celestina Boninsegna, Soprano

(\textit{In Italian}) 92027 12-inch, $3.00

\textit{Leonora:}

Mercy, oh Lord!
My sorrows are too great to bear,
This fatal love has been my undoing,
But still do I love him,
Nor can I blot his image from my heart;
Yet 'tis Heaven’s decree that I shall see him no more!
Oh Lord, let me die,
Since death alone can give me peace!

A storm now breaks, and \textit{Leonora} retires within the cave just as \textit{Alvaro} and \textit{Carlo} appear for the final combat. \textit{Alvaro} recognizes the spot as an accursed one, but declares that it is a fitting place for the ending of so deadly a feud.

\textit{Don Carlo} falls mortally wounded, and desiring to repent his sins asks \textit{Alvaro}, who is known as \textit{Father Raphael}, to confess him, but the monk is under the curse of the cave and cannot. He goes to call the friar who dwells in the cave; \textit{Leonora} rushes forth, sees her brother wounded and embraces him, but true to his vow made in Act I he makes a dying effort and stabs her to the heart.

This dramatic scene has been put by Verdi into the form of a trio.

Non imprecare, umiliati (Swear Not, Be Humble)

By Ida Giacomelli, Soprano; Gino Martinez-Patti, Tenor; Cesare Preve, Bass (Double-faced—See below) (\textit{In Italian}) 68026 12-inch, $1.25

\textit{Don Alvaro} then completes the catalogue of horrors by throwing himself from a cliff just as the monks arrive singing the \textit{Miserere}. The curtain then falls, evidently because, as one critic has said, every member of the cast being dead, there seems to be no reasonable excuse for keeping it up any longer!

FRA DIAVOLO
(Frah Deah'-ooh-loh)

COMIC OPERA IN THREE ACTS

Libretto by Scribe, devised from the story of Lesueur's earlier opera, La Caverne. Music by Daniel François Esprit Auber. First production at the Opéra Comique, Paris, January 28, 1830. Presented in Vienna, 1830. London, at the Drury Lane Theatre, in English, November 3, 1831. In Italian at the Lyceum Theatre, London, July 9, 1857. First American production at the Old Park Theatre, New York, in English, June 20, 1833. It was not until 1864 that it was given in Italian in New York, and this was at the Academy of Music, with Clara Louise Kellogg. Colonel Mapleson gave three performances of the opera at the Academy of Music in 1885. It was recently revived at the Manhattan Opera and afterwards at the New Theatre by the Metropolitan forces.

Characters

FRA DIAVOLO, calling himself “Marquis of San Marco” ................ Tenor
LORD ROCBURG (Lord Allcash), an English traveler .................. Tenor
LADY PAMELA (Lady Allcash), his wife .......................... Soprano
LORENZO, Chief of the Carabiniers .............................. Tenor MATTEO, the innkeeper .................................................. Bass
ZERLINA, his daughter .................................................. Soprano
GIACOMO,  Companions of Fra Diavolo .................................. Bass
BEppo, ................................................................. Tenor

The Scene: Italy, in the neighborhood of Terracina.
The story of Fra Diavolo is melodramatic in the highest degree. Lorenzo, in command of the Roman Dragoons, is leaving Matteo’s inn to capture Diavolo and his brigands, just as Lord Rockburg and his wife, Pamela, who are traveling under the names of Lord and Lady Allcash, arrive, lamenting their misfortunes, having been robbed on the road. Another traveler, calling himself Marquis of San Marco, who is no other than Fra Diavolo, appears soon after and is also welcomed by the innkeeper, Matteo, and his daughter, Zerlina. Lorenzo is in love with Zerlina, but she has been promised by her father to a rich peasant. The Marquis openly courts Lady Allcash and at the same time manages to relieve her of her jewels.

Giacomo and Beppo, two of Diavolo’s companions, appear on the scene, and when all are asleep, are admitted through the window by the bandit. All three conceal themselves in Zerlina’s room, and after she has retired they proceed to again rob Lord and Lady Allcash. Lorenzo now returns, having killed most of the band of robbers and recovered the Englishman’s property.

He expects to receive the proffered reward of ten thousand piastres, and his hopes of winning Zerlina seem brighter.

The soldiers arrive at the inn in time to discover the robbery, but Diavolo covers the retreat of his fellow-bandits by pretending to have a rendezvous with some lady, arousing the jealousy of both the Englishman and Lorenzo, the latter challenging him to a duel.

The last act of the opera shows the forest where the duel is to take place. As Lorenzo sadly watches the marriage procession of Zerlina and the peasant Francisco approach, he recognizes in the crowd Giacomo and Beppo. Both are arrested by the young captain, who through them hopes to capture the chief, Fra Diavolo. The two brigands are forced to betray Diavolo and lure him into a trap, where he is ensnared and shot. As a fitting climax, the happy Lorenzo wins Matteo’s daughter for his bride.

Those who hear these records of Auber’s melodious opera will be charmed by the brilliant and fluent measures, varied here and there with pretty bits of sentiment, which go hand in hand with the romantic story of the Italian bandit.

The Victor offers a fine record of the Agnese la zitella, the popular Italian melody which Diavolo sings in Act II, to warn his companions, Beppo and Giacomo, that all is quiet in the house and they may now carry out their scheme to again rob Lord Rockburg and Lady Pamela.

Records of the Overture and principal selections from the opera by two famous bands are also offered, while the brilliant opera aggregation has given a tuneful presentation of some of the gems of Auber’s work.

Gems from Fra Diavolo

By the Victor Opera Company 31829 12-inch, $1.00
The medley opens with the chorus of greeting to the soldiers:

Victoria! Victoria! Joy now reigns around.

The remaining numbers are the boast of Diavolo as he sees victory for all his schemes: "The lord's gold and his wife all are mine!" and the chorus of thanksgiving at the final capture and death of the bandit, sung to the melody of Diavolo's air in Act I.

Cast

Scene and Period: Bohemia, shortly after the Seven Years’ War.
The word freischütz, probably better translated as "free marksman," means a Schütz or marksman who uses charmed bullets which do not depend on the aim of the shooter.

Overture to Freischütz

| By Sousa's Band | (Double-Faced—See page 151) | 35000 12-inch, $1.25 |
| By La Scala Orchestra | (Double-Faced—See page 151) | 62636 10-inch, .75 |

The overture presents the story of the opera in a condensed form. An introduction with a tender horn passage leads us into the forest. Night is falling and mysterious sounds are heard. The allegro, representing the doubts of the good but vacillating young hunter, begins, and the sound of the magic bullets can be heard as they drop in the melting pot. Next a beautiful melody, portraying love and happiness, appears, but this in turn is succeeded by another mood of distress. At length the triumphant strain indicative of the final victory is sounded, leading up to a splendid climax.

Sousa's Band has given a stirring performance of this brilliant overture, while the rendition by La Scala Orchestra will please those who prefer orchestral music.

The story of the opera is founded on a German tradition, told among huntsmen, that whoever will sell his soul to Zamiel, the Demon Hunter, may receive seven magic bullets, which will always hit the mark. For each victim whom he succeeds in securing for the Demon, his own life is extended, and he receives a fresh supply of the charmed missiles.

Cuno, head ranger to Ottakar, a Bohemian prince, has two assistants, Max and Caspar, both excellent marksmen. Max is in love with Agnes, Cuno's daughter, who has promised to be his bride only on condition that he proves himself the best shot at a forthcoming contest. This contest, however, is won by Kilian, a peasant. Max, in a dramatic air, bewails his bad luck.

Durch die Walder (Thro' the Forest)

By Daniel Beddoe, Tenor
(In English) 74244 12-inch, $1.50

He believes he is cursed by an evil spirit which causes his hand to fail.

Max:

O, I can bear my fate no longer!
E'en hope is banished from my soul!
What unknown grief thus haunts my spirit,
And o'er me works its dark control?
Thro' the forests, thro' the meadows,
Joy was wont with me to stray,

While my rifle, never failing,
Made each bird and beast my prey.
When at length from chase returning,
Ere rose before my sight,
Agnes, smiling met me,
Cloth'd in beauty's heavenly light.
But now am I by Heaven forsaken

Caspar, who has already put himself in the power of Zamiel, sees here an opportunity to extend his own days of grace, and advises Max to seek the magician and secure some of the magic bullets.

Néou, qu'il ne m'échappe pas (Caspar's Air)

By Marcel Journet, Bass
(In French) 64236 10-inch, $1.00

He finally induces Max to meet him in the Wolf's Glen in order to receive the magic bullets, which he declares will always hit the mark. Max departs and Caspar gives vent to a fierce joy in this florid and dramatic number.

In the meantime Agnes is anxiously awaiting her lover and is much alarmed at his non-appearance. Annie, her cousin, endeavors to cheer her by singing a gay air.
THE CASTING OF THE MAGIC BULLETS

And if swift emotion rushes,
Shot from answ'ring lip and eye,
Nothing worse than maiden blushes
Need the gallant stranger spy!

Annie begs Agnes to retire, but the young girl says she will wait for her lover. Left alone, she draws the curtains aside, revealing a starlight night. She exclaims at the beauty of the night, and folding her hands in prayer, she prays for the safety of her lover, and asks Heaven to watch over them both.

Preghiera (Agatha's Prayer)

By Emilia Corsi *62636 10-inch, $.75

Max arrives, followed by Annie, but seems embarrassed and says he must go to bring in a stag he has shot near the Wolf's Glen. Agnes begs him not to go near that haunted spot, but he disregards her warning and goes out.

The scene changes to the Wolf's Glen, where Max meets Caspar, and the magic bullets are cast amid scenes of horror, while the demon Zamiel hovers near awaiting his prey. Max is returning with his prize when he meets the Prince, who asks him to shoot a dove. The hunter complies, just missing Agnes, who has come to the wood in search of her lover. Caspar is wounded by the very bullet which he had intended should slay Agnes at the hands of Max. Zamiel carries off his victim, while Max is forgiven and all ends happily.

* Double-Faced Record—For titles of opposite sides see above list.
The opera is the work of an Italian nobleman, who, although a very wealthy man, is ambitious and makes the writing of operas his hobby. Germania is a picturesque and interesting opera, full of local color, describing the Germany of the time of Napoleon, with its many conspiracies; and for this the Baron has written much effective and agreeable music. The action takes place in 1813, at the time of the battle of Leipzig.
PROLOGUE

SCENE—An Abandoned Mill near Nuremberg

A company of students, under the leadership of Giovanni Palm, have occupied an old mill, and are shipping sacks of grain, which really contain political documents intended to rouse the people to revolt. Prominent among the students is Worms, who previously had a love affair with Ricke, a young girl who is now betrothed to Loewe, the poet and warm friend of Worms. Loewe is expected to arrive at any moment, and Ricke dreads his coming, as she has made up her mind to tell him her guilty secret. Worms, however, divines her purpose and bids her keep silent, as in the duel which was sure to occur Loewe would likely be the one to die.

Loewe arrives and is joyfully greeted by the conspirators. He encourages them to fresh efforts in his noble aria.

Studenti, udite! (Students, Hear Me!)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor

(In Italian) 87053 10-inch, $2.00

Caruso delivers this inspiring number with splendid effect, showing well the beauty and power of his marvelous voice.

The enthusiasm which follows Loewe’s great address is rudely interrupted by the arrival of the police, who seize Palm and take him away to his death.

ACT I

SCENE—A Cottage in the Black Forest

Seven years have elapsed. Hither Loewe has come after the disastrous campaign of 1806, which followed the plotting in the old mill. He lives in this hut with his aged mother and the two girls, Ricke and her sister Jane. Worms has disappeared and is supposed to be dead.

Loewe is about to be married to Ricke, and the bridesmaids now arrive to deck the cottage with flowers. Ricke, thinking of her past, is melancholy, but the marriage ceremony is performed and the bride and bridegroom are left alone. Federico clasps her in his arms and sings his beautiful air to the eyes of his bride.

Non chiuder gli occhi vaghi (Close Not Those Dreamy Eyes)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor

(In Italian) 87054 10-inch, $2.00

Forgetting the past, Ricke yields herself to the joy of the moment and tenderly kisses him, when suddenly from the forest is heard a familiar voice singing an old student song. "Worms!" joyfully cries Federico, and runs out to meet his old friend, who is wasted and battle-scarred.

Worms, in a dramatic aria, tells his friend how he has literally come back from the dead. He relates his thrilling escape from prison, his delight in his new-found liberty, and his earnest desire for vengeance.

Ferito, prigionier (A Wounded Prisoner)

By Pasquale Amato, Baritone

(In Italian) 88437 12-inch, $3.00

Amato, who was the original Worms in America, sings this great air with splendid effect. Worms is astonished to see Ricke, who has been listening half hidden behind the folds of a curtain. She looks coldly at him and he uneasily says he must be on his way. Federico protests, but Worms insists and departs. Ricke, overcome by this reminder of her past misfortune, resolves to leave her husband, and writes him a note and flees into the forest. Federico returns, reads the note, and wrongfully concludes that she has fled with Worms.

ACT II

SCENE—A Cellar in Konigsberg

In this underground retreat Worms is again plotting against Napoleon. A meeting of the Council is in progress, when Federico appears and demands that Worms shall fight with him to the death, but Worms, kneeling, asks Federico to kill him. Federico replies with a violent blow in the face, at which Worms decides to fight him, and preparations for the duel are begun. They are interrupted by the entrance of Queen Louise, who suggests that such brave men had better be using their swords for their country. Fired with enthusiasm, the enemies embrace each other and swear to die for Germany.

EPILOGUE

SCENE—The Battlefield of Leipzig

The awful three days' conflict is over and the field is a mass of ruins, battered wheels and dead and wounded men. Ricke searches for the body of Federico that she may look upon his face once more. She finds him dying, but he recognizes her, and telling her that the body of Worms is nearby, asks her to forgive him as he himself has done. Ricke looks on the face of the man who had ruined her life and forgives him.

She returns to her husband and when he dies in her arms waits beside his body for her own death, which she feels approaching. As the sun sets the defeated Napoleon with the shattered remains of his army is seen retreating.

Monks, Senators, Sailors, Shipwrights, Ladies, Gentlemen, Populace, Masquers, etc.

The action takes place in Venice, in the seventeenth century.

Gioconda is a work of great beauty, full of wonderful arias, duets and ensembles, with fine choral effects, and a magnificent ballet. The book is founded on Hugo’s “Tyrant of Padua,” and tells a most dramatic story, which, however, cannot be called inviting, as the librettist has crowded into it nearly all the crimes he could think of!

But the average audience does not concern itself much with these horrors, being engaged in listening to the beautiful music, and admiring the splendid scenes and colorful action. Therefore the story will be but briefly sketched here.

ACT I

SCENE—Street near the Adriatic Shore, Venice

Gioconda, a ballad singer who is in love with Enzo, a Genoese noble and captain of a ship now in the harbor, supports her blind mother, La Cieca, by singing in the streets of Venice. She has attracted the attention of Barnaba, an influential police spy, and he plans to gain her affections.

This is the situation at the rise of the curtain. The stage is filled with people: peasants, sailors, masquers, all in holiday attire. Barnaba is leaning against a pillar, watching the gay scene. The chorus sing their opening number, Sports and Feasting.

Feste! pane! (Sports and Feasting!)

By La Scala Chorus (In Italian) 45010 10-inch, $1.00

At the close of this number, Barnaba advances and announces the commencement of the Regatta. All hasten to the shore, while Barnaba remains to soliloquize on his plot to secure the lovely Gioconda. Gioconda enters, leading her mother, La Cieca, by the hand, and Barnaba hastily hides behind a column to watch them. La Cieca sings a beautiful air, blessing her daughter for her tender care, and this leads to a trio.

Figlia che reggi tremulo piè (Daughter, My Faltering Steps)
By A. Rossi Murino, Soprano; López Nunes, Soprano;
Ernesto Badini, Baritone

La Cieca:
Daughter, in thee my faltering steps
Find guidance and protection;
I gratefully bless my loss of sight,
That heightens thy affection!
While thou unto mankind thy songs are singing,
To Heav'n my ceaseless prayer's their flight are winging.
For thee I pray and render thanks to Fate
That left me sightless,—but not desolate!

Gioconda leaves to seek Enzo, but Barnaba stops her and boldly declares that he loves her. She shudders with an instinctive aversion, and bids him stand aside. He attempts to seize her, but she eludes him and makes her escape, leaving the spy furious and planning revenge.

The people now return from the Regatta, bearing the victor on their shoulders. Barnaba, seeing the defeated combatant, Zuane, conceives a plan to deprive Gioconda of her mother, thus leaving him free to carry out his plans. He takes Zuane aside and tells him that the blind La Cieca is a witch who has cast a spell over him, causing his defeat. The old woman is being roughly handled by Zuane and his friends when Enzo suddenly appears and protects her, holding the mob at bay.

Alvise, Chief of the Council, enters with his wife Laura, formerly betrothed to Enzo. Laura pleads for Cieca, and she is protected by Alvise. The blind woman voices her gratitude in this lovely song, which is familiar to most concert-goers.

Voce di donna (Angellic Voice)
By Louise Homer, Contralto

Although the part of the blind mother, La Cieca, has never been sung by Mme. Homer, she being usually cast for Laura (the superb lady of Venice and rival of Gioconda), this beautiful air has always appealed to her. It is considered the finest single number in Ponchielli's work, and is undoubtedly one of the loveliest gems in this or any other opera.

Certainly it is that no Cieca of present memory has ever delivered this romance with such richness of voice and such touching pathos, This beautiful passage—which is sung as La Cieca presents the rosary, is perhaps the most effective part of the aria.

![Voice sample]

Mme. Homer's singing of this Voce di donna makes this record one of the gems of the Victor's fine production of La Gioconda, and it should form part of every opera collection.
LA CIECA:
Thanks unto thee, angelic voice,
My fetters asunder are broken;
I cannot see the face of her
By whom those words were spoken.
(Takes the rosary from her belt.)

This rosary I offer thee—no richer boon possessing—Deign to accept the humble gift, 'twill bring to thee a blessing,
And on thy head may bliss descend; I'll ever pray for thee!

All go into the church except Enzo, who stands gazing after Laura, having recognized his former love. Barnaba approaches him and tells him that Laura plans to visit the Genoese noble's ship that night. Enzo, whose love for Laura has revived at the sight of her, is delighted at this news, and forgetting Gioconda, he returns to his ship.

This scene has been put by Verdi into the form of a dramatic duet, sung here by Conti and Badini, of the La Scala forces.

Enzo Grimaldo (Duet Enzo and Barnaba)
By F. Conti, Tenor, and E. Badini, Baritone (In Italian) *45033 10-inch, $1.00

BARNABA (approaching Enzo):
Enzo Grimaldo,
Prince of Santa Fior, thou art pensive.

ENZO (aside):
I am discovered!

BARNABA:
What magic stupor steals away thy senses?
'Tis of the Lady Laura, Alvise's wife, thou're thinking.

ENZO (astonished):
Who art thou?

BARNABA (impressively):
I know all;
Can penetrate thy thoughts, however secret.
Thy birthplace was Genoa!

ENZO:
Prince I am not, but sailor. Yonder's my ship.
I am Dalmatian, Enzo Giordan.

BARNABA:
For others, but not for me. Proscribed thou wert by Venice,
Yet hither thou art led, by chainless impulse,
Thr life to peril. Thou didst love a maiden
Yonder, in thine own Genoa, but she another's bride became.

ENZO:
I have pledged my faith to Gioconda.

BARNABA:
Poor wand'ring ballad-singer!
Her thou dost love as sister, but Laura as thy mistress.
Thou hast all hope abandoned, dreamed not to see her features,
But here, under her velvet mask, thy beautiful angel saw thee
And recognized thee.

ENZO (joyfully):
Oh, happiness!

BARNABA:
Love sees through disguises,
All this night will her husband stay at the Doge's palace,
With the Great Council. Laura shall be on board thy vessel.
Love's sweetest consolations await thee!

ENZO:
Ah, with what joy my heart is filled,
Fortune at last is kind!
But who art thou, oh, gloomy messenger of joy?

BARNABA:
I hate thee! I am the demon-in-chief
Of the Council of Ten. Read this. Beware thee!

(Opens his dress and shows the letters "C. X."
(Council of Ten) embroidered in silver on his vest.)

ENZO (starting back):
Oh, horror!

BARNABA (fiercely):
To thy doom at once I could bring thee, but I spare thee.
Gioconda loves thee, hates me fiercely;
I have sworn to crush her heart.
Enzo's death would little serve me;
She must learn how false thou art.

ENZO (aside):
Kind Heaven, to her thy mercy show,
Save her from grief and pain;
But ah, sweet Laura, my adored,
Bring to my arms again!

BARNABA (to Enzo):
Gol! not a moment lose,
Spread thy white sails to the skies,
(Aside)
I can my triumph read
In each glad glance of thine eyes!

ENZO (going):
When the dark night falls,
On board my ship I shall await my Laura.

BARNABA (sneeringly):
Good luck attend you!
(Exit.)

Barnaba then writes to Alvise that his wife plans to elope with Enzo. By Ernesto Badini, Baritone, and Chorus
(In Italian) *45010  10-inch. 1.00

This is one of the most popular numbers in the opera, its beautiful melody and rhythmical swing being a welcome relief in the midst of so much that is gloomy.

After taking careful note of the strength of the crew, Barnaba sends his aide for the police galleys and leaves in his boat.

Enzo now appears, and is greeted by his men with enthusiasm. He is in a gay humor, thinking of Laura's expected visit, and bids the sailors go below while he keeps the watch.

Left alone, he gives expression to his joy in this great aria, one of the most beautiful in the whole range of opera. Caruso sings the number with exquisite purity of tone and a lavish outpouring of voice.

ENZO:

Heaven and ocean! yon ethereal veil
Is radiant as a holy altar,
My angel, will she come from heaven?
My angel, will she come o'er ocean?
Here I await her, I breathe with rapture
The soft zephyrs fill'd with love.
Mortals oft, when fondly sighing,
Find ye a torment, O golden, golden dreams.
Come then, dearest, here I'm waiting;
Wildly panting is my heart.
Come then, dearest! oh come, my dearest!
Oh come, taste the kisses that magic bliss impart!
Oh come! Oh come! Oh come!

Laura now appears, and after a rapturous embrace, the lovers plan to set sail when the wind rises. Enzo goes below to rouse the men, when Gioconda, disguised, enters and denounces Laura.

They sing a splendid dramatic duet in which each declares her love for Enzo and defies the other.

L'amo come il fulgor del creato! (I Adore Him!)

By Elena Ruszczowska, Soprano, and Bianca Lavin de Casas, Mezzo-Soprano

Gioconda is about to stab her rival, when the sight of a rosary worn by her intended victim causes her to repent, and she aids Laura to escape just as her husband, summoned by Barnaba is approaching.

Enzo appears and is greeted with reproaches by Gioconda, who tells him that the war galleys, led by Barnaba, are coming to capture the ship. Enzo, stung by Gioconda's scorn, and heartbroken at the loss of Laura, fires his ship to prevent it falling into the hands of Barnaba.

ACT III

SCENE—A Room in the Palace of Alvise. Night

Alvise is discovered alone, in violent agitation, planning the death of Laura because of her attempted elopement with Enzo.

He sings a dramatic air, picturing his fearful revenge.

Sì! morir ella de'! (To Die is Her Doom!)

By Amleto Galli, Bass

ALVISE (in violent agitation):

Yes, to die is her doom! My name, my honor,
Shall not with impurity be disgraced.
From Badoers, when betrayed,
Pity 't were vain to hope.
Though yesterday upon the fatal isle
She 'scapeing this vengeful hand,
She shall not escape a fearful expiation.
Last night a sharp poniard should have pierced her bosom;
This night no poniard I'll use; she dies by poison!
(Pointing to the adjoining room.)
While there the dancers sing and laugh,
In giddy movements flying,
Their mirthful tones shall blend with groans,

Breath'd by a sinner dying.
Shades of my honored forefathers!
Soon shall your blushes disappear;
Soon shall a deadly vengeance prove.
Honour to me is dear.
While dance the giddy crowd,
In mirthful movements flying,
Here shall be heard the bitter groans,
The sinner breathes in dying.
Yonder, the nobles of the nation
Are gathered at my invitation;
Here, an insulted husband
For signal vengeance cries!
Exult, in dances and in songs,
While here a faithless one dies!

The guilty woman now enters at his summons and is denounced by him. He orders her to take poison, and leaves her. She is about to obey, when Gioconda, who has been concealed in the room, appears, takes the poison from her and gives her a narcotic, which will produce a death-like trance. Laura drinks this and Gioconda exits just as Alvise appears. Seeing the empty phial on the table he believes Laura has obeyed his will.

The second scene shows a magnificent hall in the palace, where Alvise is giving a masked ball. The famous Dance of the Hours is given for the entertainment of the guests.

This is one of the most beautiful of ballets and symbolizes, like many other modern Italian ballets, the struggle between the conflicting powers of light and darkness, progress and ignorance. The music is fascinating in the extreme, and is one of the most popular parts of the opera.

Enzo is present among the maskers, and when Barnaba whispers in his ear that Laura is dead, he unMASKS and denounces Aloise, who causes his arrest. The great finale begins with Enzo’s solo:

Già ti vedo (I Behold Thee)
By Lotti, de Gregorio, Badini and Chorus
(In Italian) *55019 12-inch, $1.50

The emotions of the various characters may be understood by the quotations below.

Enzo (aside):
I behold thee motionless, pallid,
Shrouded in thy snowy veil!
Thou art dead, love! thou art dead, love!
Ah, my darling, hopeless I wail.
The sharp axe for me is waiting,
Opens wide a dark abyss;
But to thee shall torture guide me,
Soon we’ll share celestial bliss!

Gioconda:
Sadly fall the tear-drops,
In the silence of despair;
Break, oh heart! sad eyes, rain torrents!
Fate, thy sharpest doom prepare!

Barnaba (aside to Gioconda):
Yield thee, yield thee! all around thee
See what pow’r I have for ill!

Gioconda (aside to Barnaba):
Do thou save him, bring him safe out there,
Close by the Redentor, and then
Myself I will surrender
To thee, fearless of men.

Barnaba (to Gioconda):
Though despair may prompt thy offer,
I accept it for my part,
And the bitterest fate will welcome,
Once to press thee to this heart.

To complete his revenge, Aloise now draws aside a curtain and shows the guests the body of Laura, acknowledging that he took her life. Horror and indignation are expressed by those present, and Enzo attempts to kill Aloise. He fails, is seized by the guards, and is led away to prison as the curtain falls.

ACT IV

SCENE—A ruined palace on an island in the Adriatic. Venice visible in the distance

To this desolate island Gioconda has managed to bring the unconscious Laura, in an endeavor to save her. As the curtain rises two men are carrying the insensible form into the ruin. Gioconda asks the men to seek out her mother, whom she fears never to see again. Left alone, she approaches the table, looks fixedly at a flask of poison, and begins her terrible song, one of the most dramatic of the numbers in Ponchielli’s work.
Victor Book of the Opera—La Gioconda

Suicidio (Suicide Only Remains)

By Elda Cavalieri (Double-Faced—See below) (In Italian) 55015 12-inch, $1.50

For a moment the unhappy girl is tempted to complete Aloise’s work by giving the poison to Laura, but banishes the temptation and throws herself down in a passion of weeping. Gioconda has secured the release of Enzo, and has sent for him to come to the ruined palace, intending, with splendid generosity, to restore the lovers to each other.

Enzo now arrives, thinking that he is only to visit the grave of Laura, and a bitter scene occurs between the two, which is interrupted by the voice of Laura, who has revived and now calls feebly. Enzo rushes forward in a transport of joy, while Gioconda makes further preparations for their escape. The lovers express their gratitude and depart, while Gioconda prepares for the end. She is about to swallow the poison when Barnaba appears, and in terrible accents demands why she has broken her word to him. She pretends to yield to him.

Barnaba is overjoyed and begins the final duet, the most dramatic scene in the opera.

Vo’ farmi più gaia (Thou’rt Mine Now!)

By A. Rossi Murino and E. Badini (In Italian) 55017 12-inch, $1.50

Thou claimest Gioconda? Now demon accursed, Gioconda is thine!

(She stabs herself to the heart with the dagger that she had secreted while adorning herself; and falls dead at his feet.)

Barnaba (in horror):

Ah, stay thee! ’Tis a jest!

(With rendish joy.)

Well, then, thou shalt hear this, and die ever damned!

(Bending over the corpse of Gioconda, and screaming furiously into her ear.)

Last night thy mother did offend me:

I have strangled her!

(Wildly.) She hears me not!

(With a cry of half-choked rage he rushes from the ruin. The curtain falls.)

PRELUDE

SCENE—The Walkure’s Rock

The Dusk of the Gods, the last part of the tetralogy, consists of three acts and a prelude. In the prelude we once more see Brünnhilde on the rock, where she had lain during her magic sleep, and where Siegfried had found her and taken her as his bride. The hero, after a brief period of domestic happiness in a cave near by, decides to leave his bride for awhile and go in search of adventures, giving her the Nibelung’s Ring as a pledge of faith. This ring he had obtained when he slew the dragon Fafner, and as the opera progresses it will be seen that he is doomed to suffer the consequences of the fatal curse, invoked on every possessor of the Ring by Alberich, from whom it was forcibly taken by Wotan.
PROLOGUE

As the curtain rises Brünnhilde and Siegfried come out of the cave, Siegfried in full armor and the Valkyrie leading her horse by the bridle. She begins her tender address of farewell:

Zu neuen Thaten (Did I Not Send Thee?)

By Johanna Gadski

Did I not send thee, sweetest hero, to fresh exploits, frail were my love. But one misgiving fights against it, for fear not wholly thy heart I hold.

I gave to thee all that gods had taught: heavenly runes, the richest hoard; but my restoreless maidenhood’s strength snatch’d thou from me, who but seek to serve thee.

My wisdom fails, but good will remains; so full of love, but failing in strength, thou wilt despise perchance the poor one, who having giv’n all, can grant thee no more!

This lovely air is delivered by Mme. Gadski with tenderness and feeling, and the record is an unusually fine example of the perfect recording of a beautiful soprano voice.

ACT I

SCENE—Castle of King Gunther

Siegfried joyously sets out on his journey and soon comes to the Court of King Gunther on the Rhine, where dwells also Gunther’s sister Gutrune, and their half-brother Hagen, who is a son of Alberich, the dwarf. Hagen knows the history of the Ring and is anxious to restore it to his father, so he artfully tries to win the help of Gunther. Knowing that the hero is approaching the castle, he outlines this scheme, which is to give Siegfried a drink which will make him forget Brünnhilde and fall in love with Gutrune, after which Gunther can win the peerless Brünnhilde for himself. Gunther is tempted, and when Siegfried’s horn announces his approach he consents.

Siegfried greets them as friends, and when offered the magic drink he accepts and immediately loses all recollection of Brünnhilde. Seeing the lovely Gutrune, who stands with lowered eyes, he exclaims:

Siegfried (gazing on Gutrune with a kindling eye):

Thou fair one, whose beams
My breast have enflamed,
Why fall thus thine eyes before mine?
(Gutrune looks up at him, blushing.)
Ha! sweetest maid!
Screen those bright beams!
The heart in my breast
Burns with their strength.

Gutrune, trembling with emotion, leaves the Hall, and Siegfried, gazing after her, asks Gunther if he has a wife. The King, prompted by Hagen, replies that he knows of one he would wed, but that she is surrounded by a magic fire which he cannot pass. Siegfried seems trying to remember his past, but fails, looks confused, then suddenly says:

Siegfried (with a sudden start):

I—fear not the fire,
And thy bride fain will I fetch;
For thy own am I;
And my arm is thine;
If Gutrune for wife I may gain!

In order that Brünnhilde may think that it is Gunther who has won her, it is agreed that Siegfried shall, by means of the Tarnhelm, change himself into Gunther’s form. Thinking only of his reward, Siegfried eagerly departs.
Hier sitz' ich zur wacht  (Here I Wait)
By Marcel Journet, Bass  (In German) 74276 12-inch, $1.50

Hagen, left alone, outlines his coming triumph, when he shall possess the Ring, and avenge its theft from his father, Alberich.

HAGEN:
Here I sit and wait, watching the hall,
Warding the house from all foes.
Gibich's son is wafted by winds;
A-wooing forth is he gone.
And fleetly steeareth a stalwart man,
Whose force all perils can stem.

His own the bride he brings down the Rhine;
But he will bring me the Ring.
Ye gallant partners, gleeful companions,
Push ye then merrily hence!
Slight though your natures,
Ye still may serve the Nibelung's son!

SCENE II—The Walkure's Rock

The scene changes to the Valkyrie Rock again, where Brünnhilde awaits Siegfried's return. She is astonished and alarmed when she sees a stranger approaching, not understanding how he has penetrated through the fiery barrier. It is Siegfried in the form of Gunther. He announces that he is Gunther come to win her for his wife. Brünnhilde, in horror and despair, holds up the Ring, exclaiming:

BRÜNNHILDE:
Stand back! bow to this token!
No shame can touch me from thee
While yet this Ring is my shield.

Siegfried attempts to take it from her and after a struggle, succeeds. As he draws the helpless and despairing Brünnhilde into the cave the curtain falls.

ACT II

SCENE—The Rhine near Gunther's Castle

Hagen and Alberich discuss the progress of the plot to regain the Ring. Hagen swears to accomplish it, and Alberich vanishes. Siegfried, in his own form, but wearing the Tarnhelm, arrives, greets him cheerily and says he has gained Gunther's wife for him, but that they are returning home more slowly. Gutrune comes to meet Siegfried, and they go to the Hall. Hagen sounds his horn to summon the vassals and bids them prepare for a feast, as Gunther has taken a bride.

Gunther now arrives in his boat, leading Brünnhilde, who is pale and downcast. Siegfried and Gutrune come out to meet them and Brünnhilde sees Siegfried in his rightful form. She recoils in horror at seeing him with another woman, and regarding her as a stranger. She then perceives the Ring on Siegfried's finger and demands to know where he obtained it. He seems confused and regards the Ring with a puzzled air. Brünnhilde, beginning to comprehend what has occurred, denounces him, and Gunther, beginning to doubt whether Siegfried had kept his oath to respect Brünnhilde as a brother's bride, looks threateningly at him. Siegfried, eager to set himself right, swears the oath of the spear.

The vassals make a ring round Siegfried and Hagen. Hagen holds out his spear; Siegfried lays two fingers of his right hand on its point.

SIEGFRIED:
Haft of war, hallowed weapon!
Hold thou my oath from dishonor!
On this spotless spear-head
I speak the oath:
Spear-point, aid thou my speech!

Where steel e'er can strike me,
Strike thou at me:
Wher'er death can be dealt me
Deal it to me,
If she is really wronged,—
If I have injured my friend:

Brünnhilde, unable to contain herself at this evidence of Siegfried's baseness, repeats his oath and denounces him.

Helle Wehr! Heilige Waffe! (Haft of War! Hallowed Weapon)
By Johanna Gadski, Soprano  (In German) 87052 10-inch, $2.00

Siegfried looks at her in pity, thinking her mad, and goes to the Hall with Gutrune. Brünnhilde, Hagen and Gunther remain behind, the latter in deep depression. Hagen tells Brünnhilde that he will avenge her wrongs. "Thou?" says Brünnhilde, contemptuously, and tells him that only in his back is Siegfried vulnerable, and that no magic protection was placed there because she knew that never would he retreat. Gunther now rouses himself and the three decide that Siegfried must die for his treachery.

ACT III

SCENE I—A Wild Valley near the Rhine

The Rhine nymphs rise to the surface of the water and sing of the Rhine-gold. They spy Siegfried and ask him to give up the Ring, but he refuses, and they warn him that he shall die that very day. He laughs at the prophecy, and as he watches them swim away, says lightly:

SIEGFRIED:
Alike on land and water,
Woman's ways I've learnt to know.
The man who resists their smiles
They seek by threats to frighten.
And when these both are scorned
They bait him with bitter words.
And yet were Gutrune not my wife,
I must have promptly captured
One of those pretty maids!

Hunting horns are heard and Siegfried gayly answers with his own. Gunther, Hagen and the hunters descend from the hill and greet him. They camp and begin to eat and drink. Siegfried tells them of his adventure with Mime and the Dragon. Hagen gives him a magic drink which brings back his memory and he goes on to tell of the forest bird and his quest of the lovely Brünnhilde. Gunther begins to listen attentively, but when Siegfried reaches this part of his narrative, Hagen plunges his spear in Siegfried's back and he falls. Gunther, in pity for the dying man, leans over him, and Siegfried faintly says:

SIEGFRIED:
Brünnhilde! Heavenly bride!—
Look up! Open thine eyelids!
What hath sunk thee once more in sleep?
Who drowns thee in slumber so dear?
The wak'ner came, his kiss awoke;—
Again now the bride's bonds he has broken;—

Enchant him Brünnhilde's charms!
Ah! now forever open her eyelids!
Ah! and what od'rous breeze is her breath!
Thrice blessed ending—
Thril that dismays not—
Brünnhilde beckons to me! (He dies.)

SCENE II—Hall in Gunther's Palace

Siegfried's body is borne mournfully to the Hall, where the weeping Gutrune meets them and clasps her husband's lifeless form. Hagen now demands the Ring as his booty, but Gunther refuses to yield it and they draw their swords, Gunther being killed by Hagen.

Hagen now attempts to withdraw the Ring from Siegfried's finger, but as he approaches, the arm of the dead hero is raised threateningly, and all recoil in terror.

Brünnhilde now approaches and gazes long and sadly at Siegfried's face, then orders a funeral pyre erected to burn the hero's body. The vassals obey and build a huge pyre on the bank of the Rhine, on which the body is laid. Brünnhilde summons two ravens from the rocks, and begins her great Immolation Scene.

Fliegt heim (Immolation Scene)
By Johanna Gadski, Soprano (In German) 88185 12-inch, $3.00
She bids the ravens fly to Loki, god of fire, that he may complete the downfall of the gods by burning Valhalla.

Brünnhilde:

Draweth near in gloom
The Dusk of the gods,
Thus, casting my torch,
I kindle Valhalla’s tow’rs!

She kindles the pile, which burns rapidly, and the two ravens disappear in the distance. Brünnhilde’s horse is brought in, and she takes off the bridle.

Brünnhilde (to the horse):

Grani, my horse, greet thee again!
Wouldst thou know dear friend,
What journey we follow?
By flame illumined lies there thy lord,
Siegfried, the star of my life.
To meet with thy master neighest thou merrily?
Lo! how the flame
Doth leap and allure thee!

She swings herself on the steed and rides straight into the burning pile, which flames up mightily, half consuming the Hall itself. The Rhine then rises and puts out the flames, and on the surface are seen the Rhine daughters, who seize the Ring from the embers. Hagen, who has been anxiously watching, now rushes into the waters, crying: “The Ring is mine!” The nymphs seize him and drag him down into the flood. An increasing red glow is seen in the sky, and Valhalla appears in flames, with the gods and heroes calmly awaiting their doom. As the flames envelop all, the curtain falls.

Scene and Period: Provence, France; the thirteenth century.

Grisélidis is based on a modern "mystery" which was produced by Armand Sylvester and Eugene Morand at the Comédie Française in 1891. In this play the author gave a much changed version of a legend, Patient Grisel, which has had a place in European literature since the eleventh century. It is one of the stories that Boccaccio tells in his Decameron, and the same tale has been used by Chaucer in his Canterbury Tales.

The plot of Grisélidis is quite refreshing in contrast to most grand opera plots, its principal theme being true love and faithfulness. The opera opens with a Prologue, occurring in the forest of Provence. The Marquis de Saluces, lord of the region, while walking along the forest edge, meets the young and beautiful Grisélidis. He falls deeply in love with her and asks her to be his wife, whereupon she replies that she is his slave and must obey his will. Together they depart for the chateau of the Marquis, leaving the poor shepherd, Alain, who is also in love with Grisélidis, bewailing the fate which has robbed him of his sweetheart.
A year elapses, and in Act I we see the Marquis about to depart for the war against the Saracens. The scene shows the inside of the Chateau; in the background a triptych open, with an image of St. Agnes holding in her arm a white lamb, and at her feet an image of the Devil. The Marquis expresses his great love for his wife, and says that he would be willing to swear in the presence of the Devil himself that she would always be faithful and true. Suddenly the stone image of the Devil comes to life, bounds on the stage and offers to wager the Marquis that during his absence at the wars Grisélidis will break her vows of faithfulness. At first the Marquis spurns the wager, but finally accepts and gives the Devil his wedding ring to show his absolute trust in Grisélidis. The latter is left alone with her little son, Loys, as her husband departs for the war.

Act II shows the terrace of the Castle. The Devil induces his wife, Fiamina, to join him in his wicked plans to tempt Grisélidis, and they appear at the Castle disguised as a Levantine merchant and a Moorish slave. The merchant (Devil) tells Grisélidis that her husband bought the slave from him in the Orient, being greatly attracted by her charms, and tells her that her husband commands that the slave be installed as mistress of the Chateau. As proof of the truth of his statement he shows Grisélidis the Marquis' wedding ring, and she submissively declares that she will obey her husband's orders. This acquiescence is contrary to the Devil's expectations, and in consternation he now has his Evil Spirits bring Alain to the Castle, hoping to tempt Grisélidis to fly with the shepherd, who still loves her; but little Loys appears just in time to save his mother when her resistance is weakening. As Alain rushes away, in despair, the Devil suddenly appears, seizes Loys and disappears, and the act ends with a wild search for the child.

The third act shows the interior of the Chateau with the triptych as in Act I. The Devil again appears to Grisélidis, this time disguised as an old man. He tells her that Loys has been kidnapped by a pirate, who demands a kiss from Grisélidis in return for surrendering her child. Mother love forces her to yield, and she starts for the harbor. The Marquis comes home from the wars and the Devil tells him Grisélidis has gone to keep a rendezvous with her lover, but the Marquis refuses to believe these accusations against his wife. Grisélidis returns and tells the Marquis of the kidnapping of little Loys, and they pray that help may be given them to fight the powers of evil. Whereupon the cross on the altar is turned into a flaming sword, and when Grisélidis prays to St. Agnes that her son be restored to her, there is a flash of lightning, a clap of thunder and the triptych opens, revealing the image of St. Agnes holding in her arms, not the white lamb, but the child Loys. A glad pealing of bells can be heard as the Marquis and Grisélidis, with their child between them, are happily reunited.

The Victor offers here a very fine record of the air Ouvres-vous sur mon front, which occurs at the beginning of the opera. It is the song of the shepherd Alain, telling of his love for the maiden, Grisélidis.

Scene: Elsinore, in Denmark.

The story of Hamlet, Prince of Denmark, is so well known that it would seem hardly necessary to describe the plot at any length. However, for operatic purposes the librettists were obliged to modify and reconstruct certain portions of the tragedy, and the revised version will be briefly sketched here.

The present King of Denmark, Claudius, has seized the throne, after having murdered the late King, Hamlet's father. At the opening of the opera Hamlet knows nothing of the murder, but is highly incensed at his mother for having married Claudius before she had been two months a widow.

ACT I

SCENE I—A Room of State in the Palace

The new Queen is being presented to the Court at a public reception. She is annoyed because Hamlet shows his displeasure by absenting himself from the ceremony. After the presentation is over, Hamlet enters slowly, in a melancholy mood.

HAMLET: Ah! wain indeed is grief!
Affection, too, doth seem short lived indeed.
My much-loved father but two months dead;
And yet, unto another wedlock, my mother hath consented;
"Frailty, thy name is woman."

His bitter musing is interrupted by the entrance of Ophelia, his betrothed. She has heard that Hamlet intends to leave the kingdom and asks if he has ceased to love her. In the beautiful love duet he reassures her, and tells her why the palace has become intolerable to him.

Hamlet:
Celestial maiden, 'tis not thee I chide,
The purity of thy mind doth speak through those sweet eyes!

"Doubt that the stars are fire,
Doubt that the sun doth move,
Doubt truth to be a liar;
But never doubt my love."

Ophelia:
It may be so, but such excess of love
Hath no enduring power;
Thou couldst not leave me to my sorrow,
Didst thy heart know such love as mine!
Ye heavenly powers,—celestial choir,
That eye surround the eternal throne,
From your bright homes above,
Bear witness to my truthful love.

Hamlet:
Beloved Ophelia!
Ophelia:
In thee this heart doth trust!

Hamlet:
My heart doth beat for thee alone!

Ophelia:
Ah! never will we part!

SCENE II—Esplanade of the Palace. It is Night

Horatio and Marcellus are discovered excitedly discussing the appearance of the spectre of the murdered King. They greet Hamlet and tell him of the ghostly visitor, which appeared just at midnight. Hamlet is much affected, and suggests that as it is nearly twelve the ghost may come again.

The clock strikes, and the figure of the murdered King appears. Hamlet speaks to the spectre:

Hamlet:
Thou spirit dread, thou shade revered,
Hear thou thy hapless son's lament.
In pity answer,—speak to me!
Tell me why the sepulchre,

Wherein we saw thee peacefully entombed,
Hath op'd his ponderous and marble jaws,
To cast thee forth again?

The ghost motions Horatio and Marcellus to withdraw, and when they are gone he tells Hamlet of the murder and bids him become the avenger, but asks him to leave his mother's punishment to God. Hamlet is much affected and exclaims:

Hamlet:
Yes! Shade revered! Thy bidding shall be done.
O light, O sun, O glory, O love to me so dear,
Farewell! Farewell!

The ghost, before disappearing, pauses at the back of the stage, and stands with one hand extended toward Hamlet; at this moment Horatio and Marcellus re-enter, and appear terror-stricken at the spectacle before them. Trumpets and joyous music are heard without as the curtain falls.

ACT II
SCENE—Garden of the Palace

Ophelia enters and is much disturbed because Hamlet seems to avoid her. The Queen finds her weeping, and after questioning her says that Hamlet has also acted strangely toward his mother and fears his reason is affected.

Hamlet, seeking to entrap the King in some manner into betraying himself, has engaged a troupe of players to present a play which shall enact a similar crime. The King and Queen are delighted that he seems to seek amusement, and gladly accept his invitation to witness the play.

When the royal pair have departed, the players come on and are instructed by Hamlet in the plot he has conceived. The Prince then calls for wine and bids the players be merry, offering to sing them a drinking song.

SCENE II—The Palace Hall. On one side a stage has been erected

The court assembles and the play begins, Hamlet placing himself where he can watch the King closely. As the action proceeds the guilty man shows unmistakable evidence of agitation, and finally in a rage he orders the players away. Hamlet rushes forward and denounces the murderer, but the Court believes his accusation to be the ravings of a madman, and all leave the room as he faints in Horatio’s arms.

ACT III

SCENE—The Queen’s Apartments

Hamlet enters and sings his farewell soliloquy.

Monologo (Soliloquy)
By Titta Ruffo, Baritone (In Italian) 92042 12-inch, $3.00

This is Thomas’ splendid setting of the well-known soliloquy and one of the most conspicuous numbers in the opera. Although the librettists took many liberties with Shakespeare’s drama, they did not venture to alter such a well-known excerpt as this. Ruffo sings this famous monologue in a superb manner, delivering it with great dramatic power.

* Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED HAMLET RECORDS, page 172.
HAMLET: To be, or not to be, that is the question.
To die, to sleep; perchance to dream;
Ah! were it allowed me to sever
The tie that binds me to mortality,
And seek “the undiscovered country
From whose bourn no traveler returns!”
“Ay! to be, or not to be?
To die, to sleep; perchance to dream.”

The Queen and Ophelia enter and plead with Hamlet to banish his wild imaginings. He sternly rebukes them, advises Ophelia to retire to a convent, and accuses his mother of being an accomplice. The ghost again appears, visible only to Hamlet, bids him spare his mother, and slowly disappears. The Prince conducts the Queen to the door, urging her to pray and repent.

ACT IV

A rural scene near a lake. Willows line the shore

Ophelia, driven insane by Hamlet’s desertion of her, has wandered to the lake. She plays with a garland of flowers, and sings her wonderful aria, usually known as the Mad Scene, one of the most difficult of all florid compositions.

Ballata d’Ofelia (Mad Scene)

By Nellie Melba (In French) 88251 12-inch, $3.00
By Maria Galvany (In Italian) 88235 12-inch, 3.00
By Giuseppina Huguet (Italian)*35180 12-inch, 1.25

An exquisite introduction by the orchestra is heard as Ophelia enters—a strange, wild figure, with flowing hair and torn white dress. She speaks to the wondering peasants and tells them childishly of the lark which she heard at dawn, following with a brilliant display of bird-like trills and staccatos.

Ophelia then turns to the shepherds and asks them to listen to her song, a strange, sad melody, which is interrupted at intervals by wild laughter and weeping. Presently she seems to forget, and placidly plays with her flowers, until the magical siren’s song is heard luring her to the water’s edge, and she plunges in and floats away, singing of Hamlet’s vow of love.

Mme. Melba fairly surpasses herself in this scene, with its sudden alternations of joy and sorrow, the pathos which overshadows every phrase.

Other fine renditions, that of Mme. Galvany and a popular-priced one by Mme. Huguet, are also offered to opera-lovers.

ACT V—The Churchyard

Hamlet comes hither to attend the funeral of Ophelia. He sings his beautiful song to her memory and resolves to take his own life upon her grave.

Come il romito fior (As a Lovely Flower)

By Enrico Pignataro, Baritone (In Italian) *63424 10-inch, .75

When the cortege has arrived, the ghost again appears and looks reproachfully on Hamlet, who stabs the King, and as the curtain falls the people, now convinced of their monarch’s guilt, acclaim Hamlet as his successor.

It is now some seventeen years since Humperdinck's lovely fairy opera was brought out in America by Augustin Daly, and it has since been firmly established in the repertoire of every producer of grand opera.

Hänsel and Gretel has been called the Peter Pan of grand opera; the audiences who witness it being invariably delighted with the childish joyousness and fairy charm of Humperdinck's work.
This delightful opera is built upon the simple Grimm tale of Babes in the Woods, and first suggested itself to the composer to amuse his sister’s children. It was afterward elaborated into a complete opera, which has become one of the most important and interesting of modern German works.

Two German peasant children, Hans and Gretchen, are sent to the woods for strawberries and get lost. The Sandman finds the babes and sings them to sleep, while angels and fairies watch over them. They are awakened by the Dew Man, and go for breakfast to the house of the Witch, who plans to eat them; but when she opens the oven to see if it is hot enough to cook Hans, she herself is pushed in by Gretchen.

Several numbers from this interesting opera are presented here,—the first being the beautiful Prelude.

Prelude to Hansel and Gretel
By Arthur Pryor’s Band 31853 12-inch, $1.00

This Prelude is an especially beautiful number. It opens with the Prayer of the Children, played by the brass—at first softly, then swelling to the full strength of the band. This is followed by a passage portraying morning in the forest, and upon this pastoral scene there breaks in rudely the Hocus pocus, or Witches’ motive. The Prelude is brought to a close with a return of the Prayer theme.

The delicacy and charm of this music is well brought out by the band under Mr. Pryor’s masterly baton.

ACT I

The scene is laid in the house of Peter, where the two children are busily working—Hänsel making brooms and Gretel knitting a stocking. Gretel begins the old German folk-song, “Susie, What is the News?” with its nonsense about the geese going barefoot because of their lack of shoes. Hänsel, thinking more of his stomach than of the feet of the geese, asks when they are likely to have something to eat. Little Gretel reproves him for making a fuss about something which cannot be helped.

Suse, liebe Suse (Little Susie!)
By Alma Gluck, Soprano, and Louise Homer, Contralto
(In German) 88418 12-inch, $3.00

Peter now returns to his cottage and finds the children gone after strawberries. In this air he frightens his wife by telling of the witch who lives in a honey-cake house, and who after enticing little children into it, bakes them into gingerbread in her oven.

Eine Hex’ steinalt (The Old Witch)
By Otto Goritz, Baritone
(In German) 64164 10-inch, $1.00

Mr. Goritz’s admirable character study as Peter, the tipsy, kind-hearted and superstitious father, was one of the features of the Metropolitan revival, and this odd number is given by him with much effectiveness.
ACT II

This scene shows the depths of the forest, into which the children have wandered. Hansel picks berries while Gretel weaves garlands of flowers. Darkness soon comes, and the children are frightened and cling together. A little gray man, the Sandman, or Sleep Fairy, strews sand in their eyes as he sings his air.

Der kleine Sandmann bin ich (I Am the Sleep Fairy)
By Gluck and Homer (In German) 88419 12-inch, $3.00

The children slumber, and as the curtain falls angels are seen keeping guard over them.

ACT III

The curtain rises, showing Hansel and Gretel still asleep in the wood. The Dawn Fairy shakes dewdrops on the children and wakes them just as the mist clears away, revealing the house of the Witch.

The children approach cautiously and begin to nibble at the gingerbread fence, when the Witch comes out and casts a spell over them.

Hexenritt und Knusperwalzer (Witch’s Dance)
By Alma Gluck and Louise Homer (In German) 87131 10-inch, $2.00

She makes a good fire in the stove for the purpose of roasting the babes, and in her joy she rides wildly around the room on a broomstick, singing this unique Hexenritt.

The duet begins with the soliloquy of the Witch as she sees Gretel peeping into the oven, and prepares to push her in to be baked into magic gingerbread. The second part of the duet is the portion called the “Witch’s Waltz,” and is sung and danced by Hansel and Gretel after the wicked Witch has been pushed into the oven. They dance around the room, wild with joy, and then prepare to eat their fill of the good things stored in the Witch’s house.

After the death of the Witch the gingerbread children come to life and thank the children for releasing them from the spell. The father and mother of Hansel and Gretel now arrive and embrace the children as the curtain falls.

The action takes place in Jerusalem—Time, about 30 A. D.
Herodiade was first produced in Brussels in 1881. The first Paris production of this opera was especially interesting because of the first appearance of Jean de Reszke as a tenor (he was formerly a baritone). It was not until 1904, however, that the opera was brought out in London (under the title of Salome) with Mme. Calvé, Dalmores and Renaud in the leading rôles. Mr. Hammerstein's brilliant production of this work was one of the events of a recent season at the Manhattan.

The opera contains much of the best music Massenet has written; and the plot, while based on the well-known Scriptural story, does not follow the Bible or tradition very closely, differing quite largely from Salome.

ACT I

SCENE—Court of Herod's Palace at Jerusalem

Salome enters and is greeted by Phanuel, a young Jew, who is astonished that she should be in the Palace, and wonders if she can be ignorant of the fact that Herodias is her mother. Salome tells him she is seeking John the Prophet, and in this air she describes how he had saved her from the desert when a child, and how good and kind he is.

ACT II

SCENE—Herod's Chamber

Herod lies on his luxurious couch, while attendants sing to him. He can think of no one but Salome, and bids the slaves dance to distract his mind. A love potion is given him by a slave, who says it will make him see the face of the one he loves.

He then sings the famous Vision fugitive, considered the most beautiful of the airs in the opera.

Vision fugitive (Fleeting Vision)
By Emilio de Gogorza, Baritone
(In French) 88153 12-inch, $3.00

Herod describes the vision of Salome which haunts him night and day, and declares that to possess her he would gladly surrender his soul. He drinks the love potion, and falls on the couch in a delirious sleep.

SCENE II—Public Square at Jerusalem

The scene shows Herod receiving messages from the allies, and denouncing Rome. Herodias enters and announces that the Roman general, Vitellius, is approaching. The people are terrified, but Vitellius declares that Rome desires the favor of the Jews and will give back the Temple of Israel.

John and Salome enter and Vitellius is surprised at the honor paid to the Prophet. Herod gazes with eyes of love at Salome, while Herodias watches her jealously. John denounces Vitellius as the curtain falls.

ACT III

SCENE I—Phanuel's House

Phanuel is disclosed gazing at the city, which lies silent under a starry sky, and prophesying the fate which is to overwhelm it.

Air de Phanuel (Oh, Shining Stars)

By Marcel Journet, Bass

He calls upon the stars to tell him what manner of man is this John, who speaks with such authority. "Is he a man or a god?" he cries. Herodias enters, much agitated. Phanuel inquires what has brought the Queen to his house, and she cries, "Vengeance on the woman who has stolen Herod's love!" He reads her fate by the stars, and sees nothing but blood in the horoscope. She asks him about her child, lost so long ago, and he takes her to the window and shows her Salome, who is just entering the Temple. Horrified, Herodias cries, "My daughter? Never! That is my rival!"

SCENE II—Inner Court of the Temple

The second scene shows the entrance of the Temple. Salome enters half fainting, having heard that John has been cast in prison, and falls exhausted at the prison entrance. Herod enters, and seeing Salome, breaks out into a mad declaration of his love, but she repulses him with horror, and tells him she loves another. He declares he will find this lover and kill him, and goes out as the people enter the Temple. John is brought in and denounced by the priests, but prays for them as they demand his death. Salome runs to John and falls at his feet, wishing to die with him. Herod, seeing that it is John whom Salome loves, orders them both put to death, and they are seized and borne out by guards as the curtain falls.

ACT IV

SCENE I—Prison Cell in the Temple

John and Salome are here seen in prison. John admits that he loves the young girl, and urges her to fly and save her life, but she refuses, declaring she will die with him. Priests appear and order John to death, and command Salome to be taken to the Palace by Herod's commands. She resists desperately, but is dragged away.

SCENE II—Great Hall in the Temple

The great festival in honor of the Roman Empire is in progress. Salome is brought in and again entreats to be allowed to die with John. She appeals to the Queen, saying, "If thou wert ever a mother, pity me." Herodias trembles at the word, and gazing on her daughter, seems about to yield, when the executioner appears at the back with a dripping sword and cries, "The Prophet is dead." Salome gives a terrible cry and tries to kill the Queen, who screams: "Mercy! I am thy mother!" Salome recoils in horror, curses her mother and stabs herself.

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor
(In Italian) 88210 12-inch, $3.00
By M. Gautier, Tenor
(In French) *45007 10-inch, 1.00

Caruso makes a manly picture as the young nobleman, and sings the music allotted to Raoul charmingly, especially this delicate Romanza, in which he describes the vision of the unknown with whom he has fallen in love. In dreamy tones he sings the recitative, after which a short introduction brings us to the romanza, beginning

Nothing could be more tender and beautiful than Caruso's singing of this number.

Raoul:
Fairer far e'en than fairest lily,
Than spring morn more pure and more lovely and bright,
An angel of Heaven born beauty
Burst upon my ravish'd sight.
Sweetly she smiled as I stood by her side,
Sighing the love which e'en her tongue to speak denied;

A French rendition by M. Gautier, of the Paris Opéra, is offered at a popular price, and the record is a most excellent one.

The applause which greets this recital is interrupted by the entrance of Marcel, who makes no secret of his displeasure at seeing his master dining with Romanists. Raoul apologizes, begging indulgence for an old soldier and faithful servant who loves him, and the guests call on Marcel for a song. The grim soldier offers to sing an old Huguenot song of warning both against Rome and the wiles of woman.

Marcel:
Sirs, I will; an old Huguenot song against the snares of Rome and the dark wiles of woman. You, sirs, should know it well—it is our battle song: you heard it at Rochelle, for there 'twas sung, 'mid the din of drums and trumpets; with a full accompaniment—piff, paff. piff, paff,— of bullets from our ranks, thus out it rang:

*Double-Faced Record—See page 186.
Piff! Paff! (Marcel’s Air)
By Marcel Journet, Bass
(In French) 74156 12-inch, $1.50

MARCEL:
Old Rome and her revelries,
Her pride and her lust, boys,
The monks and their devilities,
We’ll grind them to dust, boys!
Deliver to fire and sword
Their temples of Hell,
Till of the black demons
None live to tell!
Woe to all defilers fair!
I ne’er heed their shrieking—
Woe to the Dalilahs fair,
Who men’s souls are seeking!
Deliver to fire and sword
Those children of Hell,
Till of the black demons
None live to tell!

Refrain
Piff, paff, paff; slay them all,
Piff, paff, piff, ev’ry soul!
Piff, paff, paff; paff; piff; piff, paff, piff, paff!
All vainly for aid or for mercy they call;
No pity for them! No they die—slay all!
No, no, no, no, no, no; slay all!

Journet’s portrayal of the grim, stubborn old servant is a very fine one, and his rendition of the Piff, Paff is remarkable in its rugged force and stern simplicity.

A servant of Nevers announces a veiled lady to see him and he retires to an adjoining room. Raoul catches sight of the lady through the window as she lifts her veil, and is astonished and grieved to recognize the beauty he had saved from the ruffians.

A young page now enters, and in a lovely air, familiarly called the Page Song, announces that she has a message for one of the cavaliers present.

Nobil Signori salute! (Noble Sirs, I Salute You)
By Louise Homer, Contralto
(In Italian) 85107 12-inch, $3.00

This gay and brilliant cavatina is considered one of the most difficult of contralto numbers. It begins with a long and very ornamental cadenza, followed by this graceful melody:

\[\text{Andantino Cantabile, con grazia.}\]

\[\text{No-bil don-na e tan-to o-ne sta... che far lle-to un re... po-tria.}\]
\[\text{From a la-da fair and love ly... For whose smiles a king might woo.}\] worked up with much spirit and reintroduced after a striking series of vocal figures sung on the word “no.” Mme. Homer’s execution of this florid air exhibits well the great flexibility of her fine voice.

Meyerbeer intended this part for soprano, but it is usually transposed and sung by a contralto.

URBANO:
A most charming noble lady,
Whom with envy kings might view,
With a message here has charged me,
Cavaliers, cavaliers, to one of you.
I do not name him; but honor be Unto the good knight, who’er he be!
And until now, sirs, there ne’er hath been Mortal so favor’d by beauty’s queen!

The note proves to be for Raoul, and bids him consent to come blindfolded in a carriage, without question, to wherever his guide will take him. The young man is puzzled but decides to obey, and shows the note to the others. They recognize the seal of Margaret of Valois, and cast looks of envy at him as he follows the page.
ACT II

SCENE—Castle and Gardens of Chenonceaux

The Queen is seated on a kind of throne surrounded by her maids, who, with Urbano, are assisting in her toilet. She rises and sings her great air in praise of fair Touraine.

O, vago suol della Tureonna (Fair Land of Touraine)
By Maria Galvany, Soprano
(In Italian) 88234 12-inch, $3.00
By Frieda Hempel, Soprano
(In French) 88382 12-inch, 3.00
By Giuseppina Huguet, Soprano
(In Italian) *35123 12-inch, 1.25

QUEEN:
Oh, lovely land of fair Touraine!
Thy vine-clad hills, thy sparkling fountains,
Thy green banks and thy murmur'ring zephyrs,
All fill my soul with peace and love!
Yet, for a difference in belief,
This fair scene may by war be stain'd!
Oh, that men would observe the moral,
To love and fear the all-powerful Being!
But hence with sorrow!
Care we will banish;
Quick, let it vanish, far, far away!
In the land where I reign,
From the mount to the main,
All re-echo the strain
That's devoted to love!

The maids disperse, and Valentine enters and tells the Queen that she has seen the Count de Nevers, who has promised to release her from the engagement which had been arranged. Margaret informs her that she has another cavalier in mind—meaning Raoul, who is now conducted to the ladies and his mask removed. He is much astonished to find that it is the Queen who has sent for him, and pledges his honor and his sword to her service. He does not, however, perceive Valentine, who has retired at the moment of his entrance.

The nobles of the Court, Protestant and Catholic, now enter, having been sent for by Margaret. She announces that she is planning a marriage which shall reconcile all their differences, and asks them to swear to live in peace with each other. Raoul, Nevers, St. Bris and the nobles gather around the Queen and take the oath.

Valentine is now led in by her father and presented to Raoul. He starts in astonishment, having recognized the lady he had rescued, and whom he had seen meeting Nevers.

RAOUl (in a stifled voice):
Great Heaven! what do I see?
MARGARET:
Why this astonishment?
RAOUl:
What! is this the bride you would offer to me?
MARGARET:
Yes, to marry and to love.
RAOUl:
What perfidy! what treachery!
I her husband! Never, never!

A terrible scene follows, St. Bris challenging Raoul, who is ordered under arrest by the Queen. Valentine is overcome with shame, and the Catholics are furious. Marcel is delighted that his master has escaped marriage with a Catholic, and the curtain falls as the Lutheran chorale is again heard in the orchestra.

*Double-Faced Record—See page 186.
ACT III

SCENE—A Square in Paris

Catholic students are seated outside an inn on the left, while opposite some Huguenot soldiers are drinking and playing dice. The soldiers sing their famous Rat-a-plan.

Coro di Soldati
(Soldiers’ Chorus, “Rataplan”)

By Metropolitan Opera Chorus  (In Italian)

A wedding procession passes on its way to the church; it is for Valentine, who has been persuaded to wed Nevers. Valentine asks that she be permitted to spend the day in the chapel in prayer. While there she overhears a plot to assassinate Raoul, and at once goes in search of Marcel to inform him of the plot. She meets him in the square and tells him of the plot.

Nella notte io sol qui veglio (Here By Night Alone I Wander)

By Maria Grisi, Soprano, and Perello De Segurola, Bass  (In Italian)

Marcel thanks her for the warning and goes with his friends to the rescue. A general conflict is threatened but is prevented by the Queen, who appears just in time. She tells Raoul that Valentine is innocent of wrong, having merely gone to Nevers’ house to ask him to release her. Raoul is overcome with remorse, but the knowledge comes too late, as Valentine is already the wife of Nevers.

A richly decorated boat approaches, occupied by the nuptial suite. Nevers leads Valentine to it, and as all salute the bridal couple the boat moves away, while Raoul, overcome by grief, is supported by Marcel. The curtain falls.

ACT IV

SCENE—A Room in Nevers’ Castle

Valentine, alone, broods over her sorrows, confessing to herself that although wedded to another, she still loves Raoul. She is astounded to see her lover appear, he having braved death and entered the castle to see her again. Valentine hears her father’s voice, and hastily conceals Raoul behind the tapestry. The Catholic nobles enter to discuss the plot outlined by St. Bris. They finally agree to his fiendish proposal, and swear to slaughter the Huguenots. Nevers is horrified at the bloody scheme to exterminate all Protestants, and refusing to become an assassin, he breaks his sword, and is led away by the guards.

The conference closes with the famous Benediction of the Swords, perhaps the greatest and most thrilling of all operatic scenes. A magnificent record of this number has been given by Journet and the Opera chorus.

Benediction of the Swords

By Marcel Journet, Bass, and Metropolitan Opera Chorus  (In Italian)

By Sousa’s Band

By Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED HUGUENOTS RECORDS, page 186.
The number begins with the strain sung by St. Bris in his recital of the plan.

This is followed by the noble strain of the Benediction, one of the best known passages in Meyerbeer's work—

ST. BRIS:
Do you wish our dear country to save?
MONKS AND NOBLES:
It is our wish! our hearts' desire!
ST. BRIS:
To serve our noble King,
Will ye the traitors destroy?
MONKS AND NOBLES:
The King's commands, we will obey!
ST. BRIS:
'Tis well! now hear the King's decree:
These Huguenots, whose vile detested race we hate,
Shall from this day by the sword disappear!
ST. BRIS:
On Heaven's just cause relying,
This impious race defying,
'Mid thousands round thee dying,
Now swear that no mercy thou'lt show!
A sacred zeal inspiring,
All hearts with courage firing,
To compass Heav'n's desiring,
Now for vengeance we go!

Then comes the furious and fanatical chorus of priests and lords, one of the most difficult of ensembles.

ALL:
Strike them down, men and children, all!
And let no mercy ever be shown!
By the sword they shall perish,
And their temples be o'erthrown!

ST. BRIS:
Be silent, my friends, and breathe not e'en a murmur
To wake our slumb'ring foe!

ALL:
Whisper low, not a word,
Not a breath or sign revealing, while we,
silent stealing,
Strike the impious foe!
(With fury.)
Now for vengeance! we will go!

The number closes with the famous passage for the basses which finishes on a low E natural, sung very pianissimo, as the company disperses.

The nobles having gone, Raoul comes out, horrified at what he has heard, and wishes to warn his friends, when Valentine, thinking to save his life, urges him to remain, telling him that she loves him.

In a transport of delight he begins the great duet.

Dillo ancor (Speak Those Words Again!)

RAOUL:
Ah! say again thou lov'st me!
From darkness drear I have awakened to bliss!
Forever now we're united,
Thou hast link'd thy fate to mine—
Forever, forever, forever!
Say once again thou lov'st me!

LA SALLE AS NEVERS

The great bell of St. Germain, the signal to prepare for the slaughter, is heard tolling, and Raoul makes a fresh effort to go to the aid of his people. Valentine clings to him, but he rushes to the window, and shows her that the massacre has already begun; then tears himself from her arms and leaps from the window, while she falls fainting.

In recent productions in America, because of the great length of Meyerbeer's work, the opera has ended with the shooting of Raoul by the mob as he leaps from the window; but in the original version a fifth act occurs, in which Nevers is killed, and Valentine, renouncing her faith, is united by Marcel to Raoul. St. Bris and his party enter the street, and not recognizing Valentine, fire upon the three and kill them. The curtain falls as St. Bris discovers that he has murdered his daughter. This final tragedy is graphically pictured in the accompanying reproduction from an old drawing.

Time and Place: The scene is laid in Naples, at the present time.
Few operas of recent years have met with the unqualified success which has been accorded Wolf-Ferrari's vivid melodrama of Neapolitan life. The story of the opera is the composer's own idea, based on actual happenings in the squalid, superstitious life of the people of Naples, feverish with its reckless gayety, and mingled with sadness and gloom. The wild doings of the Cammorists, the preparations for the celebration in honor of the Virgin, the pageantry of the Catholic ceremonial and the wild tumult of Neapolitan revelries form the background and atmosphere for this realistic music-drama.

The plot may be summed up as follows: Maliella, a wayward Neapolitan beauty, is loved by her foster brother, Gennaro, a simple, honest lad, but the girl is infatuated with the dashing Rafaele, leader of the Cammorists. Rafaele proudly boasts that he would stop at nothing to prove his love for Maliella, declaring he would even steal for her the jewels which deck the image of the Virgin. The young girl, annoyed by Gennaro's attentions, taunts him with not daring to do for her what Rafaele had offered. Almost in the hope of winning her favor the poor fellow steals to the church at night, secures the jewels, and lays them at Maliella's feet. At first she is fascinated by the brilliancy of the gems, but as she realizes the awful sacrilege Gennaro has committed she flies to Rafaele, whom she finds in the inn of the Cammorists. He, in a frenzy of jealousy, spurns her, declaring she has sold herself for the jewels. The unhappy girl drowns herself, and Gennaro, in an abandon of remorse and despair, places the jewels on an altar, prays for mercy, and drives a dagger into his heart. As the people, bent on vengeance, burst into the room, they see the body of the unfortunate youth lying before the Madonna.

One of the features of the opera is the beautiful waltz intermezzo between the second and third acts, which has been given here in delightful fashion by the Victor's fine organization, under Mr. Rogers' direction.
Konigskinder . The King's Children

FAIRY OPERA IN THREE ACTS

Book by Ernst Rosmer (Elsa Bernstein). Music by Engelbert Humperdinck. First production in any country December 28, 1910, at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, with Farrar, Homer, Jadlowker and Goritz in the cast. The opera has since been given in London and throughout Europe.

The opera of Konigskinder is based on a three-act play by Ernst Rosmer (in private life Elsa Bernstein), with incidental music by Humperdinck. The first production of this play took place at Munich, January 23, 1897, and the following year it was given at Irving Place Theatre, New York, and four years later in English as Children of the King.

Humperdinck's opera is allegorical in character, illustrating the stupidity of mankind in failing to recognize true loyalty when it appears to them in disguise. It is a human little story, full of pathos, humor and tenderness, and no one could have given it the gentle, sympathetic touch better than Humperdinck.
The story tells of a Goose Girl who lives with an old Witch in the hills above the town of Hellabrunn. A poorly-dressed youth comes out of the woods and tells the Goose Girl of his wanderings. He is in reality the King's Son, but the girl does not know this. The boy falls in love with the beautiful maiden, and asks her to go maying with him through the summer land. The girl longs to run off with him, but finds her feet glued to the ground. The King's Son, believing her afraid to go, tells her she is unworthy to be a king's mate, and leaves her, vowing she shall never see him again till a star has fallen into a lily which is blooming nearby.

The Witch returns and scolds the Goose Girl for wasting her time on a man. The Fiddler enters, followed by the Woodcutter and Broommaker from the town, who come to ask the Witch if she has seen the King's Son, as the King is dead and the people want the son to rule in his place. The Witch tells them that the first person who enters the city gate next day at noon, no matter what his seeming social condition may be, will be crowned King. The Woodcutter and Broommaker depart, but the Fiddler lingers, hoping to get a glimpse of the Goose Girl, who is in the hut. She appears and tells him her sorrows, and he assures her she shall wed the King's Son. The girl prays that his words may come true, and as she kneels a shooting star falls into the heart of the lily. She runs off into the woods with her flock in search of her lover.

In Act II we see the town of Hellabrunn in an uproar, awaiting the new ruler. At the inn near the town gates is the King's Son, still in rags. Musicians enter and a dance begins. The Gatekeeper refuses to allow the people to crowd in the gateway, keeping it clear for the entry of the King. The Woodcutter is invited to relate his adventures in the woods, and he says that on the stroke of twelve the King's Son will enter the gates. The people scoff at the suggestion that their new King might come in rags, but as the clock strikes twelve, the crowd rushes toward the gates and beholds the King's Son in his rags, and the Goose Girl, escorted by her flock, entering the city. The people, with the exception of the Fiddler, who recognizes the King's Son, mock the couple and drive them out with sticks.

In Act III the Fiddler, who has been cast out of the town for his defense of the King's Son and the Goose Girl, is seen at the Witch's hut, feeding the doves the girl has left behind her. He lives here alone, the Witch having been burned at the stake by the people, who declared she had deceived them in her promise of a new ruler. A troop of children come to beg the Fiddler to lead them in a search for the lost King's Son and his sweetheart, and he gladly consents. The Woodcutter and the Broommaker arrive and go into the hut, and hardly has the sound of the searching party died away than the King’s Son and Goose Girl appear. They are half famished and beg of the Woodcutter something to eat, and he finally gives them some poisoned pastry which he finds in the hut. The outcasts eat it and die, and when the Fiddler and the children return from their useless search they can only mournfully bear away to the hills for burial the bodies of the poor Kingly Children.

Scene and Period: India, at the present time.

The first important American production of this opera, with its graceful music and scenes of Oriental splendor, was given by the American Opera Company in 1886, although a version was put on by Emma Abbot in 1883. Since then it has had three revivals—the Patti production of 1890; that of 1895 for Marie Van Zandt, and the Metropolitan revival of 1906-7. The music of the opera is wholly beautiful, and the principal numbers are exquisite compositions—lovely in idea and execution.

The story resembles in some points both Aida and Africaine; all three are more or less Oriental; Lakmé, like Aida, loves her country's enemy; Nilakantha and Nelusko possess similar traits; while Lakmé and Selika both poison themselves botanically.

The Oriental atmosphere is somewhat spoiled by the introduction of the modern and somewhat commonplace English characters, but the romantic ending atones for any shortcomings.

ACT I

SCENE—A Garden in India

Nilankatha, Lakmé's father, hates the English invaders and resists their presence in India. Gerald and Frederic, English officers, while sauntering with some English ladies, venture on sacred ground near Nilakantha's temple, and when rebuked they all depart but Gerald, who remains to sketch some Oriental jewels which Lakmé had left in the garden. He takes up the trinkets and sings his charming air, Idle Fancies.

Fantaisie aux divins mensonges (Idle Fancies)

By M. Rocca, Tenor
(Double-faced—See page 195) (In French) 16573 10-inch. $0.75

He is struck with the daintiness and beauty of the gems and tries to picture the unknown beauty to whom they belong.
Going seeing her in, leaving him ground.

GERALD: (Taking but As Why While In Why And Of Go Idle has Lakme begsone.
This bracelet rich must oft entwine.
Ah! what delight would be the holding,
The hand that passes there, in mine.

(Taking up a ring)
This ring of gold, my dream supposes,
Oft has followed, wand'ring for hours,
The small foot, that but reproses
On mossy banks or beds of flowers.
This necklace, too, with her own perfume scented.
Embalm’d as yet with sweets from her lips that came,
Has felt the true heart, beating, glad, contented.
Trembling with joy at the one well-loved name.
Away, fly, fond illusions,
Swiftly passing visions that my reason disturb!
Idle fancy, cradled by delusion, etc.

(From the Ditson Edition.)

This beautiful air has been sung for the Victor by a brilliant and accomplished young tenor, M. Rocca, of the Opera Comique.

Hearing some one approaching, Gerald hides himself in the shrubbery. Lakmé enters and lays flowers at the feet of an idol. She is about to go when she pauses and tries to analyze a strange feeling which has come over her, saying:

LAKMÉ:
In my heart now I feel there’s a murmur so strange,
The flow’rs are more lovely appearing,
And Heaven’s more radiant now.
From woods a new song I am hearing,
Fond zephyrs caress my brow,
And a fragrance that’s rare is filling.
All my senses with a rapture so thrilling!

She then sings her first lovely song.

Pourquoi dans les grands bois
(Why Love I Thus to Stray?)

and asks herself why she loves to wander in the forest and why she is both sad and glad.

Ah! why?
Why look for reasons here, in the song of the stream,
Where roses dream?
In leaves that fall around?
In my heart soft repose, like a lily at rest,
Sweeter balm than yield roses, by gentle winds caressed,
Or by loving lips pressed. Tho’ I sigh, I’m gladsome,
Ah, why?

She suddenly sees Gerald among the trees and utters a cry of fear. Her attendants run in, but some intuition tells her not to reveal Gerald’s presence, and she sends them away. Going to his hiding place she denounces him for trespassing on sacred ground, and bids him begone. He begs her for a few moments’ conversation, and tells her of the impression she has made on his heart.

GERALD: Ah! linger, go not yet, so thoughtful, sweet, unchiding!
Let blushing charms that mine eyes now have met,
O’er mantle thy cheek,
Its lily pallor hiding!

Lakmé looks on the handsome youth with interest, but tells him she fears the return of her father, who would surely seek vengeance for the Englishman’s desecration of holy ground. Gerald departs just as Nilakantha, summoned by Lakmé’s attendants, enters, and seeing traces of a trespasser, declares that he must die. They go in pursuit of Gerald, leaving Lakmé motionless with fear.

ACT II

SCENE—A Street in an Indian City

Act II shows a public square, lined with Chinese and Indian shops and bazaars. English visitors are strolling about, viewing the scenes with interest. Nilakantha, disguised as a beggar, is seeking traces of the intruder, whom he has sworn to kill. Lakmé is with him, wearing the dress of a dancing girl. He orders his daughter to sing, hoping that the Englishman will recognize her voice and betray himself. She sings the famous Bell Song.

Où va la jeune Hindoue (Bell Song)

By Luisa Tetrazzini, Soprano
By Bessie Abott, Soprano
By Maria Galvany, Soprano
By Ellen Beach Yaw, Soprano

Delibes has ingeniously used bells to give character to this number, which is a most intricate one, especially in the refrain, where voice, woodwind and bells blend with many charming touches.

LAKMÉ:

Down there, where shades more deep are Glimmering,
What trav’ler’s that, alone, astray?
Arouse him flame bright eyes, dark depths
Illuming,
But on her journeys, as by chance, on the way!
The wolves in their wild joy are howling,
As if for their prey they were prowling;
The young girl forward runs, and doth their Fury dare.
A ring in her grasp she holds tightly,
Whence tinkle a bell, sharply, lightly,
A bell that tinkle, lightly, that charmers wear!
(She imitates the bell.)
Ah! Ah! Ah! Ah! Ah!
While the stranger regards her
Stands she dazed, flush’d and glowing,
More handsome than the Rajahs, he!

And to heaven she soars in his holding,
It was Vishnu, great Brahman’s son!
And since the day in that dark wood,
The trav’ler hears, where Vishnu stood,
The sound of a little bell ringing,
The legend back to him bringing,
A small bell ringing like those the charmers
Wear!

Mme. Tetrazzini’s rendition of this beautiful air is wholly charming, and the vocal embellishments which she introduces will be something of a novelty to those who are familiar only with the usual cadenzas.

Other fine renditions of this brilliant air are given by Mme. Galvany, who indulges in some quite astonishing cadenzas; by Bessie Abott, whose fresh young voice is heard to great advantage; and by Miss Yaw, who provides a lower-priced version.

As Nilakantha had planned, Gerald recognizes Lakmé and betrays himself. The Brahman goes to collect his Hindoos, intending to kill the Englishman, while Lakmé finds Gerald, warns him of the plot, and tells him of a hut in the forest where he may be free from pursuit.

LAKMÉ:

In the forest near at hand,
A hut of bamboo is hiding,
‘Neath a shading tree doth stand,
This roof of my providing,
Like a nest of timid birds,
In leafy silence abiding,
From all eyes secret it lies,
And waits it there a happy pair!

Far away from prying sight,
Without their’s naught to reveal it,
Silent woods by day and night,
Ever jealously conceal it;
Thither shalt thou follow me!
When dawn earth is greeting,
Thee with smiles I shall be meeting.
For ’tis there thy home shall be.
Gerald at first refuses thus to hide, declaring it unworthy of a British officer, but Lakmé pleads with him and he consents; but as he attempts to follow her he is stabbed by Nilakantha, who then escapes. Lakmé runs to Gerald, and overjoyed to find his wound is not serious, she prepares, with the help of her faithful attendant Hadji, to bear him to the forest retreat.

ACT III

SCENE—An Indian Forest

Act III shows the hut in the tropical forest. Gerald is lying on a bed of leaves while Lakmé watches over him, singing soothing melodies. He opens his eyes and greets her with rapture, singing his beautiful In Forest Depths.

Vieni al contento profondo
(In Forest Depths)

By John McCormack, Tenor
(In Italian) 64171 10-inch, $1.00

This lovely cantilena is given in delightful style by Mr. McCormack.

Gerald: I too recall,—still mute, inanimate,—I saw you bent o'er my lips; while thus lying, My soul upon your look was attracted and fastened;
Neath your breath life awoke and recovery hastened.
O my charming Lakmé;
Through forest depths secluded,
Love's wing above us has passed;
Earth-cares have not been intruded,
And heaven on us falls at last.
These flow'ring vines, with blooms capricious,
Bear o'er our pathway scents delicious;
Which soft hearts, with raptures beset,
While all else we forget!

As the days pass and Gerald recovers his strength, he seems to forget all else but his love for the Brahman maiden, but one day, while she is absent, his friend Frederic finds him and urges him to return to his duty, telling him his regiment is ordered off at once to suppress an outbreak among the Hindoos. Gerald promises to be at his post in time, but asks for a little time in which to say good-bye to Lakmé. Frederic leaves with his promise, and when Lakmé comes back she finds Gerald changed. She asks the reason, but before he can answer the distant sound of bugles calling the regiment together is heard. She sees by his face that he means to go back to his friends, and in despair she eats some flowers of the deadly stramonium tree and dies in his arms, just as her father and friends arrive upon the scene.

Time and Place: Chamounix and Paris, 1760, during the reign of Louis XV.

The story tells of an aged couple, Loustolot and Madeline, and their only daughter Linda, who dwell in the valley of the Chamounix (in the French Alps). Linda loves a young painter, Charles, who has come to the valley to paint the mountains. The Marquis de Sirval, who holds a mortgage on Loustolot’s farm, visits the old couple and assures them that he will not press the mortgage; but at the same time he is secretly plotting to effect the ruin of Linda.

Linda enters and speaks of her love for Charles. She then sings the gem of the first act, a favorite with coloratura sopranos for more than seventy years.

A Huguet record of this lovely air is offered here, doubled with the Trentini-Caffo duet below.

LINDA and CHARLES:

Oh! that the blessed day were come,

As bridgroom and as bride.

The worthy parish priest having warned Linda’s parents of the dishonorable intention of the Marquis, they decide to remove Linda from the danger, and send her to Paris. The Marquis pursues her to the city and renews his attentions, while Charles (who is in reality the son of the Marquis) is compelled by his father to transfer his attentions to another. Linda’s father comes to Paris in disguise, and discovers his daughter. Believing her to be an abandoned woman, he curses her, and she becomes insane through grief.

The last act again shows the little farm at Chamounix. The demented Linda has made her way back to her parents, and is found by Charles, who has escaped the unwelcome marriage and now brings the release of the farm from debt. The sight of her lover causes Linda to fall in a death-like swoon, but when she recovers her reason has returned, and the lovers are united.
LOBETANZ

MERRYDANCE

MUSICAL PLAY IN THREE ACTS

Text by Otto Julius Bierbaum; music by Ludwig Thuille. First production at Mannheim, Germany, 1898. First production in America November 18, 1911, with Gadski, Jadlowker, Witherspoon and Murphy.

Cast

LOBETANZ
THE PRINCESS
THE KING
THE FORESTER,
THE HANGMAN,
THE JUDGE,

Girls, musicians, prisoners, two heralds, the people.

Time and Place: Germany in the Middle Ages.

The story of Lobetanz resembles an old fairy tale in its simplicity, the Prince Charming in this instance being a wandering musician, and the ending, as in all good fairy stories, being of the “lived-happy-ever-after” variety.

The curtain rises on a rose fête, which young girls are preparing in anticipation of the arrival of the King and his daughter. The Princess is ill, and the King has appointed a day of festivity in the hope that it will revive her. Lobetanz, a wandering musician, strolls into the King’s rose garden, where the preparations are being made, and stays to watch the royal procession, which is accompanied by poets and singers. The musicians play and sing to the Princess, but all their efforts fail to please her. Suddenly a violin is heard from an arbor in the rear of the garden. The Princess is immediately fascinated with the music, and Lobetanz comes forward, his instrument on his shoulder. The pathos of his playing so affects the Princess that she swoons, and Lobetanz barely escapes from the wrath of the people.

In the second act the strolling minstrel meets the Princess in a wood and tells her of his love for her. The lovers are interrupted by the arrival of the King and the royal hunting party, and Lobetanz is seized by the pikemen and dragged away, while the Princess falls in a swoon.

The third act shows the unfortunate lover in prison, charged with witchcraft, and sentenced to be hanged. As preparations are being made to place the noose about his neck, the funeral procession of the Princess approaches. Lobetanz begs to be allowed to play upon his violin once more, declaring he can revive her. The King promises him his daughter’s hand if he can bring her back to life again. As Lobetanz plays, the flush of life appears upon the cheeks of the young girl, and she slowly revives and is clasped in her lover’s arms. The act closes with a merry dance, in which every one joins, and we are left to suppose that the lovers “live happy ever after.”

The air which Mme. Gadski has sung for the Victor occurs in Act I, in the scene representing the rose garden of the King, where the rose festival is to be celebrated. The Princess, at the bidding of the King, offers a greeting to Spring and the roses.

Scene and Period: Antwerp, first half of the tenth century.

Most of us are familiar with the story of the Knight Lohengrin, who comes in his boat, drawn by a swan, to defend Elsa from the charge (preferred by Telramund and Ortrud, who covet Elsa’s estates) of having murdered her young brother, Godfrey.

Telramund is vanquished and disgraced by Lohengrin, who wins Elsa as his bride. One condition he exacts from her—that she shall never ask who he is or whence he came. By the influence of Ortrud, however, she rashly questions him, and in fulfillment of his vow, but in deep grief, he leaves her and departs in his boat drawn by a dove. The ethereal Grail harmonies, the lovely Swan Motive, the noble Prayer of the King and the Bridal Chorus make this one of the most melodious of all the master’s operas.

Prelude

By La Scala Orchestra 31779 12-inch, $1.00

The prelude, one of the most beautiful of all Wagner’s compositions, symbolizes the descent from Heaven of a group of angels bearing the Holy Grail. The number begins with soft A major chords in the highest register of the violin. The motive of the Grail is then announced:

Coming nearer and nearer, the light of the Grail is seen in the sky, while the air is filled with the blessings dispensed by the holy cup. As the sounds grow louder, the senses are overwhelmed, until at the tremendous climax thundered out by the full orchestra the mystic light of the Grail is seen in all its glory.
The mysterious Grail motive then fades away, being played at the end by muted strings; and the number ends with the same A major chords pianissimo.

ACT I

SCENE—Banks of the Scheldt, near Antwerp

King Henry of Germany arrives at Antwerp and finds Brabant in almost a state of anarchy. He summons the counts and nobles of Saxony and Brabant to meet under the Oak of Justice, and calls on Frederick of Telramund for an explanation, saying:

King. Here, to my grief, I meet with naught but strife,
All in disunion, from your chiefs estranged!
Confusion, civil warfare meet we here.
On thee I call, Frederick of Telramund!
I know thee for a knight as brave as true,
I charge thee, let me know this trouble’s cause.

Frederick now advances and begins his narrative, boldly accusing Elsa of the murder of her brother.

Frederick:
Thanks, gracious King, that thou to judge art come!
The truth I’ll tell thee, falsehood I disdain.
When death was closing round our valiant Duke,
’Twas me he chose as guardian of his children,
Elsa the maiden, and Gottfried her brother;
Whose dawning with tender care I guarded,
Whose welfare I have treasured as my honor.
My sov’reign, mark now, if I’m aggrieved,

When of my honor’s treasure I am robbed!
One day, when Elsa had with her brother wandered forth,
Without the boy, trembling, she returned,
With feign’d lamenting, questioned of his safety,
 Pretending she had been from him divided,
And in vain his traces she had sought,
Fruitless was every search we made to find him;
And when I questioned her with words severe,
Her pallor and her falt’ring tongue betray’d her,
Her crime in its guilty blackness stood confess’d!
A horror fell upon me of the maid;
The claim upon her hand her father had conferr’d
With willing heart, I straight resigned,
And chose a wife full pleasant to my sense,
Ortrud, daughter of Radbod, true in death.
I here arraign her, Princess Elsa of Brabant;
Of fratricide be she charged!
I claim dominion o’er this land by right;
My nearest kinsman was the valiant Duke,
My wife descended of the race
That gave this land their rulers thro’ long ages past.
O King, give judgment! All now thou hast heard!
The King is much disturbed, and asks that Elsa be sent for. When she enters timidly, with downcast eyes, he says kindly: “Speak, Elsa, in thy King thou may’st confide!”

The young girl seems bewildered and dreamily sings the lovely Traum, telling of her vision of a splendid Knight who came to be her defender.

Elsa: Oft when the hours were lonely,
I unto Heav’n have pray’d;
One boon I ask’d for only,
To send the orphans aid;
Away my words were wafted,
I dreamt not help was nigh.
But One on high vouchsaf’d it,
While I in sleep did lie.
(with growing enthusiasm)
I saw in splendor shining,
A knight of glorious mien,
On me his eyes inclining,
With tranquil gaze serene.
A horn of gold beside him,
He leant upon his sword,
His words so low and tender,
Brought life renew’d to me.
(with rapture)
My guardian, my defender,
Thou shalt my champion be.

The King is much moved, and calls for a judgment of God after the fashion of the time. The trumpeters blow the summons to the four points of the compass, and the Herald calls:

Who will do battle here for Elsa of Brabant! Let him appear!

At first there comes no response, and Elsa is in despair, but after a second call a knight in shining armor is seen approaching in a boat drawn by a swan.
The King bids the nobles prepare to fight, and in this noble Gebet calls upon Heaven to judge between the combatants.

By Marcel Journet, Bass

64013 10-inch, $1.00

The King is one of Journet's best parts, and he always sings it magnificently, his great voice rolling out in tremendous volume. His delivery is always easy and graceful, and his acting dignified and intelligent.

KING HENRY:

O King of kings, on Thee I call;
Look down on us in this dread hour!
Let him in this ordeal fall
Whom Thou know'st guilty, Lord of pow'r!
To stainless knight give strength and might,
With craven heart the false one smile;
Do Thou, O Lord, to hear us deign,
For all our wisdom is but vain!

Frederick is soon stricken to the earth by Lohengrin, who is proclaimed a hero. Elsa is pronounced innocent, plights her troth to her brave defender, and the curtain falls amid general rejoicing.
Euch luften du mein Klagen

ELSA:
Ye wand'ring breezes heard me,
When grief was all I knew;
Now that delight hath stirred me,
My joy I'll breathe to you!

TELRAMUND AND ORTRUD:
'Tis she! Be near, ye powers of darkness!

ELSA (continuing dreamily):
Thro' heaven's azure ye bore him,
Ye wafted him to me;
'Mid stormy waves watched o'er him,
My guide, my love to be!
Where'er thy pinion rusheth,
The mourner's tears are dried;
My cheek that burns and flusheth
With love, oh cool and hide!

Du Aermste (Thou Unhappy One) By Emma Eames and Louise Homer (In German)
89021 12-inch, $4.00

Elsa, who has finished her rapturous soliloquy to the wandering breeze, still lingers on the balcony, enjoying the balmy night and dreaming of her betrothal on the morrow. Ortrud, pursuing the plot agreed upon with Frederick, appears and calls to Elsa, who hearing her name, cries:

Who calls? How strangely
My name resoundeth thro' the night!

Ortrud feigns repentance, and Elsa, in her new-found happiness, forgives her, saying:

No child of earth that bliss can measure
Who doth not dwell in faith devout!
Rest thee with me!
Ortrud warns Elsa against trusting her husband too blindly, hinting of the mystery in his life, and thus plants a seed of suspicion in the young girl's heart. The duet then follows:

Elsa:
Oh, let me teach thee
How trust doth hallow joy and love.
Turn, then, to our faith, I beseech thee,
Oh, turn unto our faith divine,
For God is love!

Ortrud (aside—with fierce joy):
Oh! pride of heart, I yet will teach thee,
That an illusion is this love,
The gods of vengeance soon shall reach thee,
Their wrath-destroying thou shalt prove!

Elsa enters the palace and Telramund renews his vow of imprecation.

Day breaks, and the Herald appears and announces the banishment of Telramund. Elsa, attended by her ladies, passes on her way to the minster but is suddenly confronted by Ortrud, who has arrayed herself again in splendid garments. She taunts Elsa with the fact that her knight has no name.

Ortrud:
Your stranger, say, as what doth thou proclaim him?
If I have heard aright, thou canst not name him!

Elsa (indignantly):
Thou slanderer, taunt me no more,
Let my reply all doubts assure—
So pure and noble is his nature,
As none can match in high renown.
Oh, can there live so vile a creature
As to asperse all honor's crown?

The King and Lohengrin now enter and Elsa, astonished and grieved, goes to Lohengrin, saying:

Elsa:
My champion! shelter me against her wrath!
Blame me, if I obey'd not thy command;
I heard her weeping sore by yonder portal,

And in compassion harbor'd her this night,
And now with harsh and bitter words of hatred
She taunts me for my boundless trust in thee!
ACT III
SCENE I—The Bridal Chamber in the Palace
The act opens with the Wedding March, played by the orchestra.

Prelude to Act III—The Wedding March
By La Scala Orchestra

This is followed by the beautiful Bridal Chorus, one of the loveliest numbers in the opera. As the curtain rises, showing the bridal chamber, the strains of the march continue, but in a softer mood. The great doors at the back open, and the bridal party enters,—the ladies leading Elsa and the King and nobles conducting Lohengrin,—they come to the front and the chorus begins:

CHORUS:
Faithful and true, we lead thee forth
Where Love, triumphant, shall crown ye with joy!
Star of renown, flow'r of the earth,
Blest be ye both far from all life's annoy!
Champion victorious, go thou before!
Maid bright and glorious, go thou before!
Tender delights for you now awaken;
Fragrant abode enshrine ye in bliss;
Splendor and state in joy ye dismiss!

EIGHT LADIES (passing around the bridal pair):
As solemn vows unite ye
We hallow ye to joy!
This hour shall still requite ye,
When bliss hath known alloy!

After a striking and effective modulation the first strain is repeated by the full chorus.

Faithful and true, now rest you here.
Where Love, triumphant, etc.

The party goes slowly out, leaving the bridal pair alone, while the strains of the nuptial air die away in the distance.

The full strength of the Victor organization has been used for the vocal rendition, and the result is a record of surpassing beauty. An instrumental record of this number is also offered.

Athmest du nicht mit mir die süßen Düfte?
(Dost Thou Breathe the Incense Sweet?)
By Charles Dalmores, Tenor
(In German) 87088 10-inch, $2.00

This duet is scarcely over when the poison instilled in Elsa's mind by Ortrud causes her, in violation of her promise, to question...
Lohengrin as to his name and origin. He remonstrates with her, at first gently and then with authority, reminding her that she has promised not to ask his name. She becomes more and more agitated, saying:

ELSA:
No, thou shalt not compel me to trust by words of blame—
No, not unless thou tell me thy country and thy name!

LOHENGRIN:
Elsa, oh, I conjure thee!

ELSA:
What fatal spell is thine?
In vain wouldst thou assure me—
Declare thy race and name!

They are interrupted by the entrance of Frederick and four associates, who break in with drawn swords. Elsa shrieks and hands Lohengrin his sword, with which he strikes Frederick dead. The nobles surrender, and Elsa falls senseless in Lohengrin's arms. After a long silence, Lohengrin orders the body into the Judgment Hall, and gives Elsa in charge of her ladies.

SCENE II—Same as Act I

A quick change of scene shows again the banks of the Scheldt at Antwerp, as in Act I. The King and his nobles await the coming of Lohengrin, who is to accompany them to battle. They are startled by the entrance of the nobles bearing the body of Telramund. Lohengrin enters and is greeted by the King with warmth:

KING:
Hail, heav'n-sent hero, welcome here!
Thy loyal vassals all are near,
Waiting for thee to give the word,
And fight by thy all-conq'ring sword.

All are surprised when the knight announces that he is forced to decline the command of the expedition, and tells of the attempt on his life.

LOHENGRIN:
My gracious sov'reign, bear me blameless,
Reasons have I that must be nameless,
The destin'd campaign I suspend!
To lead ye forth to battle here I came not;
But judge me, for your leniency I claim not.
Then, firstly, do ye hold that I am guilty?
Your just decree to me is due.
He sought my life despite honor and fealty—
Say, did I right when him I slew?

The King declares Telramund to be justly slain, and Lohengrin now reveals with reluctance that Elsa has broken her promise.

LOHENGRIN:
And further, I declare in face of Heav'n,
Though bitter grief to me it bode,
That from her fair allegiance hath been driven
The wife that Heav'n on me bestow'd.

MEN:
Elsa! say, oh, what hast thou done?
Sentence so stern how hast thou won?

LADIES:
Woe is thine, Elsa!

VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA—WAGNER’S LOHENGRIN

LOHENGRIN:
Ye all have heard her give her word in token
That she my name and country ne'er would ask;
That promise her impatient heart hath broken—

After this amazing narrative, which causes a great stir among the people, the swan appears to conduct Lohengrin away.

LADIES AND MEN:
While I hear him the wondrous tale revealing,
The holy tears adown my cheek are stealing!

ELSA:
'Tis dark around me! Give me air!
Oh, help, help! oh, me, most wretched!

LADIES AND MEN (in great excitement):
The swan! the swan! the swan! The swan he floateth down.
The swan! ah, he comes!

ELSA (half-fainting):
Oh, horror! ah, the swan!

LOHENGRIN:
Too long I stay—I must obey the Grail!
My trusty swan! O that this summons ne'er had been!
Oh, that this day I ne'er had seen!
I thought the year would soon be o'er
When thy probation would have pass'd;
Then by the Grail’s transcendent pow’r
In thy true shape we’d meet at last!
Oh, Elsa, think what joys thy doubts have ended!
Couldst thou not trust in me for one short year?

Ortrud, in triumph, now reveals the fact that the swan is really Elsa’s brother, whom she had transformed by magic. Lohengrin kneels in prayer, and as the dove of the Grail is seen descending, the swan sinks, and Gottfried, the young Duke, arises, restored to human form. Lohengrin’s boat is drawn away by the dove as Elsa faints in her brother’s arms.

Girls at the Dressmaking Establishment, Street Peddlers, People, etc.

Scene and Period: Paris; the present time.

Charpentier’s first opera, Louise, is a romance of bohemian Paris. The story tells of Louise, a beautiful young girl engaged in a dressmaking establishment. Julien, a romantic artist, falls in love with the maiden, and soon finds his love returned. The mother and father of Louise disapprove of the gay young artist, but Julien will not give up his sweetheart, and implores her to leave her hard work and go with him to a little home. Louise at first steadily resists, knowing how her parents would grieve, but Julien persists, tempts her with visions of a bright future with him, and at last, unable to resist, the young girl goes with him to Montmartre.

Here she falls in with a merry company of true Parisian bohemians, who crown her as the Queen of Revels. In the midst of a gay party her mother appears, begging the young girl to return to her father, who is ill. Louise is filled with remorse and returns to her home, trying all the while to forget the gay, happy life she has left at Montmartre. Her father reproaches her for her conduct, and Louise, remembering only the kindness and tenderness of Julien, rushes out into the night and hastens back to the protection of her lover.

The Victor offers two fine records of the lovely Depuis le jour, sung by Louise in the garden at Montmartre in Act III. The young girl tells Julien how happy she has been since they came to the cottage, comparing her life with him to the dreary one she had left.

The prolific Donizetti (1797-1848) wrote no fewer than sixty-three operas, the most popular of these being, of course, Lucia di Lammermoor. It has long been the custom with a certain class of critics to run down the old Italian school of opera represented by Lucia, and talk about the artificiality of the music, thinness of the orchestration, etc. But the public in general pays very little attention to these opinions, because they love the music of Lucia, as their grandfathers did, and realize that throughout the whole work there runs a current of tenderness and passion, expressed in simple melody that will ever appeal to the heart.

Let us now forget the critics and tell the simple and sorrowful story, and listen to the melodious airs which have given pleasure to many millions in the seventy-six years since its production.

The plot of Lucia is founded on Sir Walter Scott’s novel, The Bride of Lammermoor. Lord Henry Ashton, Lucy’s brother, knowing nothing of her attachment to his enemy, Edgar of Ravenswood, has arranged a marriage between Lucy and the wealthy Lord Arthur, in order to retrieve his fallen fortunes. Learning that Lucy is in love with Edgar, he intercepts her lover’s letters and executes a forged paper, which convinces Lucy that Edgar is false to her. Convinced of her lover’s perfidy, and urged by the necessities of her brother, she unwillingly consents to wed Sir Arthur.

The guests are assembled for the ceremony, and Lucy has just signed the contract, when Edgar appears and denounces Lucy for her fickleness. Edgar is driven from the castle, and the shock being too much for the gentle mind of Lucy, she becomes insane, kills her husband and dies. Edgar, overcome by these tragic happenings, visits the churchyard of Ravenswood and stabs himself among the tombs of his ancestors.
ACT I

SCENE I—A Forest near Lammermoor

The curtain rises, disclosing Norman, and followers of Sir Henry. Norman tells the retainers to watch carefully and ascertain who is secretly meeting Lucy. In the opening chorus they promise to watch with diligence.

Opening Chorus, Act I

Sir Henry enters and talks with Norman of his suspicion that Lucy has formed an attachment for some unknown knight. Norman suggests that it may be Edgar. Henry is furious and declares he will have a deadly vengeance.

SCENE II—A Park near the Castle

Lucy enters, accompanied by her faithful attendant, Alice. She has come from the castle to meet her lover, Edgar; and while waiting for him, tells Alice of the legend of the fountain, which relates how a Ravenswood lover once slew a maiden on this spot.

Lucy shudderingly relates how she once saw the spectre of the murdered girl, and fears it is an omen of the future.

Lucia:
Silence o’er all was reigning,
Dark was the night and low’ring,
And o’er the fountain, her pale ray
Yon pale moon was pouring,
Faintly a sharp but stifled sigh
Fell on my startled ear,
And straightway upon the fountain’s brink,
The spectre did appear!
But slow on high its skeleton hand,

This graceful number is given by Mme. Tetrazzini with rare charm and pathos; the concluding ornamental passages being sung with especial delicacy, and the beauty of the long sustained A at the close being notable. The popular-priced rendition by Mme. Huguet is also a very attractive one.

This is followed by the second part,—the beautiful Quando rapita,—

Quando rapita in estasi (Swift as Thought)

Graziella Pareto (Italian) 76009 12-inch, $2.00
Giuseppina Huguet *63172 10-inch, .75

also given here by Mme. Huguet and Mme. Pareto. This animated melody is well fitted to display the brilliant tones of these admirable singers.

Edgar appears and tells Lucy that he has been summoned to France, and proposes that he seek out Henry and endeavor to end the mortal feud which exists between the families. Lucy, knowing her brother too well, entreats him to keep their love secret or they will be forever parted. Edgar, roused to fury by this evidence of Henry’s mortal hate, renews his vow of vengeance, beginning a dramatic duet.

ACT II

SCENE 1—An Ante-room in the Castle

Sir Henry and his retainer Norman are discussing the approaching marriage of Lucy to Arthur. The events which have occurred since Act I are indicated by this extract from the text:

\textbf{Henry:}
Should Lucy still persist
In opposing me—
\end{quote}

\begin{quote}

love will vanish!
\end{quote}

Lucy enters, pale and listless, and to her brother's greeting:

\begin{quote}
\textbf{Henry:}
Draw nearer, my Lucy.
On this fair day accept a brother's greeting!
May this glad day, sacred to Love and Hymen,
\end{quote}

\begin{quote}
\textbf{Lucy:}

\textbf{Henry:}

she answers with a last appeal to him to release her from this hated marriage.

Hath affection lost all power?
Wilt consign me unto the tomb?

LUCY:
I'm thy sister, dost thou love me!
I am dying, will that move thee!
From the hands of thee, my brother,
Must I meet now this dreadful doom?
Hopeless misery all surrounding,
E'en while the marriage bell is sounding:
Fear and hate will be my dower;
Better had I wed the tomb!

However, convinced of Edgar's falseness, she half consents to the sacrifice, and retires to prepare for the ceremony.

SCENE II—The Great Hall of the Castle

The knights and ladies sing a chorus of congratulation to the bride and bridegroom, while Sir Henry greets the guests and asks them to pardon Lucy's agitated bearing, as she is still mourning for her mother.

Lucy enters and is escorted to the table where the notary is preparing the marriage papers. Believing her lover false, she cares little what becomes of her, and passively signs the contract. Pale as death and almost fainting, she is being supported by her faithful maid and her family adviser, Raymond, when suddenly a terrible silence ensues, as Edgar, the lover of Lucy and the deadly enemy of her brother, appears at the back of the room dressed in a sombre suit of black. The wedding guests are dumb with amazement at the daring of the young noble in thus presenting himself unbidden at the house of his enemy. The great sextette, the most dramatic and thrilling number in the entire range of opera, now begins.

Unlike many operatic ensembles, this sextette is not merely a most remarkable bit of concerted writing, but is so well fitted to the scene in which it occurs that even the enemies of Donizetti, who call Lucia merely a string of melodies, are compelled to admit its extreme beauty and powerful dramatic qualities.

Edgar remains standing, with his eyes steadily fixed on the unhappy Lucy, who is unable to meet his glance. This dramatic silence is broken by the commencement of the sextette, as Edgar and Sir Henry, with suppressed emotion, sing their short duet:

* Double-Faced Record—See page 215.
Henry and Edgar:
Instant vengeance, what restraineth,
What thus stays my sword in scabbard?
Is't affection that still remaineth,
And each angry tho' enchaineth?
Of mine own blood thou'rt betrayer,
And despair heart doth wither,
Yet, ungrateful one, I love thee still!
And remorse my breast doth fill!

Henry and Edgar, who have drawn their swords, are separated by Raymond, who commands them in Heaven's name to sheath their weapons. Henry asks Edgar why he has come, and the knight replies:

Edgar:
Hither came I
For my bride—thy sister
Unto me her faith hath sworn!

Raymond:
Thou must all hope of her relinquish;
She is another's!

He exhibits the signed contract, but Edgar refuses to believe the evidence of his eyes and asks Lucy if she had signed it. With her eyes fixed on him she tremblingly nods her head in assent. Edgar, in a furious rage, tears the contract in pieces, flings it at the fainting maiden, and rushes from the castle as the curtain falls.

ACT III

SCENE I—The Tower of Ravenswood Castle

Edgar is brooding on his misfortunes when a horseman rides up, dismounts and enters the tower. It proves to be Sir Henry, who has come to challenge Edgar to a duel to the death. They agree to fight the following morning, and in this duet ask the night to hasten away, that their vengeance may be consummated.

O sole più rapido (Haste, Crimson Morning)
By Giuseppe Acerbi, Tenor, and Renzo Minolfi, Baritone
(In Italian) *62644 10-inch, $0.75

Why the gentlemen do not take advantage of the present moment the librettist does not reveal! This scene is so melodramatic that it borders on the absurd, and it is usually omitted in this country, although it is well worth hearing from a musical point of view.

SCENE II—Hall in Lammermoor Castle

The peasants and domestics of the castle are making merry at their feast in honor of the marriage when Raymond enters, greatly agitated, bearing the fearful news that Lucy has become insane and has killed her husband. This gives opportunity for a dramatic air, sung here by Signor Sillich and the La Scala Chorus.

O qual funesto avvenimento (Oh! Dire Misfortune)
By Aristodemo Sillich, Bass, and Chorus
(In Italian) *62644 10-inch, $0.75

Raymond's tidings have scarcely been spoken when Lucy enters, a pale and lovely figure in white, and all unconscious of the horror-stricken servants, begins her famous so-called Mad Scene.

Forgetting her marriage, the demented maiden speaks one moment of the happy day when she will be Edgar’s wife, and next is terrified by a vague feeling that something has come between them.

This famous number must be judged solely as a brilliant piece of vocalism; it can hardly be considered dramatically, because when the prima donna loses her reason in this style of opera, it only means that the scales become more rapid and the roulades more difficult. The unfortunate Lucy in her agony seems inclined and able to sing the most difficult and florid music conceivable, and venture without hesitation on passages at which a sane person would stand aghast! In short, Donizetti forgot his dramatic mission temporarily in his efforts to write a show piece of musical execution.

Lucy:
I hear the breathing of his tender voice,
That voice beloved sounds in my heart forever.
My Edgar, why were we parted?
Let me not mourn thee;
See, for thy sake, I’ve all forsaken!
What shudder do I feel thro’ my veins?
My heart is trembling, my senses fail!
(She forgets her trouble and smiles.)
Come to the fountain;
There let us rest together,
Ah me! see where yon spectre arises,
Standing between us! Alas! Dear Edgar!

Donizetti’s scene seems especially set apart for the display of such a coloratura as Melba possesses, and she sings this florid music with such brilliancy and graceful fluency that the listener is dazzled. Her runs, trills and staccato notes glitter and scintillate, and compel a new admiration for the wonderful vocal mechanism over which she has such absolute command.

The rôle of the unhappy Lucy is also admirably fitted to Tetrazzini’s peculiar talents, and as the heroine of Donizetti’s lovely opera she has made quite the greatest success of her career. When she reaches this florid and difficult Mad Scene, the listeners are absolutely electrified, and such a torrent of enthusiasm bursts forth that the diva is usually compelled to repeat a portion of the aria.

Mme. Sembrich’s rendition proves that the compass of her voice is all but phenomenal, and she sings the difficult music with delightful flexibility.

Other renditions of this well-known scene are given by Mme. Galvany and Mme. Pareto, the famous Italian prima donnas, and by Michailowa, the famous Russian singer. Although none of these artists has yet visited America, their beautiful voices are heard in thousands of homes in which the Victor is a welcome entertainer.

The unhappy Lucy, after having in this scene again enacted the terrible events of the previous day, falls insensible and is carried to her room by Alice and Raymond.

SCENE II—The Tombs of the Ravenswoods

Edgar, weary of life, has come to the rendezvous arranged with Henry, intending to throw himself on his enemy’s sword, the last of a doomed race. But he waits in vain, for Henry, filled with remorse at the consequences of his schemes, has left England, never to return.

Edgar sings the first of the two beautiful airs written by Donizetti for this scene.
Fra poco a me ricovero (Farewell to Earth)

By John McCormack, Tenor

(1n Italian) 74223 12-inch $1.50

His attention is now attracted by a train of mourners coming from the castle, accompanied by Raymond, who reveals to the unhappy man that Lucy is dying, and even while they converse the castle bell is heard tolling, a signal that the unhappy maiden is no more.

The grief-stricken lover then depicts his emotion in the second air, a lovely number with sadness in every tone.

Tu che a Dio spiegasti l'ali (Thou Hast Spread Thy Wings to Heaven) (O bell' alma innamorata)

By John McCormack, Tenor

(1n Italian) 74224 12-inch, $1.50

The dramatic interest deepens as the air proceeds, until the finale, when Edgar, in an excess of penitence, prays that not even the spirit of the wronged Lucy may approach so accursed a tomb as that of Ravenswood.

Edgar:

I'll follow thee above,
Thou the world flown'd on our union,
Yet on high, in fond communion,
Shall our hearts be turned to love!

Breaking from Raymond, who endeavors to prevent the fatal act, Edgar stays himself, and supported in the good man's arms, he repeats in broken phrases the lovely O bell' alma innamorata, and lifting his hands to Heaven, as if to greet the spirit of Lucy, he expires.

THE PLOT

The plot of Donizetti's opera cannot be called a cheerful one—it is, in fact, crowded with horrors. However, it was a great favorite with American audiences for many years, being one of the stock operas of Emma Abott during nearly her whole career. The opera was revived in 1904 for Caruso, but failed to score, and it is quite likely that those who admire its few fine airs must depend on their Victors if they wish to hear them.

Lucrezia, the heroine, was a conspicuous member of the notorious patrician family—the Borgias—celebrated for their diabolical success as poisoners.

Lucrezia Borgia married as her second husband Don Alfonso, Duke of Ferrara. By her former marriage she had a son named Gennaro, of whose existence the Duke is ignorant. This son had, at birth, been placed in the care of a fisherman who brought him up as his own child.

ACT I

At the opening of the story Lucrezia, who in spite of her criminal practices has still the mother's yearning towards her own child, goes in disguise to Venice to visit him.

She finds her son in the company of some gay Venetian gallants. She watches them, and presently Gennaro, wearied by the mirth of his companions, draws apart and falls asleep on a seat. Lucrezia draws near, and gazing on his youthful beauty, she forgets everything except that she is his mother. She gently presses a kiss on his brow and prepares to depart, when he awakes and asks her who she is. She evades the question, and leads him to talk about his mother, whom he says he has never seen. Feeling drawn toward the beautiful stranger, he tells his story, in the fine Di pescatore.

Di pescatore ignoble (In a Fisher's Lowly Cot)

By Francesco Marconi, Tenor

(In Italian) 76004 12-inch, $2.00

She bids him farewell, and is about to take her leave when Orsini appears, recognizes her, and after brutally reciting her crimes one by one, tells the horror-stricken Gennaro that it is the Borgia. All turn from her in horror, and Lucrezia falls fainting.

ACT II

Gennaro afterwards shows his hatred and contempt for the Borgias by tearing down Lucrezia's coat of arms from her palace gates, and is imprisoned by the Duke's orders. Lucrezia, ignorant of the identity of the individual who has insulted her, complains to the Duke, who promises that the perpetrator shall be immediately punished. He gives vent to his feelings in his air, Vieni la mia vendetta.

Vieni, la mia vendetta (Haste Thee, for Vengeance)

By Giulio Rossi, Bass

(In Italian) *63404 10-inch, $0.75

Gennaro is sent for and Lucrezia at once recognizes him. Full of horror, she turns to the Duke and begs him to overlook the offense. The Duke is relentless and compels Lucrezia herself to hand a poisoned cup to her son. She obeys, but afterward contrives to give the youth an antidote. He suspects her of treachery, but she pleads so tearfully with him that he trusts her and drinks the remedy.

ACT III

This act opens with a chorus of bravos, who have been set to watch the dwelling of Gennaro.

Rischiarata è la finestra (Yonder Light is the Guiding Beacon)

By La Scala Chorus

(In Italian) *63172 10-inch, $0.75

Gennaro, whose life has been saved by the antidote Lucrezia had given him, instead of escaping from the city as she had advised him, accompanies Orsini to a banquet which has been secretly arranged by Lucrezia, and to which have been invited the young men who had recognized and denounced her in Venice.

In this scene occurs the famous Brindisi, or drinking song.

*Double-Faced Record—see page 218.
Brindisi (It is Better to Laugh)
By Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Contralto (In German) 88188 12-inch, $3.00

This air is a very well known one, and has been frequently sung, but Mme. Schumann-Heink puts such brilliant spirit into it, and sings it with such wealth of gayety, such astonishing range and such agility, that the rendition amazes the listener. It is certain that no music lover of the present generation has ever heard it sung so brilliantly. The high notes are taken with the ease of a soprano, and altogether this familiar drinking song has never been so well delivered.

The rôle of Maffio Orsini was always one of Mme. Schumann-Heink’s favorites, and she makes a gallant figure as the gay Roman youth. The words are well suited to the gayety of the music, and have been translated as follows:

Brindisi

It is better to laugh than be sighing,
When we think how life’s moments are flying,
For each sorrow Fate ever is bringing,
There’s a pleasure in store for us springing.
Tho’ our joys, like to waves in the sunshine,
Gleam awhile, then are lost to the sight,
Yet, for each sparkling ray
That so passes away,
Comes another as brilliant and bright.

In the world we some beings discover,
Far too frigid for friend or for lover;
Sous unblest, and forever repining,
Tho’ good fortune around them be shining.
It were well, if such hearts we could banish
To some planet far distant from ours;
They’re the dark spots we trace,
On this earth’s favored space;
They are weeds that choke up the fair flow’rs!

Then ’tis better to laugh than be sighing;
They are wise who resolve to be gay;
When we think how life’s moments are flying,
Enjoy Pleasure’s gifts while we may!

In the midst of the feast the door opens, the Borgia appears and tells them that they are doomed, as the wine has been poisoned by her.

To her horror she sees Gennaro among the guests. He, too, has drunk of the fatal wine. She again offers him an antidote, which he refuses, because the amount is insufficient to save the lives of his friends. Lucrezia confesses the relationship between them, but Gennaro spurns her and dies. The Duke now appears, intending to share in Lucrezia’s hideous triumph, but finds his wife surrounded by her victims—some dead, others dying. Lucrezia, a witness to the horrible result of her crime, suffers the keenest remorse, drinks some of her own poison and herself expires.

MADAM BUTTERFLY
OPERA IN THREE ACTS

A Japanese lyric tragedy, founded on the book of John Luther Long and the drama by David Belasco, with Italian libretto by Illica and Giacosa. Music by Giacomo Puccini. First produced at La Scala, Milan, in 1904, it proved a failure. Revived the following year in slightly changed form with much success. First American presentation (in English) occurred in October, 1906, in Washington, D. C., by Savage Opera Company. First representation in Italian at Metropolitan Opera House, February 11, 1907, with Farrar, Caruso, Homer and Scotti.

The Story

Puccini's opera, which from the first aroused the keenest interest among opera-goers, has become an enduring success. The original Metropolitan production in Italian was under the personal direction of Puccini himself, who refined and beautified it according to his own ideas into one of the most finished operatic productions ever seen here.

The story of the drama is familiar to all through John Luther Long's narrative and the Belasco dramatic version. The tale is the old one of the passing fancy of a man for a woman, and her faithfulness even unto death, which comes by her own hand when she finds herself abandoned.

Puccini has completely identified his music with the sentiments and sorrows of the characters in John Luther Long's drama, and has accompanied the pictorial beauty of the various scenes with a setting of incomparable loveliness. Rarely has picturesque action been more completely wedded to beautiful music.

ACT I

SCENE—Exterior of Pinkerton’s house at Nagasaki

At the rise of the curtain Goro, the marriage broker who has secured Pinkerton his bride, is showing the Lieutenant over the house he has chosen for his honeymoon. Sharpless, the American Consul and friend of Pinkerton, now arrives, having been bidden to the marriage.

Then occurs the fine duet, which Caruso and Scotti have sung here in splendid style.

Amore o grillo (Love or Fancy?)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor, and Antonio Scotti, Baritone

(In Italian) 89043 12-inch, $4.00

Pinkerton, joyous in the prospect of his marriage with the dainty Japanese girl, and quite careless of the consequences which may result from such a union, describes his bride to the Consul, who gives the young lieutenant some good advice, bidding him be careful, that he may not break the trusting heart of the Butterfly who loves him too well.

The number closes with a splendid climax, as Pinkerton recklessly pledges the “real American wife” whom he hopes to meet some day; while the Consul gazes at his young friend with some sadness, as if already in the shadow of the tragedy which is to come.

Now is heard in the distance the voice of Butterfly, who is coming up the hill with her girl friends; and she sings a lovely song, full of the freshness of youth and the dawning of love.

Entrance of Cio-Cio San

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano

(In Italian) 87004 10-inch, $2.00

By Frances Alda, Soprano

(In Italian) 64334 10-inch, 1.00

By Edith Helena, Soprano

(In English) *17346 10-inch, .75

The friends and family having been duly introduced to Pinkerton, they go to the refreshment table, while Butterfly timidly confides to Pinkerton, in this touching number, that she has for his sake renounced her religion, and will in future bow before the God of her husband.

Ieri son salita (Hear Me)

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano

(In Italian) 87031 10-inch, $2.00

The contract is signed and the guests are dispersing when Butterfly’s uncle rushes in and denounces her, having discovered that she has been to the Mission, renounced her religion, and adopted that of her husband.

*Double-Faced Record—See page 225.
She is cast off by the family, who flee from the scene in horror. Butterfly at first weeps, but is comforted by the Lieutenant, who tells her he cares nothing for her family, but loves her alone.

Then occurs the incomparably beautiful duet which closes the first act, and which is beyond all question the finest of the melodious numbers which Puccini has composed for the opera; and the effect of this exquisite music, given on a darkened stage amid the flashing of fireflies, is wholly beautiful.

O quanti occhi fisi (Oh Kindly Heavens) (Love Duet from Finale, Act I)

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano, and Enrico Caruso, Tenor

(In Italian) 89017 12-in., $4.00

Miss Farrar sings all of Puccini's music fluently and gracefully, but is always at her best in this exquisite love duet, while the number is Caruso's finest opportunity in the opera, and he makes the most of it.

The blending of the voices of the artists is remarkably effective, and the ecstatic climax at the end is splendidly given, both singers ending on a high C sharp; the effect being absolutely thrilling.

ACT II

SCENE—Interior of Butterfly's Home—at the back a Garden with Cherries in Bloom

Three years have now elapsed, and Butterfly, with her child and faithful maid, Suzuki, are awaiting the return of Pinkerton. Suzuki begins to lose courage, but Butterfly rebukes her and declares her faith to be unshaken.

(In Italian) 74335 12-inch, 1.50
(In English) 70054 12-inch, 1.25

This highly dramatic number is sung after Butterfly has reproached Suzuki for her doubts, and in it she proudly declares confidence in her husband. In the English version this is called the "Vision Song," as it describes her vision of the arrival of Pinkerton's ship.

Ora a noi! (Letter Duet)

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano, and Antonio Scotti, Baritone

(In Italian) 89014 12-inch, $4.00

Butterfly is visited by Sharpless, who has received a letter from Pinkerton, and has accepted the unpleasant task of informing Butterfly that the Lieutenant has deserted her. He finds his task a difficult one, for when he attempts to read Pinkerton's letter to her, she misunderstanding its purport and continually interrupts the Consul with little bursts of joyful anticipation, thinking that Pinkerton will soon come to her. Finally realizing something of his message, she runs to bring her child to prove to Sharpless the certainty of her husband's home-coming.
Madama Butterfly—Act II, Scene II
Sai cos’ ebbe cuore (Do You Know, My Sweet One)

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano
(In Italian) 87055 10-in., $2.00

By Emmy Destinn, Soprano
(In Italian) 91084 10-in., 2.00

In this pitiful air she asks little “Trouble” not to listen to the bad man (Sharpless), who is saying that Pinkerton has deserted them.

Sharpless, who has nothing about, gives up in despair the idea of further deceiving her, knowing that she will soon learn the truth, and leaves Butterfly, who refuses to doubt Pinkerton, in an exalted state of rapture over the idea of her husband’s return.

Throughout the duet may be heard the mournful sweet “waiting motive” played softly by the horn, and accompanied by strings pizzicati. This is beautifully given here, and the record is a most impressive one.

The sound of a cannon is heard, and with aid of a glass the two women see Pinkerton’s ship, the Abraham Lincoln, entering the harbor.

Duet of the Flowers

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano,
and Louise Homer, Contralto
(In Italian) 89008 12-in., $4.00

Greatly excited, Butterfly bids the maid scatter the room with flowers, and they scatter the cherry blossoms everywhere, singing all the while weird harmonies which are hauntingly beautiful.

Miss Farrar’s impressive Cio-Cio-San, childish and piquant in its lighter aspects and pitifully tragic in its final scenes, and Mme. Homer’s Suzuki, the patient handmaiden, who loves and protects her mistress through all the weary years of waiting, are two most powerful impersonations. Of the music written for these two roles, this exquisite duet is especially attractive.

Night is falling, and not expecting Pinkerton until morning, Butterfly, Suzuki, and the child take their places at the window to watch for his coming. As the vigil begins, in the orchestra can be heard the “Waiting Motive,” with its accompaniment by distant voices of the sailors in the harbor, producing an effect which is indescribably beautiful.

Scene II—Same as the Preceding

The curtain rises on the same scene. It is daybreak. Suzuki, exhausted, is sleeping, but Butterfly still watches the path leading up the hill. Suzuki awakes and insists on Butterfly taking some rest, promising to call her when the Lieutenant arrives.

Sharpless and Pinkerton now enter, and question Suzuki, the Lieutenant being deeply touched to find that Butterfly has been faithful to him, and that a child has been born.

Suzuki, seeing a lady in the garden, demands to know who she is, and Sharpless tells her it is the wife of Pinkerton, he having married in America.
The introduction by Puccini's librettist of this character has been severely criticised, many considering it of doubtful taste, and forming a jarring note in the opera. So strong is this feeling in France, that the part of Kate has been eliminated from the cast.

The faithful maid is horrified, and dreads the effect of this news on her mistress. Weeping bitterly, she goes into Butterfly's chamber, while the friends are left to bitter reflections, expressed by Puccini in a powerful duet.

Ve lo dissi? (Did I Not Tell You?)

By Enrico Caruso and Antonio Scotti (In Italian) 89047 12-inch, $4.00

Pinkerton realizes for the first time the baseness of his conduct, while the Consul reminds him of the warning he had given him in Act 1,—to beware lest the tender heart of Butterfly be broken.

The part of the Consul is not a great one, but Scotti almost makes it one with his careful portrayal, singing with dignity and tenderness and giving the part its full dramatic value. With the re-entrance of Suzuki occurs the trio for Pinkerton, Sharpless and Suzuki.

Lo so che alle sue pene (Naught Can Console Her)

By Martin, Fornia and Scotti (In Italian) 87503 10-inch, $3.00

This trio is dramatically given by Martin, Fornia and Scotti, who have this season made successes in the several rôles of Pinkerton, Suzuki and Sharpless.

Finale Ultimo (Butterfly’s Death Scene)

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano (In Italian) 87030 10-inch, $2.00

By Emmy Destinn, Soprano (In Italian) 91086 10-inch, $2.00

*By Edith Helena, Soprano (In English) 17346 10-inch, .75

Now comes the pathetic death scene at the close of the opera. Butterfly, convinced that Pinkerton has renounced her, blindfolds her child that he may not witness her suicide, takes down the dagger with which her father committed hari-kari, and after reading the inscription on the handle, “To die with honor when one can no longer live with honor,” she stabs herself.

In her death struggle she gropes her way to the innocent babe, who, blindfolded and waving his little flag, takes it all in the spirit of play. The tragic intensity of this scene always moves many to tears.

Miss Farrar puts into this final number all the pathetic despair of Cio-Cio-San's overburdened heart, her rendition being a most impressive and wholly pathetic one. Mme. Destinn gives a most dramatic interpretation of this scene, perhaps the most heartrending in the entire range of opera, while an English version by Miss Helena is offered.

Pinkerton enters to ask Butterfly's forgiveness and bid her farewell, and is horrified to find her dying. He lifts her up in an agony of remorse.

In the orchestra, strangely mingling with the American motive, the tragic death motive may be heard as the curtain slowly falls.

Madame Butterfly Fantasie—By Victor Herbert’s Orch 70055 12-inch, $1.25
Madame Butterfly Selection By Victor Orchestra 31631 12-inch, 1.00

This selection begins with the entrance music of Pinkerton, accompanied by the American theme for which Puccini has utilized the “Star Spangled Banner.”

Then in succession are heard the gay air of the thoughtless Lieutenant (as a cornet solo) in which he describes the characteristics of his countrymen; the principal strain of the love duet with which the act closes; the exquisitely poetical “Duet of the Flowers,” part of which is given on the orchestra bells; and the beginning of the supremely beautiful scene where Butterfly, her maid and little son, take their places at the window to watch until morning for the husband’s coming, while in the distance can be heard the faint voices of singers in the night, producing a mournful and indescribable effect.

Then from the last scene we hear the return of Pinkerton announced just as Butterfly has taken her life; the American motif strangely contrasting with the tragic music of the death scene; and a few measures of the final curtain music, with its ancient Japanese melody.

belonging to the Temple, and fulfilling the designs of Sarastro

Priests and Priestesses of the Temple of Isis; Male and Female Slaves; Warriors of the Temple, Attendants, etc.

The scene is laid in the vicinity of and in the Temple of Isis at Memphis. The action is represented as taking place about the time of Ramses I.

226
"A fantastic fable was the groundwork; supernatural apparitions and a good dose of comic element were to serve as garnish. But what did Mozart build on this preposterous foundation? What godlike magic breathes throughout this work, from the most popular ballad to the noblest hymn! What many-sidedness, what marvelous variety! The quintessence of every noblest bloom of art seems here to blend in one unequaled flower."—Richard Wagner.

Strictly speaking, the Magic Flute is not an opera, but rather a fairy extravaganza accompanied by some of the most delightful music imaginable. To fully appreciate Mozart's work it should be heard in some German town on a Sunday evening, where middle-class families and sweethearts find much enjoyment in the mixture of mystery, sentiment, comedy and delightful music which make up the opera. The libretto is, of course, utterly absurd, describing as it does the magic of the pipes of Tamino which had the power to control men, animals, birds, reptiles and even the elements, and as the flute is continually playing throughout the work, the results may be imagined.

Overture

By Pryor's Band
By La Scala Orchestra

The overture is not only one of the greatest of its kind, but one of the most generally appreciated. Its wonderful fugue, "in which Mozart sports with fugal counterpoint as though it were mere child's play," is played by the band in a striking manner. This fugue is announced first by the clarinets and a few bars later the cornets take up the theme, followed by every instrument in the band in the marvelous finale.

ACT I

The scene shows a rocky landscape with the Temple of the Queen of the Night visible in the background. Tamino, an Egyptian prince who is traveling with his friends, becomes separated from them, is pursued by a huge serpent, and finally faints from fright and fatigue. Three veiled ladies, attendants on the Queen, come from the Temple to his rescue and stab the snake with their javelins. While they go to tell the Queen of the occurrence, Tamino revives, sees the dead serpent and hides as he hears a flute.

Ein Vogelfänger bin ich ja (A Bird Catcher Am I)

By Otto Goritz (German) 64163 10-inch, $1.00

Papageno, a bird catcher, admirer of damsels, and all-around rogue, enters and sings a merry lay, piping at every pause. In his song the fowler describes his occupation of snaring birds, but says he would like catching women better!

Papageno:
The fowler comes, in spite of rain,
And sings his song in merry strain;
This merry fowler, too, is known
By young and old, from zone to zone.
Knows how to whistle every sound
That birds may sing the whole year round.
Oh, none can be more blithe than I,
With these sweet warblers of the sky.

*Double Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED MAGIC FLUTE RECORDS, page 230.
In the part of Papageno Mr. Goritz has few rivals, and his impersonation was one of the great features of the recent revival at the Metropolitan.

Tamino now comes forward and gives Papageno credit for having killed the serpent, an honor which he promptly accepts. The three ladies now return, rebuke Papageno and show Tamino a photograph of the Queen of Night's daughter, the lovely Pamina, who has been taken from her mother by Sarastro, the Priest of Isis, to save her from evil influences. Tamino falls in love with the picture and offers to rescue the maiden. He is given an all-powerful magic flute, and accompanied by Papageno sets out for Sarastro's palace.

The scene changes to a room in the palace of the High Priest, where Pamina is discovered in charge of Monostatos, a Moor.

The Moor is betraying his trust by persecuting Pamina with his attentions, when Papageno enters and frightens him away. The bird catcher then tells Pamina of Tamino's love for her, and offers to conduct her to this mysterious lover.

By Johanna Gadski, Soprano, and Otto Goritz, Baritone

(In German) 88369 12-inch, 3.00

This charming duet, with its grace and inimitable gaiety, introduces the melody of an old German song, Bei Männern

Smiles and Tears

The smile, that on the lip is playing,
How oft 'twill hide a heart's deep woe!
The tear, that down the cheek is straying,
From purest springs of joy may flow.
And smiles and tears, so legends say,
Make up the sum of Life's brief day.

After many adventures Tamino and Pamina meet, and by means of the magic flute they are about to escape, but are interrupted by Sarastro, who agrees to unite the lovers if they will remain and be purified by the sacred rites; and as the priest separates them and covers their heads with veils, the curtain falls.

ACT II

The first scene shows a noble forest showing the Temple of Wisdom. The priests assemble, and Sarastro orders the lovers brought before him. He then sings this superb Invocation, one of the most impressive numbers in the opera.

Invocation (Great Isis)

By Pol Plançon, Bass (Piano acc.)

By Marcel Journet, Bass (In French) 64235 10-inch, 1.00

By Metropolitan Opera Chorus (In German) 45051 10-inch, 1.00

In the Invocation, Sarastro calls on the gods Isis and Osiris to give Tamino and Papageno strength to bear the trial now at hand.

Great Isis, great Osiris!
Strengthen with wisdom's strength this tyro pair;
Ye who guide steps where deserts lengthen,
Brace theirs with nerve, your proof to bear!
Grant them probation's fruit all living;
Yet, should they find a grave while striving,
Think on their virtues, gracious gods,
Take them elect to your abodes!

*Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED MAGIC FLUTE RECORDS, page 230.
In the noble rôle of Sarastro Plançon is especially effective, and his dignified impersonation of the benignant High Priest, who smooths out all the fantastic tangles in the situations which occur in Mozart's opera, is always singularly impressive.

The lovers are admitted to the Temple and begin their probation.

In the next scene Pamina is discovered asleep in a bower of roses. The Queen suddenly rises from the earth and gives Pamina a dagger, telling her to kill Sarastro or Tamino can never be hers. Pamina hesitates, and her mother, in a terrifying and dramatic song, threatens vengeance on all concerned.

Aria della Regina (The Queen's Air)
By Bessie Abott, Soprano
(In Italian) 88051 12-inch, $3.00
By Maria Galvany, Soprano
(In Italian) 87059 10-inch, 2.00

The Queen of Night, Astriflammante, is one of the most striking characters in Mozart's opera, and the few numbers allotted to her are difficult and florid ones. This great aria is one which the most experienced of sopranos always approaches with misgiving, because of its excessive demands on the vocal powers. Miss Abott and Mme. Galvany completely meet these demands, both singing the air gracefully and with superb execution.

Astriflammante:
The pangs of hell are raging in my bosom,
Death and destruction wildly flame around!
Go forth and bear my vengeance to Sarastro,
Or as my daughter thou shalt be disown'd!
I cast thee off forever,

I spurn thee and renounce thee,
If thou dar'st to brave my wrath;
Through thee Sarastro is to perish!
Hear, gods of vengeance!
Hear a mother's vow! (She disappears.)

Sarastro enters and soothes Pamina, saying that he will take a righteous revenge on the Queen by obtaining the happiness of her daughter. He then sings the noble Cavatina, considered one of the greatest of bass arias.

Qui sdegno non s'accende (Within These Sacred Walls)
By Pol Plançon, Bass (Piano acc.)
(In Italian) 85077 12-inch, $3.00
By Marcel Journet, Bass
(In French) 74266 12-inch, 1.50

In this number Plançon is at his best, and the noble strains are delivered in the broad sonorous style which the music requires, while a splendid rendition by Journet in French is also offered.

Sarastro: Within this hallowed dwelling
Revenge and sorrow cease;
Here troubled doubt dispelling,
The weary heart hath peace.
If thou hast stray'd, a brother's hand
Shall guide thee t'ward the better land.
This hallow'd fane protects thee
From falsehood, guile and fear;
A brother's love directs thee,
To him thy woes are dear.

The probationary trials of the lovers continue through many strange scenes, in one of which Pamina meets Tamino, and not knowing that he has been forbidden to speak to any woman, cries out that he no longer loves her. She then sings this pathetic little air, which Mme. Gadski has interpreted here so beautifully.
Ah lo so (All Has Vanished)
By Johanna Gadski, Soprano  (In Italian)
88254  12-inch, $3.00

Mme. Gadski has long been recognized as one of the foremost exponents of Mozart in this country. The music of this master demands singers of great understanding and feeling, who must possess not only voice but intelligence and taste.

That Gadski possesses these qualifications in ample measure is fully apparent to all who listen to her superb Mozart reproductions.

Pamina: Wretch that I am, too well I know
Nought is left me but to mourn,
Condemned to drain the cup of woe,
Joy to me will ne’er return.

Oh, Tamino, if for thee,
My sighs and bitter tears are vain,
Come, kind death, in pity free
My weary bosom from its pain!

Pamina, thinking Tamino has deserted her, wishes to die, and tries to stab herself with the dagger her mother has given her, but is prevented by the three boys, or genii (under instructions from Sarastro), who assure her that

Tamino is still true and promise to conduct her to him.

Du also bist mein Braütigam? (Thou Art My Bridegroom!)
By Johanna Gadski, Soprano, and Mmes. Sparks, Case and Mattfeld
(In German) 88441 12-inch, $3.00

Mme. Gadski gives the strains of Pamina in her usual finished style while the music of the three "boys" is sung by Mmes. Sparks, Case, and Mattfeld, with voices of clear, youthful timbre which exhibit well the grace and brightness of Mozart's music.

Pamina:
Oh dagger! thou are my bridegroom!
By thee alone I’ll end my care.

The Boys:
Oh woe! what said Pamina there?
And see, she is to madness near.

Pamina:
I wish to die, since the man,
Whom I ne’er can hate,
This faithful heart will thus desert.
(Tries to stab herself.)

The Boys:
Hold, unhappy one! and hear!
Could Tamino see thee thus,
He with sorrow would expire,
For he fondly loveth thee.

Pamina (recovers herself):
What! did he feel responding love,
And yet concealed his feelings?

The Boys:
This, alas, we must not tell,
But we will show him now to thee;
And with wonder thou wilt see,
That his heart is thine alone!

Pamina:
Lead me forth! I wish to see him!

All:
Come, we him forthwith will seek.
Two hearts that truly love,
Can human weakness never part.

The trials being finally completed, the lovers are united in the sacred Temple. The Queen and her accomplices attempt to prevent the ceremony, but the scene suddenly changes to the Temple of the Sun, where Sarastro is seen on his throne with Tamino and Pamina beside him, while the baffled Queen and her train sink into the earth.

Time and place: 1721; Amiens, Paris, Havre.

The story of Manon is, of course, taken by Massenet’s librettists from the famous novel of the Abbé Prévost, but for operatic purposes several changes have been made, notably in the events of the fourth act, which takes place in France instead of America. Although the tale is very well known, a brief sketch will be included here.

Manon is a country girl, gay, pretty and thoughtless, who meets a handsome young cavalier, des Grieux, while on her way to a convent to complete her education. He falls in love with her and she with him as far as her nature will allow, and when he tells her of the gaieties and pleasures of Paris, she needs little persuasion to induce her to elope with him to the Capital, to the chagrin of Guillot, whose carriage the lovers appropriate.

Soon tiring of love in a cottage, however, the young girl encourages the attentions of a rich nobleman, de Bretigny, and when des Grieux is taken away forcibly by his father, she seize the opportunity and leaves with her new lover.

In Act III she learns that des Grieux, despondent because of her faithlessness, has resolved to enter a monastery. Her fickle affections turn again to him, and she visits him at the Seminary of St. Sulpice. He at first repulses her, saying his love is dead, but is unable to resist her, and they depart together.

The next act occurs in a gambling house, where des Grieux is endeavoring to win money to support Manon in the luxury she demands. Guillot, in revenge for the trick played on him in Act I, causes their arrest, des Grieux for cheating and Manon as a dissolute woman.

The last scene occurs on the road to Havre, where des Grieux and Lescaut, Manon's cousin, plan to rescue Manon as she is being taken to the ship, en route to the prison colony in Louisiana. The soldiers appear, but it is a dying Manon they escort, and the unfortunate girl, after repenting and asking forgiveness of des Grieux, dies in his arms.

ACT I

SCENE I—Courtyard of an Inn at Amiens

As the curtain rises the crowd of villagers, including Lescaut, are waiting the coming of the coach, which presently arrives and discharges Manon. The young girl regards the animated scene with much interest, and soon espies Lescaut, her cousin, who was to meet her at this point and escort her to the convent school. He greets her and compliments her on her charming appearance. She blushes and then artlessly tells him of her impressions during the journey from her country home. The scene from this point has been recorded by the Scala singers.

Restate qui (Wait a Moment)

By Elisa Tromben, Soprano; Federico Federici, Tenor; G. Pini-Corsi, Tenor; Riccardo Tegani, Baritone (In Italian) *$5000 12-inch, $1.50

Lescaut asks Manon to excuse him for a while as he must go to see after her luggage.

LESCAUT (to Manon):

Wait a moment.

Be prudent; I am going to find your luggage.
He goes out, and the townspeople desert the square, leaving Manon alone. The roué, Guillot, appears on the balcony of the hotel, crying: "Miserable landlord! Are we never to have any wine?"

He sees Manon, and his evil eyes light up at this vision of youth and beauty.

Guillot:
Heavens! What do I see? Young lady!
Ahem! Ahem! Young lady!
(Aside)
Really, my head is turning round!

Manon (aside and laughing):
What a funny man!

Guillot:
Young lady, I am Guillot de Morfontaine. I am rich and would give a good deal to hear a word of love from you. Now, what do you say to that?

Manon:
That I should be ashamed, if I were not more disposed to laugh.

De Bretigny:
Now then, Guillot, what's the game? We are waiting for you.

Guillot:
Oh, go to the Devil.

Pousette (to Guillot):
Are you not ashamed? At your age!

Guillot is frightened by the gruff soldier, to the amusement of the bystanders, who laugh at the baffled libertine until he flees in confusion.

Lescaut now warns Manon to beware of the men she may meet.

Lescaut (to Manon):
He spoke to you, Manon.

Manon (lightly):
Well, can you say 'twas my fault?

Lescaut:
That's true; and in my eyes you are so good that I won't trouble myself.

First Guardsman (to Lescaut):
How now! Thou comest not!

Second Guardsman:
Both cards and dice are waiting your pleasure below.

Lescaut:
I come; but first to this young lady, with your leave, good sirs, I must speak some words of counsel full of wisdom.

Guardsmen (in mock resignation):
To his wisdom we'll listen.

Mi raccomando (Wait for Me)
*By Elisa Tromben, Soprano; Federico Federici, Tenor; Chorus (In Italian) *55000 12-inch, $1.50

The young girl promises to be prudent and Lescaut leaves with the guardsmen.

Lescaut (to Manon):
Give good heed to what I say—Duty calls me now away, To consult these comrades here Upon a point that's not quite clear. Wait for me, Manon, just a moment, no more. Make no mistake, but prudent be, And if, forsooth, some silly man

Des Grieux now enters, and seeing Manon, is much impressed with her beauty and modest bearing. He addresses her respectfully, beginning the lovely duet, _Et je sais votre nom_.

Et je sais votre nom (If I Knew But Your Name)
*By Mlle. Korsoff, Soprano, and Léon Beyle, Tenor (In French) *16551 10-inch, $0.75

The young girl answers simply, but feels herself strangely drawn to the young student. The transition from strangers to lovers is a quick one, as will be seen by the translation.

Des Grieux:
If I knew but your name—Manon!
Manon (with simplicity):
I am called Manon.

Des Grieux (with emotion):
Manon!

Manon (aside):
How tender are his looks, How delightful his voice to my soul!

*Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED MANON RECORDS, page 240.
DES GRIEUX:
All my fond foolish words,
I pray you forgive!

MANON (naively):
How condemn your words when they charm
my heart;
To my ears they are music!
Would to Heav'n such language were mine,
You fit answ'r to make.

DES GRIEUX (in a transport of joy):
Lovely enchantress, all-conquering beauty,
Manon, from henceforth thou art mistress of
my heart!
MANON:
Oh! what joy!
I'm henceforth the mistress of his heart!

DES GRIEUX:
Ah, speak to me!
MANON:
I am only a simple maiden.
(Smiling)
Believe me, I'm not wicked,
But I often am told by those at home,
That I love pleasures too well;
(Sadly)
I am now on my way to a convent,
That, sir, is the story of Manon,
(With simplicity)
Of Manon Lescaut!

Manon now observes the carriage of Guillot, which had been offered her, and suggests that they take it and fly together. DES GRIEUX joyfully agrees and they sing their second duet.

Nous vivrons à Paris (We Will Go to Paris)
By Mlle. Korsoff, Soprano, and Léon Beyle, Tenor
(In French) *45009 10-inch. $1.00

MANON AND DES GRIEUX:
We to Paris will go. Heart to heart!
And, though fortune may frown, never part!

Hearing Lescaut's voice from within the hotel, where he has been gambling, the lovers hastily enter the carriage and drive off, while Guillot swears revenge and Lescaut bewails his double loss of money and cousin.

ACT II
SCENE—Apartment of DES GRIEUX and MANON in Paris

Des Grieux is writing at a desk, while Manon is playfully looking over his shoulder.
He tells her he is writing to his father:

DES GRIEUX:
This letter's for my father, and I tremble lest he should read in anger what I write from my heart.
MANON:
You are afraid?

On l'appelle Manon (She is Called Manon)

By Mlle. Korsoff, Soprano, Beyle, Tenor (In French) *45009 10-inch. 1.00

Continuing this charming scene, she takes the letter from him and reads with simplicity:

MANON:
"She is called Manon, and is young and fair.
In her all charms unite. She has grace, radiant youth and beauty; music flows in a stream from her lips; in her eyes shines the tender light of love."

DES GRIEUX (ardently):
In her eyes shines the tender light of love.
Des Grieux:
"Like a bird that through all lands follows the spring, so her young soul to life is ever open. Her lips, like flowers, smile and speak to the zephyrs that kiss them in passing."

Manon (repeating):
"To the zephyrs that kiss them in passing."

(Pensively)
Do you think your father will give his consent?

Des Grieux starts to go, but seeing some beautiful flowers on the table asks who sent them. Manon replies evasively, and asks if he does not trust her and if he is jealous. He assures her of his perfect confidence.

A noise is heard outside, and Lescaut, accompanied by de Brétigny, a French nobleman, enters, the former loudly demanding satisfaction from des Grieux for the abduction of his cousin. Des Grieux at first defies him, but remembering that he is a member of Manon's family, shows him the letter he had written to his father asking her hand in marriage. Lescaut engages him in conversation, thus giving de Brétigny an opportunity to speak to Manon aside. He tells her that des Grieux is to be carried off by his father that night, and urges her to fly with him. Tempted by the thoughts of wealth the young girl hesitates. Lescaut now loudly expresses satisfaction with the attitude of des Grieux, and departs with de Brétigny.

Des Grieux goes out to post the letter and Manon struggles with the temptation which has come to her; the pathetic air, Adieu notre petite table, indicating that she is yielding.

By Mme. Vallandri, Soprano, and Léon Beyle, Tenor (In French) 45008 10-inch, 1.00

NOTE.—In record 45008 Mme. Vallandri sings a portion of the "Farewell" solo and this is followed by the short duet which precedes the "Dream."

She regards the little table at which they had served their simple meals.

Manon:
Farewell, our pretty little table! So small and yet so large for us. Side by side so often there we've sat. (With a sad smile.) I smile as now I call to mind what narrow space we lovers filled. A single glass served both of us, and each, in drinking, sought upon its margin where dear lips had been. Ah! best of friends, how thou hast loved!

Hearing des Grieux approaching, she hastily tries to conceal her tears. He observes them, however, and tries to soothe her by relating a dream he has had.

"Listen, Manon," he cries, "On my way I dreamed a lovely dream."

Des Grieux:
'Tis paradise! Ah, no, All is sad, so sad and dreary, For, O my only love, thou art not there.

Manon (softly.)
'Tis a vision, 'tis but a fancy!

Des Grieux:
Not! for thus we'll pass our life, If but thou wilt, O Manon!

A knock is heard and Manon exclaims, aside, "Oh, Heaven, already they have come for him!" She tries to prevent him from opening the door, but he insists, and is seized and carried away, while Manon, suddenly repenting, is overcome with grief.

ACT III

SCENE—A Street in Paris on a Fête Day

Manon enters, accompanied by de Brétigny and several gallants. She is in a gay mood and extols youth and love in a fine vocal gavotte.

Manon:
List to the voice of youth when it calleth,
It bids ye to love for aye!
And ere the pride of beauty falleth,
Love then while you may.
Profit then by the time of youth,
And do not stay to count the days,
Remember well this adage—be merry and gay always!
The heart, alas, to love is e'er willing,
And ever willing to forget,
So while its pulse is thrilling,
Love, ere its day hath set!

Manon, seeing des Grieux's father, timidly approaches him and asks if des Grieux has forgotten her. She learns that the young man has forgiven her, buried his love, and is planning to enter a monastery. When the Count has departed, the capricious girl resolves to go to St. Sulpice and see for herself if she has been so easily forgotten; and as the curtain falls she is calling to Lescaut to conduct her thither.

SCENE II—Reception Room at St. Sulpice

At the beginning of this scene the Count pleads with his son not to retire from the world, but des Grieux says he is resolved, and his father, after promising him one hundred thousand francs, takes a sorrowful leave.

Des Grieux:
Nothing shall stop me from pronouncing my vows.

Count:
Thou art resolved?

Des Grieux:
I am resolved.

Count:
So be it. I will go and announce to all that we have a saint in the family. Whether any one will be ministers is doubtful.

Des Grieux:
I pray you, sir, do not mock me!

Left alone, des Grieux sings his lovely song of renunciation, which the Victor offers in Italian and French by three famous tenors.

He declares he will now seek the peace of mind which only faith in Heaven can give.

Des Grieux: I'm alone at last! The supreme moment now has come. From earthly ties I'm free, and only seek the rest which faith in heaven can give!

'Ah! depart, image fair,
Leave me now at rest;
Have regard to my prayer,
Ease my poor tortured breast.
To the dregs I have drain'd
Life's most bitter cup,
Nor to Heaven once complain'd,
Though heart's blood filled it up.
Dead to me now are love and all that men call glory.
I desire to banish from my memory an evil name—a name which haunts me! Oh Heaven! with flame all searching, my soul now purge from stain! Oh! let thy pure and glorious light chase far away the gloom that lays on my heart.

He goes slowly out and Manon enters, shuddering at the gloomy walls and wondering if her lover has quite forgotten her. Des Grieux soon returns and is astounded to see Manon, bidding her begone, saying his love is dead. She says she cannot believe it.

Manon: my weeping! Am I not myself? Do not turn away, but look on me. Am I not Manon?

Des Grieux is deeply moved, but asks Heaven for strength to resist her. Her pleadings finally have their effect, and he cries: "Ah! Manon! No longer will I struggle against myself!" and they depart together.

ACT IV

SCENE—A Gambling Room in Paris

Des Grieux has been persuaded by Manon to come to this place in the hope of winning money to satisfy her desire for luxury. He plays for high stakes and wins large sums from Guillot, who leaves in a rage. As des Grieux is showing Manon the gold he has won, a loud knocking is heard and the police enter with Guillot, who denounces des Grieux as a swindler and Manon as his accomplice. They are arrested and taken to prison, but des Grieux is afterward released through his father's influence, while Manon is ordered to be deported to America by way of Havre.

(For Double-Faced, see page 240) (In Italian) 55001 12-inch, $1.50

Des Grieux (discovered seated by the wayside):
Manon, poor Manon! Must I see thee herded with these wretched beings and be powerless to aid? O Heaven! Merciless Heaven! Must I then despair? (He sees Lescaut approaching.) He comes! (Advancing impetuously to Lescaut.) Thy fellows now make ready; the soldiers will soon reach this place. Thy men are fully armed; they will rescue Manon and give her back to me! What! can it not be done? Are all my fond hopes vain? Oh! why dost thou keep silence?

Lescaut hesitates and finally says:

Lescaut:
Sir, I have done my best—
Des Grieux (anxiously):
Go on!
Lescaut:
And grieve to say that all is lost.
Des Grieux (piteously):
Lost!
Lescaut:
Scarcely had the sun shone on the arms of the soldiers ere all our men fled!
Des Grieux (distracted):
'Tis false! 'Tis false! Great Heaven hath taken pity on my suffering, and at last comes the hour expected! In a moment my Manon shall be free!
Lescaut (sadly):
Since I have told the truth—
Des Grieux (about to strike him):
Away!
Lescaut:
Strike if you will. 'Tis soldier's fare. He's by the King ill-paid; and then, whate'er his worth, the good folks shake their head and call him "wretched fellow."
Des Grieux (violently):
Away!

The voices of the soldiers are now heard in the distance singing as they ride. Des Grieux and Lescaut listen attentively, and the former, realizing that they are almost at hand, madly tries to rush forward. Lescaut dissuades him, saying he has a better plan, as he is well acquainted with the officer in command. When the escort arrives, Manon is found to be very ill and is left behind by the officer at Lescaut's suggestion. During a heart-rending scene Manon asks and receives the forgiveness of des Grieux, repents her sins and dies in his arms.

ACT V

SCENE—On the Road to Havre

THE STORY

This early Puccini opera was performed by a struggling opera company in 1898, but the performance was so wholly bad that we have made no mention of it in our chronicle at the top of the page. The real New York premiere was of course the Metropolitan production in 1907, when Puccini himself was present. An English version of the opera was given in Philadelphia, however, by Gustav Hinrichs during one of his summer seasons.—August 29, 1894.
The Abbé Prévost romance has been treated operatically by several composers, the first being Halevy, who wrote a ballet on the subject in 1830. Other settings followed—by Balfe, 1836; Auber in 1856 and Massenet in 1884.

Puccini’s version consists of four detached scenes selected from the novel, and the hearer should possess some knowledge of the story to fully understand the action of the opera.

The first act shows the courtyard of an inn at Amiens. Manon’s brother, Lescaut, a dissolute soldier, is escorting his pretty little sister to the convent where she is to complete her education. While Lescaut is carousing with some chance companions, Manon meets a handsome gallant, des Grieux, who chances to be dining at the inn, dressed as a student. The prospect of school not appealing strongly to the young girl, she readily agrees to elope with des Grieux, thereby spoiling the plans of the old roué, Geronte, who had planned to abduct the pretty school girl. Manon soon tires of des Grieux and his poverty, and leaves him for the wealthy Geronte; but even this luxury fails to bring her happiness, and when des Grieux appears again she runs away with him.

Geronte is furious and denounces Manon to the police as an abandoned woman. She is condemned to be deported to the French possessions in Louisiana. Des Grieux and Lescaut try to rescue her, but the attempt fails, and in desperation the former begs the commandant to permit him to accompany her to America.

In the final scene the lovers are shown in a desert near New Orleans. (The Abbé Prévost’s knowledge of American geography was evidently limited!) Des Grieux leaves Manon to search for water, and returns just in time to see her die in his arms, after a most affecting scene.

ACT I

SCENE—A Street in front of an Inn at Amiens

Des Grieux, dressed as a student, strolling among the crowd, meets Edmund and a party of students, who warmly greet him. He is in a gay mood and addresses some of the girls who are passing, asking them, in this charming air, if there is one among them who will take pity on his lonely condition.

Tra voi belle brune (Now Among You)
By Franco de Gregorio, Tenor
(In Italian) *45015 10-inch, $1.00

This gay song is effectively given by one of the Victor’s new tenors, of the La Scala forces, and the record is doubled with the Madrigale from Act II.

A diligence now arrives, and Manon and her brother and Geronte, a chance traveling companion, alight. Des Grieux is struck with the beauty of the young girl, and when Lescaut and Geronte have gone into the inn to arrange for quarters, he questions her respectfully. She tells him that she is bound for a convent, but does not wish to go. Lescaut now calls to his sister, and she enters the inn after promising to meet des Grieux later in the evening.

The young man gazes after her, and says to himself that never has he seen so lovely a picture of youth and innocence. He expresses his emotion in a fine air, one of the loveliest of the numbers allotted to des Grieux.

VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA—MANON LESCAUT

The students now gather round, bantering des Grieux on his new conquest, but he is in no mood for joking and goes into the inn. Lescaut now joins a crowd of soldiers who are gambling, and soon becomes absorbed in the game. Geronte, seeing the brother thus engaged, seeks the landlord and plots to abduct Manon. Edmund overhears the scheme and informs des Grieux, who finds Manon and induces her to elope with him. They take the carriage which Geronte had ordered and make their escape; leaving him furious. However, he finds Lescaut and suggests that they go to Paris in search of the runaways. Lescaut, who has been drinking, consents, delicately hinting that if Geronte will admit him into the family group, he will use his influence to induce Manon to desert des Grieux for the older but wealthier suitor.

ACT II

SCENE—An Apartment in Geronte's House in Paris

Since the events of Act I Manon is supposed to have left des Grieux for the wealthier Geronte. She is seen surrounded by the utmost luxury, attended by her hairdresser, dancing master, etc. Lescaut enters, evidently much at home, and congratulates her on her change of fortune, taking to himself all the credit for having advised her so cleverly. She says she is happy and contented, but asks Lescaut if he has heard any news of des Grieux—whether he is grieving or whether he has already forgotten her. Lescaut tells her that the young man is disconsolate, and is gambling in order to get wealth to win her back to him.

Manon gazes pensively at the rich hangings, and in a fine air expresses her longing for the humble cottage she has left.

In quelle trine morbide (In Those Silken Curtains)

By Frances Alda, Soprano  (In Italian) 87106 10-inch, $2.00

Madame Alda, whose Manon is one of her most successful impersonations, sings this pathetic scene from Puccini's opera in exquisite style.

They are interrupted by the entrance of a company of Madrigal singers who have been sent by Geronte to amuse Manon. They sing a beautiful Madrigal, given here by Signora Lopez-Nunes and La Scala Chorus.

Madrigale—Sulla vetta del monte (Speed O'er Summit)

By Lopez-Nunes, Soprano, and Chorus  (In Italian) *45015 10-inch, $1.00

When the singers have departed, the dancing master appears to teach Manon the minuet. She takes her lesson, while Geronte and several friends watch her admiringly. In a gay mood she sings a little song to the air of the minuet.

Minuetto di Manon, "L'ora o Tirsi" (Joyful Hours)

By Frances Alda, Soprano  (In Italian) 87079 10-inch, $2.00

Des Grieux now enters and reproaches Manon bitterly. At the sight of him her love returns, and she begs him to take her away from all this luxury. They sing a passionate duet, followed by a lovely solo for des Grieux, who reproaches Manon for her fickleness.

Ah! Manon, mi tradisce (Manon, Kind and Gentle)

By Franco de Gregorio, Tenor  (In Italian) *45027 10-inch. $1.00

By Giorgio Malesci, Tenor  (In Italian) *63421 10-inch. .75

Geronte surprises them, but controls his rage, and sarcastically wishing them a pleasant tête-à-tête, goes out. Lescaut shortly afterward rushes in and announces that Geronte has sent for the police. Des Grieux begs Manon to escape at once, but she insists on collecting her jewels first. This delay is fatal, and she is arrested and taken to prison, charged with being an abandoned woman.

Intermezzo (Between Acts II and III)

By Arthur Pryor's Band  *35003 12-inch. $1.25

Now comes the exquisite intermezzo, which gives a musical picture of the journey to Havre of des Grieux to secure the release of Manon, and of his resolution to follow and protect her wherever she may be sent—"Even to the end of the world!" cries the unhappy lover.

This number exhibits well the genius of this composer in making the orchestra reflect the incidents and passions of the story instead of using it as a mere accompaniment.

*Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED MANON LESCAUT RECORDS, page 244.
ACT III

SCENE—The Harbor at Havre

Manon has been banished from France, and is now embarking on the ship for the French colony in Louisiana. Des Grieux, unable to secure her release, entreats the officers to permit him to go on board. The captain, touched by the grief of the unhappy lovers, consents, and with a cry of joy Des Grieux embarks just as the ship is sailing.

ACT IV

SCENE—A Desolate Spot in Louisiana

This act is merely a long duet in which the sad, but very human, tragedy is ended. The music portrays the failing strength of Manon, the despair of Des Grieux when he is powerless to aid her, the last farewell of the lovers, and the bitter grief of the unhappy young man when Manon dies. As she expires, unable to bear more, he falls senseless on her body.

Nobles, Soldiers, Gypsies, Populace, Etc.

Time and Place: The scene is laid in Madrid, at the time of Charles II.
Wallace's lovely opera of old Madrid is still beloved for its tunefulness and its sentimental music. The ideal of opera fifty years ago was that of quiet, unaffected sweetness, and the composer in his Maritana achieved that quality to perfection. The story of the opera is founded upon that well-known play, Don Caesar de Bazan.

ACT I

SCENE—A Public Place in Madrid

The opening scene shows a band of gypsies singing in the streets. The young king, Charles, listens and is fascinated by the beauty of Maritana, one of the gypsies. The crafty Don Jose, the King's Minister, extols her charms to His Majesty, hoping that the King will compromise himself so that he (Don Jose) can inform the Queen and further his own designs on Her Majesty. Don Caesar, a jovial cavalier and a former friend of Don Jose's, appears in a slightly exhilarated condition, and in befriending a forlorn lad, Lazarillo, involves himself in a duel with Lazarillo's master. This leads to his arrest for dueling in Holy Week, and he is sentenced to die, to the grief of Maritana, who has taken a fancy to the gay and careless cavalier.

ACT II

SCENE—Interior of a Fortress

In the second act Don Caesar sleeps in his cell, with the faithful Lazarillo, who has accompanied his benefactor, by his side. The Minister enters, and when Caesar begs to be allowed to die like a soldier instead of being hanged, he is assured that it can be arranged if, in the meantime, he will consent to be married. With but two hours to live, Don Caesar decides that even marriage is preferable, and consents without inquiring who the bride is to be. The wedding banquet is being served when Lazarillo arrives with a pardon from the King, which Jose secures and hides, his scheme being to have Don Caesar shot and then induce Maritana to go to the palace by pretending that her husband is there, and then compromise the King. Maritana, who has been promised a glorious future if she will consent to wed Don Caesar, enters, heavily veiled, and the marriage takes place, after which the guards enter for the execution. Lazarillo, however, has drawn the bullets from the guns, and when the soldiers fire, Caesar is unharmed, but pretends death, and later escapes to a ball at the Montefiori palace. Under instructions from Don Jose, the Marquis introduces Maritana as his niece. When Caesar demands his bride, Don Jose arranges that he shall be presented to the Marchioness, who is closely veiled. The scheme does not work, however, as Caesar hears Maritana's voice and tries to claim her, but she is quickly spirited away.

ACT III

SCENE—Apartment in the Palace of the King

In the last act Maritana is in the palace, and the scheming Minister introduces the King as her husband, but Caesar suddenly appears and demands his bride. Before explanations can be made the King is summoned by the Queen, while Don Caesar and Maritana consult together, finally deciding to appeal to the Queen. While waiting for her in the palace gardens, Caesar overhears Jose telling Her Majesty that the King has a rendezvous with Maritana that evening. Caesar appears, denounces him as a traitor, and slays him. When the King hears of Caesar's loyalty, he repents of his designs on Maritana and gives her to Caesar, besides making him Governor of Valencia.

The Victor offers four splendid records from this melodious opera, including six numbers blended into a most appropriate medley by the Victor Opera Company; a Victor Band record of the tuneful Overture; the song of Don Caesar in Act II, There is a Flower, given by Mr. McCormack; and a violin record of the favorite Scenes That Are Brightest, from Act III.

Scene and Period: Seville; the seventeenth century. The action is a direct continuation of the Barber of Seville.
Mozart's Marriage of Figaro, with its merry plot and music, is one of the most delightful of musical comedies, and regret must be expressed for the all too infrequent performance of this ever-young and lovely opera, in which the complications of the story, the quick changes of mood, and the sparkling humor are all so well reflected in the music. In no single opera, perhaps, is there such a succession of musical gems as in Figaro. Each is perfect in its way and each seems to enhance the beauty of the others.

This comedy by Beaumarchais, on which the plot is founded, has been utilized by many composers, Mozart's version being written in 1785.

Those who have read the story of Barber of Seville will find themselves again making the acquaintance of Bartolo, Almaviva and Figaro, some time after the marriage of the dashing Count to Bartolo's ward. The Count has settled down quietly on his estates, while Figaro, as a reward for his services as a match-maker, has been appointed major-domo of the castle. Figaro is in love with the Countess' maid Susanna, and expects to marry her soon, but unfortunately for his plans, had also promised to wed Marcellina, the ex-housekeeper of Bartolo, on the very same day. Further complications are promised by the fact that the Count, already wearying of his wife, is making love to Susanna himself.

ACT I

SCENE I—A Room in the Count's Chateau

Overture

By Arthur Pryor's Band
*35109 12-inch, $1.25

The overture is a most delightful one, written in true Mozartian style, and Mr. Pryor has given a brilliant reading of it, bringing out all its beauties.

* Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see double-faced list on page 252.
At the opening of the opera Susanna tells Figaro that the Count is trying to flirt with her, and Figaro plans revenge. Marcellina has confided in Dr. Bartolo, and as the portly doctor still harbors a grudge against Figaro for robbing him of his ward, he consents to help her. The Countess, who seems to be the only one in the castle not engaged in intrigue of some kind, thinks only of her husband, and how to bring him back to her side.

ACT II

SCENE I—Apartment of the Countess

At the beginning of Scene II, the Countess sings her lovely appeal to Cupid.

Porgi amor (Love, Thou Holy Impulse)

By Johanna Gadski, Soprano (In Italian) 88275 12-inch. $3.00
By Teresa Arkel, Soprano (Double-faced, see page 252) (Italian) 63419 10-inch, .75

The Countess is one of Mme. Gadski’s most effective impersonations, and she makes an imposing figure in her royal garb, singing the Mozart music with a richness of voice which is always a delight to the ear. The Porgi amor, with its melancholy undertone, never seems to be heard at its best at the opera, as it is introduced under rather trying conditions—at the very beginning of a scene and without preparatory recitative. Certainly Mme. Gadski has never sung this lovely air better than at this time, it being delivered with much purity of tone and genuine sentiment. The record will be pronounced one of the most satisfactory and appealing interpretations in the artist’s entire list.

Susanna tells the Countess of her husband’s fickleness and they consult Figaro, who plans to make the Count jealous by telling him that the Countess is to meet a lover that evening in the garden. It is planned to send Marcellina in the Countess’ place, and Cherubino, dressed as a young girl, to meet the Count in Susanna’s place.

Figaro departs, and Cherubino enters. Seeing his mistress, he begins to heave deep sighs, but Susanna mocks him and tells the Countess he has written a song about his lady love. The Countess bids him sing it, and he takes his guitar and describes the delights and torments caused by Cupid’s arrow.

Voi che sapete (What is This Feeling?)

By Nellie Melba, Soprano (In Italian) 88067 12-inch, $3.00
By Luisa Tetrazzini, Soprano (In Italian) 88300 12-inch, 3.00

The song is in ballad form, to suit the situation, the voice giving out the clear, lovely melody, while the stringed instruments carry on a simple accompaniment pizzicato, to imitate the guitar; and this delicate outline is shaded and animated by solo wind instruments.

It is difficult to say which to admire most—the gracefulness of the melodies, the delicacy of disposition of the parts, the charm of the tone-coloring, or the tenderness of expression—the whole is of entrancing beauty.
VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA—THE MARRIAGE OF FIGARO

CHERUBINO:
What is this feeling makes me so sad? Why am I burning? Why do I freeze?
What is this feeling makes me so glad? Restless forever, never at ease.
Pain that delights me,—How can it be? All is so altered, nothing's at rest,
Pleasure that pains me!—Or are these changes but in my breast?
Fetter'd though free! Gentler the breezes, day is more bright;
Whence, too, these yearnings, Fairer the moonbeams shine on the night:
Strange to myself? Greener the forest, greener the hill,
Tell me their meaning, spirit or elf! Soft, too, the music flows from each rill.

The women now dress up the page to represent Susanna, and have no sooner finished when the Count knocks, and Cherubino hides in the closet. The Count observes his wife's confusion, and hearing noises in the closet, becomes jealous. He demands that she open the closet door, and when she refuses he goes for a crowbar. The moment he is out Cherubino, aided by Susanna, slips out and escapes through the window, and Susanna enters the closet in his place. When the Count returns and opens the door, the maid comes out and the husband is forced to apologize for his suspicions.

Marcellina now enters with her lawyer and demands that Figaro shall keep his promise to marry her. The Count promises to look into the matter.

ACT III

SCENE I—A Cabinet in the Count's Residence

The third act opens with a scene between Susanna and the Count. He plans to force her to accept his attentions by threatening to make Figaro wed the ancient Marcellina, while Susanna endeavors to gain time. This scene is continued in a charming and graceful duet.

THE COUNT IS JEALOUS—ACT II

250
Crudel perché finora (Too Long You Have Deceived Me)
By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano, and Antonio Scotti, Baritone
(In Italian) 89027 12-inch, $4.00

Susanna pretends to encourage the attentions of the Count, in furtherance of the plot conceived by the Countess; while at the same time she deftly repels his advances. Finally she promises to meet him in the arbor and the Count is in ecstasies.

COUNT: Too long you have deceived me; Hope, weary, bids farewell.

SUSANNA: What passes in her bosom A maiden dreads to tell.
COUNT: You'll meet me in the grove, then?
SUSANNA: When sunset's on the lea.
COUNT: And do not mean it falsely?
SUSANNA: Oh, no; rely on me!
COUNT (aside): What transport now is flying Thro' this enraptured breast!

Of the seven arias in which Susanna takes part in the opera, the Crudel perché is the most effective, and Miss Farrar and Mr. Scotti, both accomplished Mozart singers, deliver it delightfully.

The two now separate, each satisfied with the interview,—the Count believing she has yielded, and Susanna convinced that she has him in a trap. Marcellina, with her lawyer, Bartolo and Figaro now enter, and Figaro is informed that he must wed Marcellina or pay damages; but the discovery of a birthmark proves him to be the long lost son of Marcellina. He embraces his mother just as Susanna comes in, and she, seeing Figaro with his arms around the woman he was lately trying to avoid, decides that he has changed his mind. Matters are explained, however, and preparations for the wedding are begun.

Susanna now seeks the Countess and tells her mistress that the Count wishes to meet her (Susanna) in the garden. The Countess then dictates a letter in which Susanna is to appoint a time and place for the meeting. The writing of this letter is portrayed in a delicate duet.

Che soave zeffiretto (Letter Duet—Song to the Zephyr)
By Marcella Sembrich, Soprano, and Emma Eames.
Contralto (In Italian) 95202 12-inch, $5.00

This number is always greatly enjoyed in representations of the opera, being a fine example of the Mozartian style and full of beauties, not only in the vocal parts, but in the masterly orchestration.

SCENE II—Hall in the Chateau

In this scene Figaro and Susanna are married, and in the course of the festivities Susanna contrives to slip the note to the Count, who is overjoyed.

ACT IV

SCENE—The Garden of the Chateau

The last setting shows the garden where the most delightful of the comedy scenes takes place. Figaro enters and soliloquizes on the fickleness of woman.

Ach! öffnet eure Augen (Of Women Beware!)
By Otto Goritz, Baritone
(In German) 74289 12 $1.50

After his air he hides, just as Susanna, disguised as the Countess, and the Countess disguised as Susanna, enter. The mistress conceals herself, while Susanna, awaiting the Count, and knowing that Figaro is listening, sings her famous soliloquy.

Deh vieni non tardar (Oh, Come, My Heart's Delight)
By Marcella Sembrich, Soprano
(In Italian) 86020 12-inch, $3.00

She pours out her whole soul in this address to the imaginary lover, in order to increase the jealousy of Figaro, who is hidden near by. This is one of the most exquisite numbers in the opera, and Mme. Sembrich's singing of it always remains long in the memory of those who hear her in Nozze.
THE GARDEN—ACT IV

Susanna:
Ah, why so long delay? speed, speed thee hither!
While thou'ret away, all nature seems to wither.
Tho' bright the moon, and bright the stars are glowing,
Deeper around the wood its shade is throwing.
In ev'ry gentle murmur of the river,
In the rustling reeds that near it quiver,
A voice to love invites;—
One kiss to your little friend!
Come then, my dearest, the hours are quickly flying!
Let me with roses bind now thy head!

Cherubino, having an appointment with the maid Barbarina, now enters, and seeing the Countess, thinks it is Susanna and kisses her. The Countess struggles, and the little rascal says:

Cherubino:
Why to me a kiss deny?
With the Count you are not shy!
Come, come, give o'er, then,
And strive no more, then;
One kiss to your little friend!

The Count arrives just in time to see this, and giving Cherubino a box on the ear, sends him flying. He then makes love to the supposed Susanna, the Countess disguising her voice and encouraging him. Figaro now sees Susanna, whom he of course takes to be the Countess, and tells her that her husband and Susanna are together. Susanna reveals herself and Figaro embraces her. The Count sees this embrace and his jealousy making him forget his new conquest, he seizes Figaro and calls for help. The plot is now revealed, and the Count, confessing he is conquered, begs the Countess' forgiveness and promises to be a model husband. As the curtain falls the three happy couples are entering the house to continue the marriage festivities.

Flotow's melodious opera has always been a most popular one, with its spirited Fair Scene, its beautiful duets and quartet, the famous third act finale and the beloved "Last Rose of Summer."

The composer was of noble birth, a son of Baron von Flotow of Mecklenburg, and was born in 1812. His father destined him for a diplomat, but the boy loved music, and went to Paris to study. His first attempt at opera was Pierre et Catharine, followed by Stradella and others.

Many great prima donne have sung the rôle of Martha—Patti, Nilsson, Kellogg, Gerster, Richings, Parepa Rosa; and in the present day Sembrich, have charmed their audiences with Flotow's beautiful strains.

The fine overture, which contains many of the best known melodies, is splendidly played here by the band. On the reverse side of the double-faced (35133) is a 'cello solo by Sorlin.

SCENE I—Boudoir of Lady Harriet

Lady Harriet, maid-of-honor to Queen Anne, is weary of the monotony of court life. She is bored by her admirers, and jewels and flowers pall upon her. "Why do you weep?" says her faithful maid, Nancy. "I do not know," exclaims Harriet. Nancy, beginning the duet, ventures to guess.

Mesta ognor (Ah, These Tears)
By Louise Homer, Contralto, and Bessie Abott, Soprano
(In Italian) 89009 12-inch, $4.00

NANCY:
Of the knights so brave and charming
Who surround our gracious queen,
And themselves with wit are arming,
Some one has so lucky been
Your cold and haughty heart to win!
Is there aught in this alarming?

LADY HARRIET:
Vain belief! How can rejoice me
Such insipid, idle love?
For to please and interest me
Flattery is not enough!

NANCY:
Riches heap on you their treasures,
Honor high is offered you.

LADY HARRIET:
In the midst of gold and pleasures
Weariness alone I see.

NANCY:
This is really too distressing;
Her's is called a brilliant lot!
If love does not work a wonder,
This flower fades and blossoms not!
Balls and tournaments are giving,
And your colors win the prize,
Proudly from the banners waving,
While the victor vainly sighs
For a smile from your fair eyes,
Which his armor penetrated!

LADY HARRIET:
All my glowing ardent wishes
Please me not when they're fulfill'd!
What of happiness I dreamed
Always has disgust instill'd.
The homages they offer,
Praise and honor they bestow,
Leave me joyless, once obtained
Make me not with pride to glow.

NANCY:
Then, from ennui to save you,
Nothing is for you remaining
But to let your heart be conquer'd,
Not a particle retaining!

Tristan, Harriet's cousin, a gay but rather ancient beau, is now announced and proposes a long list of diversions for Harriet's amusement. She declines them all and teases him unmercifully. The song of the servant maids, on their way to the Richmond Fair, now floats in through the window; and hearing these strains of the happy peasants, Harriet conceives a madcap desire to accompany them. Nancy and Tristan protest, but she orders them to go with her. Dresses are procured and they start for the fair, the ladies in the disguise of servant girls, and Tristan garbed as a farmer.

SCENE II—The Fair at Richmond
The scene changes to the Richmond Fair, where a motley crowd of men and maidens are looking for positions. Two young farmers, Plunkett and Lionel, now enter, the latter being an orphan and adopted brother of Plunkett. Lionel's father, on his deathbed, had given Plunkett a ring, which was to be presented to the Queen should the son ever be involved in difficulties.

In this fine duet, one of the gems of Flotow's popular romantic opera, the friends speak of Lionel's father and the incident of the ring.

THE FAIR SCENE
Solo, profugo (Lost, Proscrib’d)

By Enrico Caruso and Marcel Journet  (In Italian) 89036 12-inch, $4.00
By Van Hoose and de Gogorza  (In Italian) 74005 12-inch, 1.50

Lionel tells the story of his adoption by Plunkett’s family in the fine aria beginning—

This air is universally popular and has been used for many poems, including several hymns. Plunkett then sings—and tells of the great love he has for his adopted brother.

The duet, which is a very beautiful one, then follows:

Plunkett:
We have never learnt his station,
Never knew your father’s rank;
All he left to tell the secret
Was the jewel on your hand.

“If your fate should ever darken,”
Quoth he, “Show it to the Queen;
She will save you, she will guard you
When no other help is seen.”

Lionel:
Here in peace and sweet contentment
Have I passed my life with you;
Stronger, daily, grew a friendship
That forever lasts, when true.

Both: Brother, think not wealth and splendor,
If perchance they e’er be mine,
Can as happy this heart render
As the friendship fix’d in thine.

The disguised ladies now appear, accompanied by the unwilling and disgusted Tristan, who considers the whole affair a joke in very bad taste. The two young farmers spy the girls, and being much taken with their looks, offer to hire them. The ladies, carrying further their mad prank, accept the money which is offered them, not knowing that they are legally bound thereby to serve their new masters for a year. Tristan loudly protests, but is hooted off the grounds, and the frightened girls are taken away by the farmers.

ACT II

SCENE—A Farmhouse

As the curtain rises the farmers enter, dragging with them the unwilling and terrified maidens.

Siam giunti, o giovinette (This is Your Future Dwelling)

By Frances Alda, Soprano; Josephine Jacoby, Contralto; Enrico Caruso, Tenor; Marcel Journet, Bass  (In Italian) 95207 12-inch, $5.00

The farmers address the maidens as follows:

Lionel and Plunkett:
This is your future dwelling;
And traveling has an end.

Harriet and Nancy:
We’re reaping for our folly,
Full measure’d punishment!

Lionel and Plunkett (cordially):
Our house and home are yours now,
Their comfort you will share.

Harriet and Nancy (ironically):
Their house and home are ours now,
O we unhappy pair!

Lionel and Plunkett:
At dawn of day and morn’s first glimpse
Be up and stir about!

Harriet and Nancy:
What vulgar ways they make us take!
Before the sun is out!
More monstrous things they’ll next command
That we never heard about!

Lionel:
And extra crowns your purse may see
Before the year is out!
The quartet passage with which this record ends is one of the most beautiful in Flotow’s opera.

Che vuol dir ciao (Surprised and Astounded!)

By Frances Alda, Soprano; Josephine Jacoby, Contralto; Enrico Caruso, Tenor; Marcel Journet, Bass (In Italian) 95208 12-inch, $5.00

When the ladies have recovered their breath and begin to realize that they are in no immediate danger, the temptation to plague their employers is irresistible, and when the young men endeavor to instruct the new servants in their duties the fun commences. At the close of the first quartet passage, Plunkett shows the girls the door of their room. Anxious to escape from the scene and have an opportunity to discuss their predicament, they start toward their room, but Plunkett, thinking of his appetite, stops them.

Plunkett (interposing): Not quite so fast—First prepare a light repast!
Harriet and Nancy: Kitchen work! O these barbarians!
Lionel: Why not excuse them? They are tired!
Plunkett (firmly): Too much kindness will not do.

However, even the gruff farmer has realized by this time that these are servant girls of a most unusual kind, and hesitate to scold them.

Harriet: Yes!
Plunkett (to Nancy): Well, and yours?
Nancy (aside to Harriet): (What shall I tell him?)
Plunkett: Martha?
Harriet: Ju-oo-olia! You’re proudly nam’d girl!
Plunkett (mimicking her): (With exaggerated courtesy.)
Julia! Be kind enough—If your ladyship so please it—(Gruffly)
To hang my hat and mantle up!
Nancy (indignantly):
Do it yourself!

Astonished at such revolutionary conduct from servants, the young men exclaim:

Lionel and Plunkett: Surpris’d I am and astounded,
And I can say no more;
Such impudence unbounded,
Was never seen before!

Harriet and Nancy: Surpris’d they are and confounded,
And sorely puzzled is their brain;
This blow has smartly sounded,
May be they’ll never try again!

The maidens determine to lead their captors a strenuous life, and when they are ordered to get supper they promptly refuse.

Presto, presto (Spinning Wheel Quartet)

By Frances Alda, Soprano; Josephine Jacoby, Contralto; Enrico Caruso, Tenor; Marcel Journet, Bass (In Italian) 95209 12-inch, $5.00
By Victor Opera Quartet (In English) 70052 12-inch, 1.25

Lionel and Plunkett, astonished at such signs of insubordination, unheard of in servants of the seventeenth century, decide to learn what accomplishments these strange domestics do possess, and request them to show their skill at spinning.
Quick now, fetch the spinning-wheels
From out the corner!
Do you want us then to spin?
Yes, most surely.
Do you think
That for talking we engag’d you?
Ha, ha, ha! To see us spinning!
If you want your wages paid
You must earn them first, my maid.
Fetch the wheels now!
We cannot!
Not so harsh, you frighten them.
Begin now, I command it.
We cannot!
Sit down now!
How? What?
It will not turn!
With your thumb and your first finger
Draw a thread and twist it round.
But the stubborn wheel won’t move, sir!

When it is plainly seen that they are ignorant of the art the young men offer to teach them.

When the foot the wheel turns lightly
Let the hand the thread entwine;
Draw and twist it, neatly, tightly.
Then ’twill be both strong and fine!

What a charming occupation
Thus to make the thread entwine;
Gently guided, drawn and twisted,
It becomes both strong and fine!

At the close of the quartet Nancy maliciously overturns the wheel and runs out, pursued by Plunkett, and leads him a merry chase, causing him to lose his temper, while Lionel finds himself falling in love with the beautiful Martha. She laughs at him, but is nevertheless impressed with his good looks and manly bearing; so much so that when he asks her to sing she consents, and taking the rose from her bosom she sings the exquisite “Last Rose of Summer.”

Last Rose of Summer

By Adelina Patti, Soprano (In English) 95030 12-inch, $5.00
By Luisa Tetrazzini, Soprano (In English) 88308 12-inch, 3.00
By Marcella Sembrich, Soprano (In English) 88102 12-inch, 3.00
By Alice Nielsen, Soprano (In English) 74121 12-inch, 1.50
By Elizabeth Wheeler, Soprano (Double-Faced) (In English) 16813 10-inch, .75
As is generally known, this air is not by Flotow, but is an old Irish tune, to which Moore fitted his poem. In fact, Martha undoubtedly owes much of its vogue to this ancient Irish air. The melody is a very old one called "The Groves of Blarney." Moore wrote the words about 1813, and they have become the most popular of all his verses.

'Tis the last rose of summer,
Left blooming alone;
All her lovely companions
Are faded and gone;
No flower of her kindred,
No rosebud is nigh
To reflect back her blushes,
Or give sigh for sigh!

I'll not leave thee, thou lov'd one,
To pine on the stem;
Since the lovely are sleeping,
Go sleep thou with them.
Thus kindly I scatter
Thy leaves over the bed—
Where thy mates of the garden
Lie scentless and dead!

Nancy now returns, still pursued by the exasperated Plunkett.

Plunkett:
Don't you try this game again, girl!
Where do you suppose she was?
In the kitchen was the vixen
Breaking bottles, glasses, dishes,
And a good deal have I suffer'd,
Till at last I caught the lass!

Nancy:
Let me go! Don't make me mad, sir,
Or some scratching you will see!

Nancy (plaintively):
I'll confess, that pleases me!

The farmers, somewhat subdued by the knowledge that they have engaged two most spirited and insubordinate damself, now bid their new-found servants good night in this beautiful number, one of the gems of Flotow's opera.

The maidens now peep out from their room, and seeing no one, come out, and are excitedly discussing their chances of escape, when Tristan's voice is heard outside softly calling to them. Overjoyed, they make their escape through the window, and return to their home in the carriage provided by Tristan.

ACT III

SCENE—A Hunting Park in Richmond Forest

Act III represents the Forest of Richmond, where the Queen is hunting with her attendants. The young farmers, who have sought vainly for their late servants, have come hither to witness the hunting and forget the two maidens who have wrought such havoc with their affections.

The act opens with the spirited apostrophe to porter beer, sung by Plunkett.

This most famous of old English beverages is highly praised by the jovial Plunkett, who gives it credit for much of Britain's vigorous life.
VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA—FLOTOW’S MARTHA

PLUNKETT:
I want to ask you, can you not tell me,
What to our land the British strand
Gives life and power? say!
It is old porter, brown and stout,
We may of it be justly proud,
It guides John Bull, where'er he be,
Through fogs and mists, through land and sea!
And that explaineth where'er it reigneth
Is joy and mirth! At ev'ry hearth
Resounds a joyous song!
Look at its goodly color here!
Where else can you find you such good beer?
So brown and stout and healthy, too!
'The porter's health I drink to you!

The farmers disperse, leaving Lionel alone, and he sings his famous “M'appari,” the melodious air of the broken-hearted lover, in which he tells of his hopeless passion for the fair Lady Harriet, whom he knows only as Martha.

M'appari (Like a Dream)
By Enrico Caruso, Tenor
By Evan Williams, Tenor

LIONEL:
Like a dream bright and fair,
Chasing ev'ry thought of care,
Those sweet hours pass’d with thee
Made the world all joy for me.
But, alas! thou art gone,
And that dream of bliss is o'er.
Ah! I hear now the tone
Of thy gentle voice no more;

LIONEL suddenly encounters Lady Harriet, and although amazed at seeing her in the dress of a lady, warmly pleads his love.

LIONEL:
Yes, 'tis thee!
Once more I do behold thee!
Praised be God; it is no dream!

HARRIET (aside):
My heart!

HARRIET (with dignity):
Knew me? You're mistaken!

LIONEL:
I've hoarded thy fair image
Deep in my breast—No—
VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA—FLOTOW'S MARTHA

_Lady Harriet_ is forced to call the hunters, to whom she declares that _Lionel_ must be mad. He is distracted, while _Plunkett_ endeavors to console him. The great finale, a part of which closes the Opera Medley (see below), then occurs. It is a magnificent piece of concerted music.

ACT IV

SCENE I—Plunkett’s Farm House

_Plunkett_ is discovered alone, musing on the unhappy plight of his foster brother, who, since his rejection by _Harriet_, is inconsolable. He sings his great air, which is often omitted in American presentations of the opera.

Il mio Lionel (My Unhappy Lionel)

_by Mattia Battistini, Baritone_
_(In Italian)_ 92005 12-inch, $3.00

It is a fine number, superbly sung by Battistini, whose great success in this rôle at Covent Garden is well remembered.

Plunkett:

Poor Lionel! he sighs, he laments,
He flies from his friend;
He is beside himself with love
Accursed be the hour
When first we saw that girl,
When first we brought her beneath our roof!
Soon will my Lionel die,

If no aid come from on high;
Fatal the hour;
When first his heart felt love's pow'r;
Weeping, he wanders in grief;
Nought to his pain brings relief;
Merciful God, hear my cry,
Else must my Lionel die!

_Nancy_ now enters, and she and _Plunkett_ soon come to an understanding. They decide to present _Lionel’s_ ring to the _Queen_, hoping thus to clear up the mystery of his birth.

SCENE II—A Representation of the Richmond Fair

_Lionel’s_ ring has been shown to the _Queen_, who discovers that the young man is really the son of the banished _Earl of Derby_. However, he refuses to accept his rightful rank and continues to brood over the insult offered him in the forest. As a last resort a complete reproduction of the Fair Scene of Act II is arranged, with booths and the crowd of servants all represented. _Harriet, Nancy_ and _Plunkett_ are dressed in the costumes worn at their first meeting.

_Lionel_ is led in by _Plunkett_, and when he sees _Harriet_ in the dress of a servant, the cloud seems to pass from his mind and he embraces her tenderly. The two couples pledge their troth and all ends happily.

OPERA IN THREE ACTS

AMELIA, wife of Reinhart .............................................. Soprano
ULRICA, a negress astrologer ............................................ Soprano
OSCAR, a page ............................................................... Soprano

Scene and Period: In and near Boston, end of the seventeenth century.

The opera was composed for the San Carlo, Naples, and first called Gustavo III (after an assassinated Italian monarch), but after the announcement had almost created a riot in Naples, Verdi was forced to change the scene from Stockholm to Boston, and the name to Masked Ball. Finally it was thought best to abandon the Naples première altogether, and the opera was taken to Rome.

There are many, of course, who consider this work old-fashioned—and so it is, not pretending at all to be a great music drama; but there are many far more ambitious works with certainly less real music. The familiar Eni tu and Saper vorreste and the fine concerted numbers in Acts II and III are well worth hearing. The Victor has assembled a very fine collection of the best music in the opera, and presents it with the belief that this revival is the best heard in recent years.

Richard, Count of Warwick and Governor of Boston, falls in love with Amelia, the wife of Reinhart, his secretary and intimate friend. This love is returned, but the wife’s conscience troubles her, and she consults Ulrica, a black sorceress, hoping to secure a drug that will cause her to forget Richard. Ulrica sends her to gather a certain herb which will prove effective. Richard, who had also gone to consult the astrologer, overhears the conversation, and follows Amelia to the magic spot. Amelia’s husband, who has come in search of Richard to warn him of a conspiracy to assassinate him, now appears, and Richard makes his escape, after requesting Reinhart to escort the veiled lady to her home without attempting to learn her identity. On the way, however, they are surrounded by the conspirators and Amelia is revealed. Reinhart swears vengeance on his false friend and joins the plotters.

At the Masked Ball, Richard is stabbed by Reinhart, but the dying man declares the innocence of Amelia and forgives his murderer.

ACT I

SCENE I—A Hall in the Governor’s House

The hall is filled with people—officers, deputies, gentlemen, etc.—waiting for the appearance of the Governor. He enters, is warmly greeted by those assembled, receives their petitions and inspects a list of the guests invited to the Masked Ball. He sees Amelia’s name, and in an aside sings his rapturous air.

La rivedrà nell’estasi (I Shall Behold Her)
By Nicola Zerola, Tenor
(In Italian) 64167 10-inch, $1.00

This, the first of the lovely gems with which the score of Ballo in Maschera is studded, is effectively given by Zerola, whose beautiful voice is shown to great advantage.

Richard (reading aside):
Amelia—dear, sweet name!
Its mere sound fills my heart with joy!
Her beauteous, charming image
Inspires my soul with love;
Here soon shall I behold her
In all her tender charms.
No matter what the splendor
Of night’s most brilliant stars,
I swear none is so brilliant
As my love’s dazzling eyes!

Reinhart enters and tells the Governor of a plot against his life.

Alla vita che t’arride (On the Life Thou Now Dost Cherish)
By Mattia Battistini (Italian) 88232 12-in., $3.00
By Titta Ruffo (In Italian) 87113 10-in., 2.00

In this fine air he enthusiastically praises Richard’s noble acts, and tells him his friends and faithful subjects will defeat the plans of the conspirators.

A negro woman, Ulrica, is now brought in and accused of being a witch. Richard laughs at the accusation and dismisses the woman. He calls his courtiers around him, and suggests that for a lark they go disguised to the hut of the sorceress and consult her. The friends agree, and the plotters, headed by Samuel and Tom, see a chance to further their plans.

SCENE II—The Hut of Ulrica

The hut is crowded with people who have come to have their fortunes told. The sorceress stands over her magic cauldron and sings her incantation.

Re dell’abisso (King of the Shades)
By Carolina Pietracewska, Contralto (In Italian) 76005 12-inch, $2.00

She calls on the abyssal king to appear and aid in her mystic rites.

Ulrica (as if inspired):
Hasten, O King of the Abyss!
Fly through the ambient air
And enter my abode.
Three times has been heard screeching,

The ominous lapwing.
Three times, too, has been hissing
The venomous red dragon.
And three times have been groaning
The spirits from the graves!

The Governor now arrives, dressed as a sailor, and accompanied by his companions. They are conversing with the witch when a knock is heard, and all leave the hut by Ulrica’s orders except Richard, who conceals himself in a corner.

Amelia enters and asks the sorceress to give her peace of mind by banishing a love which she cannot control. The witch promises speedy relief if Amelia will gather a certain herb from which can be brewed a magic liquor.

Della città all’occaso (Hard by the Western Portal)
By Ida Giacomelli, Soprano; Lina Mileri, Contralto; Gino Martinez-Patti, Tenor (In Italian) #68143 12-inch, $1.25

* Double-Faced—See page 266.
Amelia asks for directions, and the witch proceeds:

ULRICA:

Then pause and listen.
Go from the city eastward,
To where by gloom engirted
Fall the pale moonbeams on the field,
Accurs’d, abhor’d, deserted,
And cull the flowers lowly
From those black rocks unholy,
Where crimes have dark atonement made
With life’s departing sigh

The frightened girl consents to go that very night, and takes her departure. ULRICA now admits the people again, and Richard, in the character of the sailor, asks her to tell his fortune. His inquiry of the prophetess takes the form of a barcarolle—the favorite measure of a sea-song—and the ballad, vigorous and tuneful, has all the swing of a rollicking song of the sea.

Di tu se fidele (The Waves Will Bear Me)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor, and Metropolitan Opera Chorus

(In Italian) 87091 10-inch. $2.00

This attractive ballad is full of humor, the staccato passages toward the close indicating the Governor’s impatience to learn the future. In a gay mood he banter’s the woman, asking her to tell him if he will meet with storms on his next voyage.

RICHARD:

Declare if the waves will faithfully bear me;
If weeping the lov’d one from whom I now tear me,
Farewell, to me saying, my love is betraying.
With sails rent asunder, with soul in commotion,
I go now to steer thro’ the dark waves of ocean,
The anger of Heav’n and Hell to defy!
Then haste with thy magic, the future exploring
No power have the thunder or angry winds roaring.
Or death, or affection my path to deny!

This famous Barcarolle has been a favorite with many great tenors, but no one has ever sung it as Caruso has given it here. ULRICA rebukes him, and examining his palm, tells him he is soon to die by the sword of that friend who shall next shake his hand. The conspirators, Samuel and Tom, are uneasy, thinking themselves suspected, but the Governor laughs and asks who will grasp his hand to prove the prophecy false. No one dares to grant his request.

Reinhart, who has become anxious about his chief and has come in search of him, now enters, and seeing the Governor, shakes him by the hand, calling him by name, to the astonishment of all those not in the secret. Sir Richard tells the witch she is a false prophet, as this is his most faithful friend.

RICHARD:

The oracle has lied!
That man who grasped my hand
Is my most faithful friend!

All the people greet the Governor with cheers, and kneeling, sing the hymn:

O figlio d’Inghilterra (O, Son of Glorious England)

By Giuseppina Huguet, Soprano; Ines Salvador, Mezzo-Soprano; Francesco Cigada, Baritone; Aristodemo Sillich, Bass; La Scala Chorus

(Double-Faced—See page 266) (In Italian) 63173 10-inch. $0.75

This noble concerted number, which closes the first act, is sung in a splendid manner by Huguet, Salvador, Cigada and Sillich of La Scala forces, assisted by the famous chorus of that opera house.

ACT II

SCENE I—A Field near Boston—on one side a Gallows

Amelia, much frightened by her lonely surroundings, enters in search of the magic herb. She sings her dramatic air, Yonder Plant Enchanted.
Ma dall’arido stelo divulsa (Yonder Plant Enchanted)
By Celestina Boninsegna, Soprano
By Lucia Crestani, Soprano

AMELIA:
When at last from its stem I shall sever
Yonder weed of dread virtue enchanted,
From my tempest-torn bosom forever
When that image so ethereal shall perish,
What remains to thee then, oh, my heart!
Ah, tears blind me!
The weight of my sorrow
Chains my steps on their desolate journey!
Heart, have courage;
From these rocks their hardness borrow!
Come, oh, Death, let thy merciful dart,
Still forever my poor throbbing heart!
(A distant clock strikes.)
Hark! ’tis midnight! Ah, yon vision!
Moving, breathing, lo! a figure,
All mist-like upward wreathing!
Ha! in those orbits baleful anger is seething;
Fix’d on me they angrily burn!
Deign, oh, Heaven, Thy strength to impart
To this fainting, fear-stricken heart.

The vision resolves itself into Richard, who now approaches. The unhappy girl confesses that she loves him, but begs him to leave her. They sing a fine duet.

Ah! qual soave brivido (Like Dew Thy Words Fall on My Heart)
By Ida Giacomelli, Soprano, and Gino Martinez-Patti, Tenor

RICHARD:
Like dew thy words fall on my heart,
Aglow with love’s fond passion!
Ah, murmur with compassion those gentle words again!

AMELIA:
From out the cypress bower,
Where I had thought it laid in death,
Returns with giant power, the love my heart
doth fear!
Ah, would by Heaven ’twere granted,
To sigh for him my latest breath,
Or in death’s sleep enchanted rest my weary spirit here!

They are interrupted by the appearance of Reinhart, who comes to warn Richard that his enemies are lying in wait to murder him. Richard, unwilling to leave Amelia, is forced to ask Reinhart to escort the veiled lady to the city without seeking to discover her identity. Reinhart swears to obey, and Richard makes his escape. The couple start for Boston, but are surrounded by the conspirators, who take Reinhart to be the Governor. Disappointed in their prey, they tear the veil from the unknown lady and Reinhart is astounded to see that it is his wife. The great finale to Act II now occurs.

Ve’ se di notte qui con la sposa (Ah! Here by Moonlight)
By Ida Giacomelli, Soprano; Renzo Minolfi, Baritone; Cesare Preve, Bass; Chorus

AMELIA:
Amelia is overcome with shame, but protests her innocence. Reinhart bitterly upbraids her and denounces his false friend Richard, while the conspirators depart, anticipating the sensation which the city will enjoy on the morrow.

AMELIA

Now bent on revenge, decides to cast his lot with the plotters, and the act closes as he says to Amelia with deep meaning:

REINHART (alone with Amelia):
I shall fulfill my promise
To take thee to the city!

AMELIA (aside):
His voice like a death warrant
Doth sound in my ear!

ACT III

SCENE I—A Room in Reinhart’s House

Reinhart is denouncing Amelia for her supposed crime, and finally decides to kill her. She begs to be allowed to embrace her child once more, and her husband consenting, she goes out. Left alone, the unhappy man repents his resolution, and resolves to spare the guilty woman’s life. In the greatest of the airs allotted to Reinhart he swears to avenge his wrongs.

Eri tu che macchiavi quell’anima (Is It Thou?)

By Emilio de Gogorza, Baritone

(In Italian)  88324  12-inch. $3.00

By Mattia Battistini (In Italian)  92044  12-inch. 3.00

By Francesco Cigada (In Italian)  *35179  12-inch. 1.25

By Giuseppe de Luca (In Italian)  *62086  10-inch. .75

Samuel and Tom enter and Reinhart tells them he knows of their plots, and will assist them, as he desires the Governor’s death. They draw lots, and Reinhart is chosen to be the assassin. Amelia enters in time to realize the state of affairs, and is about to plead for the Governor’s life, when Oscar, the page, enters bearing an invitation to the Masked Ball. The page, beginning an effective quartet, tells of the brilliancy of the occasion, and at the close of the number the conspirators go out, after agreeing on the password, “Death!”

Di che fulgor (What Dazzling Light)

By Giuseppina Huguet, Soprano; Francesco Cigada, Baritone; Carlo Ottoboni, Bass; Maria Grisi, Soprano (In Italian)  *62086  10-inch. $0.75

SCENE II—The Governor’s Private Office

Richard, alone, resolves to tear the unworthy love from his heart and send Amelia and Reinhart to England.

Ma se m’e forza perderti—Romanza (Forever to Lose Thee!)

(Preceded by the recitative, Forse la soglia—This Affair Must End!)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor

(In Italian)  88346  12-inch. $3.00

The recitative indicates this decision:

RICHARD:
If haply I have decided, finding peace of mind
Reinhart will return to his country,
His wife, submissive, will follow him.
Farewells unspoken, the broad ocean will divide us.

He summons courage and writes the order for the departure of Reinhart. Concealing it in his bosom, he gives expression once more to his love for the fair Amelia:

RICHARD:
Within my inmost heart,
If compelled to lose thee now
And now, what dark forebodings
To part from thee forever:
When, once more to behold thee,
My burning thoughts will fly to thee,
Seems like a fatal longing!
Though fate our lot may sever,
And round my soul are throbbing?
Thy memory still enshrined shall be
When, once more to behold thee,

Caruso sings this lovely air with that wonderful ease of delivery and golden voice which have made him the greatest of tenors.

A page brings a note to the Governor from an unknown lady who warns him of the plot, but Richard resolves to brave his enemies and attend the ball.

* Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED MASKED BALL RECORDS, page 266.
SCENE III—Grand Ballroom in the Governor’s House

Reinhart, mingling with the guests, meets the page Oscar, and attempts to learn how the Governor is dressed. The page teases him, singing his gay air, Saper vorreste.

Saper vorreste—Canzone (You Would be Hearing)

By Luisa Tetrazzini. Soprano
(In Italian) 88304 12-inch. $3.00

In reply to Reinhart’s questions the merry page tauntingly sings:

Oscar:
You’d fain be hearing, what dress he’s wearing
When he has hidden, the fact be hidden?
I know right well but may not tell
Tra la la la, la la la!
Of love my heart feels all the smart,
Yet watchful ever, my secret never
Rank nor bright eyes shall e’er surprise!
Tra la la la, la la la!

This gay number is brilliantly sung by Tetrazzini, the high B in the cadenza being taken with ease.

The page finally reveals to Reinhart that the Governor is dressed in black, with a red ribbon on his breast.

Amelia meets the Governor and warns him against the plotters. He bids her farewell and is about to go, when Reinhart stabs him. The dying Governor, supported in the arms of his friends, tells Reinhart that his wife is guiltless, and that to remove her from temptation he had planned to send Reinhart to England to fill an honored post.

The secretary is overcome with remorse, and Richard dies, after declaring that Reinhart must not be punished.

OPERA IN FOUR ACTS

Text and music by Arrigo Boito; a paraphrase of both parts of Goethe's "Faust," with additional episodes taken from the treatment of the legend by other authorities. The first production at La Scala, Milan, 1868, was a failure. Rewritten and given in 1875 with success. First London production July 6, 1880. First American production at the Academy of Music, November 24, 1880, with Campanini, Cary and Novara. Other productions were in 1896, with Calvé, and in 1901 with McIntyre, Homer and Plançon. Some recent notable revivals: At the Metropolitan, when the opera was brought out for Chaliapine, the cast including Farrar and Martin, and the Boston Opera production of 1910, both noteworthy for their splendid settings.

Arrigo Boito well deserves a conspicuous place among the great modern composers. His Mefistofele ranks with the masterpieces of modern Italy, and contains scenes of great beauty, notably the Garden Scene, with its lovely music, and the Prison Scene, in which the pathos of the demented Margaret's wanderings, the beautiful duet and the frenzy of the finale are pictured by a master hand.

Boito is not only a composer, but a poet of ability and a clever librettist. Notable among his writings are the librettos of Verdi's Otello and Falstaff, which should rather be called dramas set to music, for it is unfair to class them with the old-fashioned Italian librettos.

The story of Boito's opera is directly drawn from Goethe's Faust, but the composer has chosen episodes from the whole of Goethe's story, not confining himself to the tale of Gretchen, but including the episode of Helen of Troy. In his Mefistofele Boito has followed the great poet's work more closely than did Gounod's librettist, and the work is a deeper one in many respects.

PROLOGUE

SCENE—The Regions of Space

The prologue to Boito's opera is a most impressive scene, which takes place in the indefinite regions of space. Invisible angels and cherubim, supported by the celestial trumpets, sing in praise of the Ruler of the Universe.

Mefistofele is represented hovering between Hell and Earth, denying the power of God. He addresses the Almighty in his Hail, Great Lord!

Ave Signor (Hail, Sovereign Lord)

By Marcel Journet, Bass

(In Italian) 64126 10-inch, $1.00

The Devil contends that man is but a weakling, easily cheated of his salvation. Standing on a cloud Mefistofele mockingly addresses the Creator:

Hail, Sovereign Lord,
Forgive me if my bawling
Somewhat behind is falling
Those sublime anthems sung
In heavenly places!
Forgive me if my face is
Now wanting the radiance
That, as with a garland,
The cherub legion graces!
Forgive me if in speaking,
Some risk I'm taking of irreverent outbreaking!
The puny king of puny earth's dominions,
Erreth through wrong opinions
And like a cricket, with a long leap rushing,
'Mid stars his nose is pushing,
Then with superb fatuity tenacious,
Trills with pride contumacious!
Vain, glorious atom!
Proud 'mid confusion!
Phantom of man's delusion!
Ah! in such deep degradation
Is fallen the master,
Lord of the whole creation,
No more have I the will,
While in that station,
Him to tempt to ill!

From the Ditson Edition

Then, discussing Faust with the Mystic Chorus, Mefistofele wagers that he can entice the philosopher from the path of virtue. The challenge is accepted, and Mefistofele disappears to begin his plots against the soul of Faust.

Journet sings this great number splendidly, and it will be pronounced one of the most striking features of his Victor list.

ACT I

SCENE I—A Square in Frankfort—Easter Sunday

The aged philosopher, Faust, and his pupil Wagner, while mingling with the crowd, observe a grey Friar who seems to be shadowing their movements. Faust is alarmed and says to Wagner:

Faust: Observe him closely. Tell me, who is he?
Wagner: Some lowly Friar, who begs alms from those he passes.
VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA—BOÎTO’S MEFISTOFELE

FAUST: Look more closely. He moves slowly on in lessening circles; and with each spiral, comes ever nearer and nearer. Oh! as I gaze, I see his footprints marked in fire!

WAGNER: No, master, 'tis some idle fancy that thy brain deceives thee; I only see there a poor grey friar. Timidly he ventures to approach us, and we are to him but two passing strangers.

FAUST: Now he seems as though he wove nets about our path. His circles grow smaller! He draweth close! Ah!

WAGNER (carelessly): Look calmly. 'Tis a grey friar, and not a specter. Muttering his prayers, he tells his beads as he journeys. Come hence, good master.

As they leave the square, followed by the Friar, the scene changes to Faust's laboratory.

SCENE II—The Studio of Faust. It is Night

Faust enters, not observing that the Friar slips in behind him, and conceals himself in an alcove. The aged philosopher delivers his soliloquy, Dai campi.

Dai campi, dai prati (From the Green Fields)

By John McCormack, Tenor

(by Italian) 64303 10-inch, $1.00

By Alberto Amadi, Tenor (Double-faced) (by Italian) 63313 10-inch, .75

He speaks of his deep contentment, his love for God and his fellow man.

FAUST: From the meadows, from the valleys, which lie bathed in moonlight, And where paths silent sleep, I come returning; my soul filled With calmness, mysterious and deep, The passions, the heart rudely trying, In quiet oblivion are lying; My spirit knows only its love for its fellows; Its love for its God!

Ah! From the meadows, from the valleys, I come to read the blest Evangel; Who delight me, and fill me with holy fire! (Opens a Bible placed upon a high reading desk. As he begins to meditate he is startled by a cry from the Friar in the alcove.)

This is one of the most beautiful of all Italian operatic airs, and is sung by Mr. McCormack with a loveliness of tone which makes every note a delight, while a lower-priced rendition, and an excellent one, is furnished by Mr. Amadi.

The Friar appears, and throwing off his disguise, reveals himself as the Devil, singing a splendid aria, I Am the Spirit.

By Marcel Journet, Bass

(by Italian) 74210 12-inch, $1.50

Mefistofele says that he is that great force which forever thinketh ill but doeth well, and then continues:

MEFISTOFELE: I'm the spirit that denieth all things, always; Stars or flowers—that by sneers and strifes suppieth Cause to vex the heavenly powers. I'm for Naught and for Creation, Ruin universal, death! And my very life and breath, Is what here they call transgression, sin and Death! Shouting and laughing out this word I throw: "No!" Sand'ring, wasting, howling, hissing,

On I go, whistling! whistling! Eh! Part am I of that condition, Of the whole obscurity, Child of darkness and ambition, Shadows hiding, wait for me. If the light usurps, contending, mn my rebel scepter's right, Not prolong'd will be the fight, Over sun and earth is pending, Endless night!

This is sometimes called Ballata del fischio, or Whistling Ballad, because of the peculiar whistles Botto has introduced in the number. Journet delivers this splendid number with admirable declamatory power, bringing out the strange symbolism of the climax in a thrilling manner.

Mefistofele offers to be Faust's servant if he will accompany him. "What is the price?" asks the philosopher. "Up here I will obey thee," says Mefistofele, "but below our places will be reversed." Faust says he cares nothing for the future, and if Mefistofele can give him but one hour of happiness, for that one hour he would sell his soul. The bargain is made and they set forth.

This departure from the laboratory of Faust is strikingly pictured in the great painting of Kreling, a reproduction of which is given on page 267.

ACT II

SCENE—The Garden of Margaret

Faust (nowa handsome young man known as Henry) is strolling in the garden with Margaret, while Mefistofele, as in Gounod's version, makes sarcastic love to Martha, whom Boito has pictured as Margaret's mother. Faust pleads for a meeting alone with the maiden.

NOTE—Mefistofele quotations are from the Ditson libretto, by permission. (Copy '880, Oliver Ditson Company) but she dares not consent because her mother sleeps lightly. He gives her a sleeping draught, assuring her that it will not harm her mother, but merely cause her to sleep soundly. The four then sing a fine quartet, and the scene suddenly changes to the Brocken.

SCENE II—The Summit of the Brocken

This scene shows a wild spot in the Brocken mountains by moonlight. The wind is whistling in weird gusts. Mefistofele is helping Faust to climb the jagged rocks, from which flames now and then dart forth. Will-o-the-wisps flutter to and fro, and Faust welcomes them, grateful for the light they give.

Folletto, folletto (Sprites of Hades)

By de Tura, Mansueto, and Chorus (In Italian)

Mefistofele echoes him, ever urging him to climb higher.

Mefistofele:

Come up higher, and higher, and higher,
Farther yet 'tis more dreary the road
That will lead us to Satan's abode!

Faust:

Ah! wild-fire, pallid light,
Now so dim, now so bright,
Flash o'er us thy ray
To illumine our way,
Come flame wildly dancing,
Come nigher, and nigher!

Arriving at the summit, Mefistofele summons the infernal host—demons, witches, wizards, goblins, imps—and presides over the satanic orgies as King. All pay him homage and dance in wildest joy as he breaks into fragments a glass globe, typifying the earth, crying: "On its surface vile races dwell, degraded, toilsome, quarreling among themselves. They laugh at me, but I can laugh also!"

Faust now sees a vision of Margaret, on her way to prison for the murder of her mother and her babe. A red stain on her neck horrifies him, but Mefistofele laughs and says, "Turn away your eyes." The act closes in a riotous orgy, the demons whirling and dancing in a mad revelry. This wild scene is graphically pictured in Kreling’s painting.

ACT III

SCENE—The Prison of Margaret

The demented girl is lying on a straw bed. She rouses herself and sings her sad ballad, L'altra notte.

L'altra notte (Last Night in the Deep Sea)

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano (Italian)

88114 12-inch, $3.00
She raves of the cruel jailors, whom she says threw her babe into the ocean and now accuse her of the crime.

MARGARET:
To the sea, O night of sadness!
They my babe took and in it threw him!
Now to drive me on to madness,
They declare 'twas I that slew him!
Cold the air is, the dark cell narrow,
And my spirit broken to-day,
Like the timid woodland sparrow,
Off, far, far away.
Father, pity me!
Longs to fly; ah, to fly

Mefistofele now enters, followed by Faust, who begs the demon to save Margaret. The fiend reminds Faust that it is his own fault, but promises to try, and goes out.

Faust goes to Margaret, who does not know him and is frightened, thinking her jailers have come for her. He urges her to fly with him, and they sing a tender duet, Far Away.

Lontano, lontano (Away From All Strife)

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano, and Edmond Clement, Tenor (Italian) 88422 12-in., $3.00

By Giuseppina Huguet, Soprano, and Gennaro de Tura, Tenor
(In Italian) 87056 10-inch, $2.00

The return of Mefistofele drives Margaret into a frenzy, and she refuses to leave the prison, finally falling into Faust’s arms in her death agony. Her senses returning for a brief period, she forgives him and dies, while a chorus of celestial beings announce that her soul is saved. Faust and Mefistofele disappear just as the headsman and jailers come to conduct Margaret to execution.

ACT IV
The Night of the Classical Sabbath
We are now transported to distant Greece, where Mefistofele has resurrected the beautiful Helen of Troy for the further temptation of Faust. The scene shows an enchanting spot on the banks of the Peneus, with the moon shedding a golden light upon Helen, Pantalis and groups of Sirens. Helen begins her enchanting ode to the moon, followed by the trio.

Scena della Grecia—La luna immobile (Moon Immovable!)

By N. Ardoni, Soprano; Lavin de Casas, Mezzo-Soprano; Gaetano Pini-Corsi, Tenor

In Italian 87068 10-inch, $2.00

Faust and Mefistofele enter and the former soon forgets all else in the love of the fair Grecian. Mefistofele, however, feels out of place in this classic neighborhood, and leaving Faust in the arms of Helen, returns to the Brocken, where he amuses himself with his satanic crew.

EPILOGUE

SCENE—Faust’s Studio

Faust has returned to his studio, again old and feeble and full of remorse for his past life. He has tasted the pleasures of earth and found them empty. He sings his famous epilogue:

Giunto sul passo (Nearing the End of Life)

By Alberto Amadi (Double-faced)  (In Italian) 63313 10-inch. $0.75

Faust:

Nearing the utmost limit of life’s extremest goal,
   In a vision delightful did wander forth my soul.
   King of some placid region, unknown to care and striving,
   I found a faithful people and fain would aid their living.
   Ah! would then that this fair vision could but be my last dream!
   Look you—the crowds now come within my observation!
   Lo, the crowds turn t’wards cities, Heav’nward turn the nation!
   Holy songs now I hear.
   Now I bathe in the radiant splendor of Heaven’s glorious morning!
   Ideal bliss upon my soul is already dawning!

Mefistofele enters for his final triumph, but Faust turns to the Bible and seeks salvation. Mefistofele, in desperation, summons the Sirens to his aid, but Faust, leaning on the sacred book, prays for forgiveness, and the defeated Mefistofele sinks into the ground. A shower of roses, a token of Faust’s salvation, falls on the dying man as the curtain descends.

THE MASTERSINGERS

OPERA IN THREE ACTS

Both text and music of Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg are by Wagner. The idea of the opera was suggested to the composer in boyhood, as was Tannhäuser, by the reading of one of Hoffmann's novels, and was planned as a kind of burlesque of the Minnesinger contest in Tannhäuser. First production in Munich, June 21, 1868.

The first performance in England took place under Richter, at Drury Lane, May 30, 1882; an Italian version was given at Covent Garden, July 13, 1889, and an English production by the Carl Rosa Company at Manchester, April 16, 1896.

In 1888 it was given for the first time at Bayreuth; and the first American production took place in New York, January 4, 1886.

Scene: Nürnberg in the middle of the sixteenth century.

To the opera-going public in general Meistersinger is the most entertaining of all the Wagner operas. Its gaiety and tunefulness are charming, and its story easily understood by an audience, which cannot be said of most of the works by the master.

The humor is essentially German—an intermingling of playfulness, satire, practical jokes, and underneath all something of seriousness and even sadness, while the romantic element, provided by the lovers, Eva and Walter, is not lacking.

The opera is a satire on the musical methods of the days of the Reformation, the mediaeval burgher's life in Nuremberg being pictured with a master hand. The loves of Walter and Eva; the noble philosophy of Sachs, the cobbler-poet; the envy of the ridiculous Beckmesser; and the youthful frolics of David—all are surrounded by some of the most glorious music imaginable.

The first act opens in St. Catherine's Church at Nuremberg, where Eva, daughter of the wealthy goldsmith Pogner, and Walter, a young knight, meet and fall in love. When Walter learns that Eva’s hand has been promised by her father to the winner of the song contest, he resolves to compete, and remains for the examination before the meeting of Master-singers. Beckmesser, who also wishes to marry Eva, is chosen marker, and under the rigid rules of the order gives Walter so many bad marks that he is rejected in spite of the influence of Hans Sachs in his favor.

Act II shows a street, with the houses of Hans Sachs and Pogner on opposite sides. The apprentices, who are putting up the shutters, plague David on his affection for Magdalena, Eva’s nurse. Sachs drives them away and sends Davia to bed, then sits down in his doorway and soliloquizes. He cannot forget the song haunts him.

WALTER’S TRIAL—ACT I

which Walter delivered before the Mastersingers,—its beauty
SACHS:
The elder’s scent is waxing
So mild, so full and strong!
Its charm my limbs relaxing:
Words unto my lips would throng.
But I’d better stick to my leather
And let all this poetry be!
(He tries again to work.)
And yet—it haunts me still.
I feel, but comprehend ill:
Cannot forget it,—and yet cannot grasp it;
I measure it not, e’en when I clasp it.
It seemed so old, yet new in its chime,—
Like songs of birds in sweet May-time:—
Spring’s command
And gentle hand
His soul with this did entrust:
He sang because he must!

Eva now learns of Walter’s rejection, and is so indignant that she promises to elope with him. The lovers are interrupted and forced to hide by Beckmesser, who comes beneath Eva’s window for the double purpose of serenading her and rehearsing the song he is to sing for the prize on the morrow. Hans Sachs, hearing the tinkling of the lute, peeps out, and just as Beckmesser begins to sing Sachs breaks out into a jolly folk song.

SACHS:
Tooral looral!
Tiddy fol de rol!
Oho! Tralala! Oho!

Beckmesser is greatly annoyed and says Sachs must be drunk. After a long altercation with the cobbler, Beckmesser finally starts his song, but as Sachs continues to hammer on his shoe at each mistake or wrong accent, Beckmesser gets badly mixed, and delivers himself of this doggerel:

BECKMESSER:
I see the dawning daylight,
With great pleasure I go;
For now my heart takes a right
Courage both fresh and new.
I do not think of dying,
Rather of trying
A young maiden to win.
Oh, wherefore doth the weather
Then to-day so excel?
I to all say together

'Tis because a damsel
By her loved father,
At his wish rather,
To be wed doth go in.
The bold man who
Would come and view,
May see the maiden there so true,
On whom my hopes I firmly glue,
Therefore is the sky so bright blue,
As I said to begin.
The neighbors now begin to put their heads out the windows and inquire who is bawling there so late. Magdalena opens Eva’s window and signals to Beckmesser to go away; but David, thinking she is waving her hand at the marker, becomes jealous and attacks Beckmesser. The noise brings everyone into the street, and the curtain falls on something resembling a riot.

Act III opens in Sachs’ workshop. Walter, who had spent the night with Sachs, comes in and tells the cobbler of a wonderful melody which had come to him in a dream. They write it down and leave it on the table. Walter goes out and Beckmesser enters, sees the song, and questions Sachs about it. Sachs makes him believe it is his own and offers to give it to him, having conceived a plan to force the Mastersingers to consent to the appearance of Walter. Beckmesser is overjoyed and runs out to learn the song. Eva enters and gets a shoe fitted, and then occurs the great scene in which the famous quintet is sung. The young girl, who has just had fully revealed to her the noble character of Hans Sachs, turns to the good shoemaker, and with a grateful heart sings—

Eva:
Through thee life’s treasure
I control,
Through thee I measure
First my soul,
And were my choice but free,
’Tis you would please my eyes;
My husband you should be;
None else should win the prize!

Sachs then alludes to the fate of King Mark in Tristan, who married Isolde only to find too late that she loved another, and says:

Sachs:
To find the man before too late
I sought, or else that had been my fate!
He calls in Magdalena and David, who are dressed for the festival, and tells them he wishes them for witnesses for a christening. All look amazed, and Sachs explains that he wishes to christen Sir Walter's Master Song. As no apprentice can be a witness, Sachs surprises David by creating him a journeyman. Eva then commences the Quintette of Baptism with a short solo, beginning:

In the rapture of her new-found love she sings of the Prize Song:

EVA:
In this sweet and holy strain
Lies a secret hidden;
Still all the welcome pain
That fills my heart unbidden;
Magdalena and David (bewildered):
Am I awake or dreaming still?
Walter (tenderly to Eva):
Is it still the morning dream?
Dare I try to read its theme?
But this strain, tho' whispered here,
Will greet thine ear loud and clear,
'Mid the Master's guild shall rise,
There to win the highest prize!
Hans Sachs (with deep emotion):
To the maid I fain would sing
Of my secret hidden;
But to tell my heart's sweet pain,
Now it is forbidden!

SCENE II—A Field on the Shores of the River Pegnitz

The scene suddenly changes to an open meadow on the banks of the Pegnitz, where the contest is to be held. The spectacle is a brilliant one, with gaily decorated boats discharging the various Guilds, with the wives and families of the members. It is in this scene that the famous March of the Guilds is played. A fine rendition of this number has been given by Sousa's Band.

March of the Guilds
By Sousa's Band

35044 12-inch, $1.25

The Mastersingers now arrange their procession and march to take their places on the platform.

When all are assembled, Sachs rises, and in a noble address states the terms of the contest.

A Master, noble, rich and wise,
Will prove you this with pleasure:
His only child, the highest prize
With all his wealth and treasure,
He offers as inducement strong
To him who in the art of song
Before the people here
As victor shall appear,
This crown's of worth infinite,
And ne'er in recent days or olden,
By any hand so highly holden,
As by this maiden tender:
Good fortune may it lend her!
(Great stir among all present. Sachs goes up to Pogner, who presses his hand, deeply moved.)
Beckmesser, who is in an awful state with his efforts to commit Walter's song to memory, wipes his heated brow and begins. He confuses his old melody with the new one, loses his place, mixes his lines, and is forced by the laughter of the people to stop. In a towering rage he accuses Sachs of plotting his defeat, then flings down the song and rushes off. Sachs calmly picks up the scroll and remarks that the song is a very fine one, but that it must be rendered properly. The Mastersingers accuse him of joking, but he declares:

SACHS: I tell you, sirs, the work is fine;
But it is easy to divine
That Beckmesser has sung it wrong.
I swear, though, you will like the song
When someone rehearses
The rightful tune and verses.
And he who does will thus make known
That he composed them, clearly;
A Master's name, too, he should own
Were he but judged sincerely.
I am accused and must defend:
A witness let me bid attend!
Is there one here who knows I'm right,
Let him appear before our sight.

(Walter advances amid a general stir.)

THE MASTERS: Ah, Sachs! You're very sly indeed!—
But you may for this once proceed.
SACHS: It shows our rules are of excellence rare
If now and then exceptions they'll bear.
PEOPLE: A noble witness, proud and bold!
Methinks he should some good unfold.
SACHS: Masters and people all agree
To give my witness liberty,
Sir Walter von Stolzing, sing the song!
You, Masters, see if he goes wrong.

The Mastersingers agree that Walter may attempt the air, and he mounts the platform and sings the noble Prize Song.

Preislied (Prize Song)

WALTER (who has ascended to the platform with firm and proud steps):
Morning was gleaming with roseate light,
The air was filled
With scent distilled
Where, beauty-beaming,
Past all dreaming,
A garden did invite.
(The Masters here, absorbed, let fall the scroll they are watching to prove that Walter knows the song; he notices without seeming to do so, and now proceeds in a freer style.)

Wherein, beneath a wondrous tree
With fruit superbly laden,
In blissful love-dream I could see
The rare and tender maiden,
Whose charms beyond all price,
Entranced my heart—
Eva, in Paradise!

THE PEOPLE (softly to one another):
That is quite different! Who would surmise
That so much in performance lies?

WALTER:
Evening fell and night closed around;
By rugged way
My feet did stray
Towards a mountain,
Where a fountain
Enslaved me with its sound;
And there beneath a laurel tree,
With starlight glinting under,
In waking vision greeted me
A sweet and solemn wonder;
She dropped on me the fountain's dews,
That woman fair—
Parnassus's glorious Muse.

(With great exaltation):
Thrice happy day,
To which my poet's trance gave place!
That Paradise of which I dreamed,
In radiance before my face
Glorified lay.

To point the path the booklet streamed:

Several vocal and instrumental renditions of this lovely song are given. Mr. Murphy gives a splendid rendition in German, Mr. Williams sings it beautifully in the purest of English, while the instrumental performances by Sousa and Sorlin are most pleasing. Elman gives the arrangement by Wilhelmj of the Preislied, which has often been given in America, and plays it with a marvelous softness and purity of tone which will delight every listener.

Eva, who has listened with rapt attention, now advances to the edge of the platform and places on the head of Walter, who kneels on the steps, a wreath of myrtle and laurel, then leads him to her father, before whom they both kneel. Pogner extends his hands in benediction over them.

Walter and Eva lean against Sachs, one on each side, while Pogner sinks on his knee before him as if in homage. The Mastersingers point to Sachs, with outstretched hands, as to their chief, while the 'prentices clap hands and shout and the people wave hats and kerchiefs in enthusiasm.

The overture is full of the grace and delicacy for which Thomas’ music is celebrated, and contains the principal themes, notably Filina’s dashing “Polonaise.” The Pryor record is a fine example of the perfection attained in the playing of this organization. Every detail of the wonderful instrumentation which Thomas has written, and especially the passages for the wood-wind, is clearly brought out. A fine orchestral rendition by the La Scala players, in two parts, is also offered.

ACT I

SCENE—Courtyard of a German Inn

Mignon, a daughter of noble parents, was stolen when a child by gypsies, and as the act opens is a girl of seventeen, forced to dance in the public streets by the brutal Giarne, chief of the gypsy band.

The first scene shows the courtyard of a German inn, where townspeople and travelers are drinking. After the vigorous opening chorus, sung here by the La Scala forces, Lothario, a wandering minstrel, enters and sings, accompanying himself on his harp.

The minstrel is in reality Mignon’s father, whose mind was affected by his daughter’s abduction, and he wanders about seeking her.

LOTHARIO: A lonely wanderer am I! I stray from door to door,
As fate doth guide, or as the storm doth hurry me,
Far, far I’ll roam in search of her!

The gypsy band appears and Mignon is ordered to dance by Giarno, who threatens her with his stick when she wearily refuses. Wilhelm, a young student, protects her from the gypsy and questions her about her parents. She remembers but little, but tells him of her impression of home in this lovely Connais-tu le pays, full of tender beauty.

Five records of this beautiful air, in French, German and Italian, by five famous singers, ranging in price from $1.25 to $3.00, are listed here for a choice.

This air is one of the happiest inspirations of the composer. It is said that much of its charm comes from Thomas' intimate study of Scheffer's painting, "Mignon." At any rate he has caught the inner sense of Goethe's poem and has expressed it in exquisite tones. The opening passage:

gives us an idea of the melody, one of the most beautiful in the entire range of opera. The passionate longing of the orphan child for her childhood home is effectively expressed in this superb climax:

in which Mignon seems to pour forth her whole heart in a flood of emotion. The words are most beautiful ones.

Knowest Thou the Land?

Knowest thou yonder land where the orange grows,
Where the fruit is of gold, and so fair the rose?
Where the breeze gently wafts the song of birds,
Where the season round is mild as lover's words?
Where so calm and so soft, like Heaven's blessing true,
Spring eternally reigns, with the skies ever blue?
Alas, why afar am I straying, why ever linger here?
'Tis there! 'Tis there! my heart's love obeying,
'Twere bliss to live and die!
'Tis there my heart's love obeying,
I'd live, I would die!

Wilhelm, full of pity for the helpless girl, offers Giarno a sum of money to release her, and goes into the inn to complete the bargain. Lohanno comes to Mignon to bid her farewell, saying he must go south, following the swallows. Then occurs the beautiful "Swallow Duet," one of the gems of the opera.

Les hirondelles (Song of the Swallows)

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano: Marcel Journet, Bass (In French) 89038 12-inch, $4.00

*Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED MIGNON RECORDS, page 285.
MIGNON: (accompanying herself on the harp):
Oh swallows gay and blithe,
Ye joy of every land,
Unfold your gentle wings,
Speed quickly on your way!

LOTHARIO:
The harp, touched by her gentle hand
A melancholy sound mysteriously gives forth.

MIGNON:
Ye blithe and gentle swallows,
Unfold your nimble wings;
Quick, hasten to the land
Where winter never reigns.
Thrice happy bird, thrice happy bird,
Who first the wished-for good
Right joyously shall reach.

The effectiveness of Thomas' exquisite score depends very much on the perfection of its rendering; and this is especially true of the first act music—the Connais-tu, Lothario’s song, and this serene and beautiful duet, given so charmingly here.

Very little need be said about Miss Farrar's familiar impersonation of Mignon. It is always delightful, both to eye and ear. Journet sings the music of Lothario with dignity and beauty of voice; while Farrar’s every note is exquisite in its loveliness.

Wilhelm is now invited to go to the Castle of Prince Tieffenbach with the troupe of players, headed by the lovely Filina, who has observed the handsome student with an appreciative eye. He hesitates, thinking of Mignon, but she begs to be allowed to accompany him disguised as a servant.

MIGNON:
Stranger! thou didst purchase me—
Dispose of me, henceforth, e’en as thou wilt.

WILHELM:
In this very town, to which Fate hath brought thee,
There lives an aged relative of mine,
Who, to her home, will gladly welcome thee.

MIGNON:
Must I then part from thee?

WILHELM:
My child, thou canst not dwell with me;
Ill could I the part perform,
Of father!

MIGNON:
Could I not disguise myself,
And as thy servant, travel with thee?

WILHELM (taking her hands):
And what couldst thou do then?

MIGNON:
With love and gratitude,
My heart is filled.
To follow thee, O master mine,
Indeed were happiness to me!

WILHELM:
Wouldst thou anew thy liberty renounce,
And be a slave once more?

MIGNON (sadly):
Well since my prayers thou wilt not hear,
(pointing to Lothario, who approaches)
I'll e'en depart with him!

LOTHARIO (rushing to Mignon, and encircling her with his arms):
Come! my footsteps follow;
Through by-paths lone and wild!
(Attempts to draw Mignon with him.)

Wilhelm finally yields a reluctant consent, not knowing what else to do, and the act ends with the departure of the players.
ACT II

SCENE I—A Boudoir in Tieffenbach Castle

Act II represents a room in the Prince's castle. Filina is seated in front of her toilet table, musing on the handsome Wilhelm, who has made a deep impression on her somewhat volatile affections. Wilhelm enters with Mignon, who meets with a cool reception from the gay actress. Wilhelm makes love to Filina while Mignon watches them with a sad heart, as she has learned to love her new master. When left alone, she tries by the aid of Filina's rouge to make her complexion as beautiful as that of the actress who has dazzled her master, and, noting the effect in the glass, sings a gay song with an odd refrain, called by the composer "Styrienne."

Styrienne, "Je connais" (I Know a Poor Maiden)

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano

Miss Farrar has given us a charming rendition of this Mignon air, which (next to the well-known Connais-tu) is the favorite one in the opera.

MIGNON:
Well I know a poor young child,
A sad young child of Bohemia,
On whose pale sunken cheeks joy ne'er rested,
Ah! ah! ah! ah! what a dull story!
I cannot leave the glass,
So much improved I'm seeming,
Am I the same, or dreaming?
Ah! la la.
(Looking in the glass):
Am I still Mignon?
Can it be Mignon that I see?
One fine day, the child in play,
A stratagem boldly trying,
To the master's good pleasure applying,
Ah! ah! ah! what a foolish story!
I fain would turn away,
But so improved am seeming,
Am I the same, or dreaming?
Ah! Ah! la la
Am I still Mignon?
No! no! 'tis I no longer!
But then! 'tis not she either!
Some other secrets she must have her charms to heighten.

(Opens the door of the dressing room):
Is it not there she keeps her gayest dresses?
Yes! alas! were I Filina, would he love me as well?
What idle folly!
(From the Ditson score.
'Tis a demon now tempts me!
Copy't 1880.)

Miss Farrar sings this quaint and fascinating "Styrienne" with the child-like gaiety and charm which belong to it; and her voice is as pure and true as a flute when she reaches the high D at the end of the air.

Mignon now goes into the closet, and after Wilhelm has returned makes her appearance in one of Filina's dresses. He tells her in a beautiful air that he must leave her.

Addio, Mignon (Farewell, Mignon)

By M. Régis, Tenor
By Emilio Perea, Tenor (Piano acc.)

Mignon utters a cry of grief and begins to weep, while Wilhelm tenderly says:

WILHELM:
Farewell, Mignon, take heart!
Thy tears restrain!
In the bright years of youth no grief doth linger long.
Weep not, Mignon!
O'er thee just Heaven will watch with fost'ring care.
Oh, may'st thou dear native land once more regain!
May fortune on thy fate henceforth benignly smile!
It pains me much to leave thee: my stricken heart
With thy lone destiny will ever sympathize!
Farewell, Mignon, take heart!
Then dry thy tears.

Mignon refuses money which he offers her, and is about to bid him farewell when Filina enters, and seeing Mignon in one of her own dresses, eyes her with sarcastic amusement, which puts Mignon into a jealous rage and she rushes into the cabinet, tears off the borrowed finery and puts on her gypsy garments.

SCENE II—The Gardens of the Castle

The scene changes to the park of the castle. Mignon, in despair, attempts to throw herself into the lake, but is prevented by Lothario, who consoles her. In a fit of jealousy she wishes that fire would consume the castle in which Filina had won her master's affections. Lothario is puzzled by this and goes off muttering to himself.

The actors and guests now issue from the castle proclaiming the beauty and talent of Filina. In the flush of her triumph she sings the brilliant Polonese or polacca (French Polonaise), one of the most difficult and showy of all soprano airs.

Polonese, "Io son Titania" (I'm Fair Titania!)

By Giuseppina Huget, Soprano (In Italian) 35178 12-inch, 1.25

The Victor is able to offer three fine renditions of this popular number, headed by the superb Tetrazzini record, one of the most perfect in her list. Mlle. Korsoff, of the Opéra Comique, sings the air in French with much brilliancy, while an Italian record is furnished by that gifted Spanish prima donna, Mme. Huget.

Io son Titania
(Behold Titania!)

WITH jocund heart and happy mien,
I cheerily dance the hours away,
Like the bird that freely wings its flight.
Fairies dance around me,
Elfin sprites on nimble toe around me gaily dance.
For I'm fair Titania!
Both night and day, My attendants ever sing,
The achievements of the god of Love!
On the wave's white foam,
'Mid the twilight grey, 'mid hedges, 'mid flowers,
I blithely do dance!
Behold Titania, glad and gay!

Wilhelm now sees Mignon and is about to speak to her when Filina interposes and asks her to go to the castle on some errand. The young girl, glad to escape meeting Wilhelm, obeys, but has no sooner gone than the castle is discovered to be in flames, the half-witted Lothario having set fire to it after having heard Mignon's jealous wish.

Wilhelm rushes into the burning castle and soon reappears with the unconscious form of Mignon, while the curtain falls on a magnificent tableau.

ACT III
SCENE—Count Lothario's Castle in Italy

This act takes place in the castle of Lothario, to which the old man has instinctively returned with Mignon, followed by Wilhelm, who now realizes that he loves his youthful ward. The young girl is recovering from a dangerous illness, and as Lothario watches outside her sick room, he sings a beautiful lullaby or berceuse,

LOTHARLO:
I've soothed the throbbing of her aching heart,
And to her lips the smile I have restored.

Wilhelm takes Lothario's place as watchet, and tells of his new-found affection in this beautiful air, given here by M. Regis, of the Paris Opéra Comique.

Mignon now comes with feeble step on the balcony, and seeing Wilhelm, is much agitated. He endeavors to soothe her, but she insists that only Lothario loves her. Lothario now enters, and announces that he is the Count Lothario, having been restored to his right mind by the familiar scenes of his ancestral home. He shows them the jewels and prayer book of his lost daughter, and tells them her name was Sperata. Mignon starts at the name and murmurs:

Ah, that sweet name to my ear is familiar,
A memory of my childhood
It may be, that's gone forever!

She then begins to read from the book a little prayer, but soon drops the book and continues from memory, her hands clasped and her eyes raised to Heaven. Lothario is much agitated and when she has finished, recognizes her as his lost daughter. Father and daughter are reunited, while a blessing is bestowed on the young people by the happy Lothario.

Time and Place: The scene is laid in Japan; present time.
It is beginning to be recognized that the Gilbert and Sullivan operas are pure English classics—not in the sense of being dull—but because they are national, and possess those qualities which will cause them in the future to be valued equally with the Comedies of Shakespeare. The Mikado is undoubtedly the greatest of these, and curiously enough it was this opera which first anticipated the rise of Modern Japan, although the characters portrayed are by no means Japs, but ourselves—in a very thin disguise.

This charming travesty of Japan has been the greatest popular favorite of all comic operas since its original production in the eighties. The story is so generally known that a brief outline of the plot is all that is necessary here.

Nanki-Poo is in love with Yum-Yum, who is betrothed to her guardian, Ko-Ko, Lord High Executioner. Poo-Bah, “retailer of state secrets at a low figure,” tells Nanki-Poo of his sweetheart’s betrothal to another, but the young man secures an interview with Yum-Yum and confesses he is the Mikado’s son, disguised in the hope of escaping punishment for his refusal to marry Katisha. Ko-Ko receives a message from the Mikado, telling him he must see that some one in Titipu is beheaded within the month or he will lose his position, which message interferes with the Lord High Executioner’s matrimonial arrangements. Nanki-Poo agrees to sacrifice himself if he may marry Yum-Yum and have her with him during the intervening month. This is agreed to and the wedding plans are made.

At the opening of the second act Yum-Yum is preparing for the ceremony. While talking with Nanki-Poo she is interrupted by Ko-Ko, who tells her that according to the law, when a married man is executed his wife is burned alive. This news cools Yum-Yum’s ardor, but Nanki-Poo, to save her, swears that he will that day perform the Happy Dispatch or hari-kari. As this would be dangerous for Ko-Ko, he promises in alarm to swear falsely to the execution of Nanki-Poo.

The Mikado now arrives and Ko-Ko tells him the execution has taken place, but the Mikado, on learning who the victim is, flies into a rage and says he has beheaded the heir to the throne, and must himself suffer torture for his act. However, Nanki-Poo opportunely appears and Ko-Ko gains his pardon by marrying Katisha, while Yum-Yum and Nanki-Poo are happily united.
Two splendid records by the Victor opera forces are offered, containing no less than thirteen of the favorite numbers, admirably sung and grouped in a most attractive manner. The Lyric Quartet has given the dainty Brightly Dawns Our Wedding Day, one of the most beautiful examples of the Madrigale in existence.

Mireille, which came later than Faust in order of production, is an example of the more delicate art of Gounod, and the story of the faithfulness of the heroine for her peasant lover is reflected in the music with true Provençal warmth and color.

The librettist took for his subject the pastoral poem Mirèio, by the beloved poet of Provence, Frederic Mistral, and Gounod has given it a tuneful setting with much local color, including many folk-songs.
The first scene opens in a mulberry grove, where Mirella is teased by the village girls about her attachment for Vincent, the basket-maker. Tavena, the fortune-teller, warns the young girl that Ramon, Mirella’s father, will never consent to the union. Mirella meets Vincent and the warning of Tavena is soon forgotten. The lovers renew their pledges and agree to meet soon at the Chapel of the Virgin.

The young girl is also informed by the fortune-teller that Vincent has a rival, a wild herdsman, who has asked Mirella’s father for her hand and obtained his consent. When the herdsman appears, Mirella repulses him, declaring her irrevocable attachment for Vincent. She then starts on the long journey across the desert to meet her lover at the chapel, and on the way meets Tavena, who assures her that Vincent will be waiting for her. The journey proves almost too much for the young girl’s strength, and when she finally arrives at the chapel she is completely exhausted, and faints on the threshold. Vincent soon appears and ministers to his fainting love. Ramon, who has followed his daughter, soon appears, and moved to pity by her sad condition, gives his consent to the union of the lovers, and all ends happily.

This delightful Valse occurs in the first act, where Mirella fancifully appeals to the swallows to bring her tidings of her lover. Miss Abott’s lovely and flexible voice is shown to great advantage in this brilliant number.

Scene and Period: California, under the Spanish régime, 1820.

Victor Herbert's Natoma treats of one of the most romantic periods of American history, the scene being laid in California in the days of Spanish rule. The opera takes its title from its Indian heroine, and the characters comprise Indians, Spaniards and pioneer Americans. The story centres around Natoma, an Indian girl; Barbara, the lovely daughter of Don Francisco de la Guerra, a noble Spaniard of the old régime; and Lieut. Paul Merrill, of the U. S. Navy, who is loved by both Natoma and Barbara.

ACT I

SCENE—Hacienda of Don Francisco on the Island of Santa Cruz

At the opening of Act I Don Francisco is gazing over the waters of the Santa Barbara channel waiting the coming of his daughter Barbara, who is leaving the convent at the close of her school days. Alvarado, a hot-headed young Spaniard and Barbara's cousin, who is anxious to marry the young girl and thus gain control of the vast estates left her by her mother, is also anxiously waiting her arrival. Natoma has met Lieutenant Paul and there is already a bond of sympathy between the handsome Indian maiden and the young officer. The two are now seen approaching, the Indian girl innocently telling the young officer that her mistress, Barbara, is very beautiful. Suddenly realizing that Paul may forget her when he sees Barbara, she begs him to let her be his slave. When Barbara arrives and meets Paul it is a case of love at first sight, and later, when Alvarado urges his suit, the young girl haughtily refuses him. In a rage he plots with Castro, the half-breed, to carry Barbara off to the mountains the next day, when the celebrations in honor of her coming of age are at their height. This plot is overheard by Natoma, who is concealed in the arbor. All the guests take their departure, and Barbara, alone on the porch in the moonlight, declares her love for Paul. The young lieutenant appears and they sing an impassioned love duet. When a light is seen in the hacienda, the young girl, thinking it is her father, urges Paul to take his departure, and goes into the hacienda. As the curtain falls Natoma, who realizes that her mistress is now her rival, is seen seated alone in the window, gazing out into the night.

ACT II

SCENE—Plaza in Front of the Mission Church, Santa Barbara

In the dim light of early morning Natoma is singing her "song of fate," and as dawn begins to break the Spanish soldiers appear, the flag of Spain is raised, and trumpeters and drummers play the national salute. The vaqueros and rancheros arrive, singing of their life on the plains, while the dancing girls join in the revelry. Pico sings his stirring Vaquero's Song, which in performances of the opera always arouses great enthusiasm, and which is vigorously sung here by Mr. Cartwright, while the melodious chorus is splendidly rendered by the Opera forces.

Vaquero's Song

Don Francisco and his daughter appear on horseback, with Natoma walking by their side. The guests assemble, and after the Castilian custom, Don Francisco places on his daughter's brow a woof of royal lace, signifying that she succeeds to title and estate. Barbara sings a brilliant song of happiness, love and springtime, with an exquisite accompaniment, in which Mr. Herbert has woven the songs of birds, the rustling of leaves and the breezes of spring with marvelous skill. Mme. Gluck in this rendition quite surpasses anything she has yet done for the Victor, and pours out her vocal resources lavishly and with evident enjoyment.

Spring Song (I List the Trill of Golden Throat)

By Alma Gluck, Soprano (In English) 74274 12-inch, $1.50

The sailors from the U. S. S. Liberty appear, and with them is Lieutenant Paul, who extends his compliments on behalf of his commander. This address, one of the most inspiring numbers in the work, is given by Mr. McCormack in splendid style.

Paul's Address (No Country Can My Own Outvie)

By John McCormack, Tenor (In English) 74295 12-inch, $1.50

The Panuelo, or "dance of declaration," follows, in which each man places his hat on the head of the girl he loves. Barbara infuriates Alvarado by gaily tossing his hat into the crowd when he places it on her head, but before he can speak Castro appears and dares any one to dance with him the ancient Dagger Dance of California. Natomia accepts the challenge, and they dance to the wild and barbaric rhythm. This old dance is, like other characteristic numbers in the opera, based on Indian melodies which Mr. Herbert has been collecting for some years, and its performance for the Victor, which was made under the composer's direction, is a very fine one.

Dagger Dance

By Victor Herbert's Orchestra

As the scene becomes more absorbing, Alvarado and Pico slip close to Barbara, and, throwing a serape over her head, attempt to carry her off. Natomia, who has been watching Alvarado, rushes wildly past Castro and plunges her dagger into the Spaniard, who falls lifeless. The crowd rushes at Natomia to avenge the death of Alvarado and Paul draws his sword to protect her. Suddenly the Mission door opens, and Father Peralta slowly advances, holding aloft the cross. The people kneel, and the Indian girl, dropping her dagger, approaches the priest and falls at his feet. They go into the church as the curtain falls.

ACT III

SCENE—Interior of the Mission Church

As the curtain rises Natomia is kneeling on the steps of the altar, crooning an Indian cradle song. She invokes the Great Spirit to give her strength to join her people, and seek vengeance for her misfortunes. The old priest seeks to calm her, and finally strikes the one responsive chord in her heart—her love for her mistress. He recalls to her mind her happy childhood days with Barbara, and she realizes that she can yet make her mistress happy, and that fate has decreed the union between Natomia and Paul.

The church now fills with the people, who respond to the words of Father Peralta. Paul and Barbara sit near the altar in opposite pews, and at a sign from the priest the Indian girl walks down the aisle to where they are seated. Under her spell they kneel, facing the altar, and Natomia, lifting the amulet she wears around her neck, bestows it as a blessing on her beloved mistress. Turning, she walks toward the convent garden, and as the priest in the pulpit raises his hands in benediction, the doors of the cloister close upon her.

Scene and Period: The scene is laid in Gaul, shortly after the Roman conquest.

Norma, although an opera of the old school and seldom performed nowadays, contains some of the loveliest of the writings of Bellini. Its beauties are of the old-fashioned kind which our forefathers delighted in, and which are an occasional welcome relief from the abundance of “music dramas” with which we are surrounded of late. Especially charming is the spirited overture, always a favorite on band programs.

The briskness and sparkle of this fine overture and its inspiring climax are well pres-served in Mr. Pryor’s vigorous rendering, and in the splendidly played Victor Band record, made under Mr. Rogers’ direction.

The scene is laid among the Druids at the time of the Roman invasion. Norma, the High Priestess, though sworn to bring about the expulsion of Rome, is secretly married to a Roman proconsul, Pollione, by whom she has two children. She rebukes the Druids for wishing to declare war, and after the ceremony of cutting the mistletoe, she invokes peace from the moon in the exquisite prayer, Casta Diva.

This lovely air still holds a high place in popular favor, its beauty and tenderness making it well worthy of a place among modern airs. As evidence of the great popularity of this number, three famous prima donnas have selected it for their Victor lists.

Dearest Norma, before thee kneeling,
View these darlings, thy precious treasures;
Let that sunbeam, a mother’s feeling,
Break the night around thy soul.

Norma:
Wouldst win that soul, by this entreaty
Back to earth’s delusive pleasures,
From the phantoms, far more fleeting,
Which in death’s deep ocean-shoal?

Pollione refuses to return to Norma and attempts to seize Adalgisa against her will. Norma foils this attempt and reasons with him, telling him he must give up his guilty love or die. This is expressed in a dramatic duet.

Pollione still refuses, and Norma strikes the sacred shield to summon the Druids. She declares war on Rome and denounces Pollione, but offers to save his life if he will leave the country. He refuses, and she is about to put him to death, when love overcomes justice and the Priestess denounces herself to save Pollione. Norma’s noble sacrifice causes his love to return and they ascend the funeral pyre together. As the flames mount about them they are declared purified of all sin.

First Paris production, 1774, when the rôle of Orpheus was transposed for high tenor. First London production at Covent Garden, June 26, 1770. Other revivals were during the Winter Garden season of 1863; in 1885 (in German), by the Metropolitan Opera under Walter Damrosch; the English production in 1886 by the National Opera Company; the Abbey revival in Italian in 1892; and the Metropolitan production of 1910, with Homer, Gadska and Gluck.

Shepherds and Shepherdesses, Furies and Demons, Heroes and Heroines in Hades.

This opera, which has been called “Gluck’s incomparable masterpiece,” and of which the great Fétis wrote, “it is one of the most beautiful productions of genius,” may be properly termed a purely classical music drama. The music is exquisite in its delicacy and Fatal divinita (Gods of Fate)
By Louise Homer, Contralto

Orpheus journeys to the Gates of Erebus, and so softens the hearts of the Demon guards by his grief and his exquisite playing of his lyre, that he is permitted to enter. He finds Euridice, and without looking at her, takes her by the hand and bids her follow him. She obeys, but failing to understand his averted gaz, upbraids him for his apparent coldness and asks that he shall look at her.

Su e con me vieni cara (On My Faith Relying)
By Johanna Gadski, Soprano; Louise Homer, Contralto

Orpheus, knowing that to cast a single look at his loved one means death to her, keeps his face averted. The dialogue portrays the emotions of the characters, while Gluck's music suggests the present perplexity and the tragedy which is to follow.

Unable to endure longer the reproaches of his wife, he clasps her in his arms, only to see her sink down lifeless.

Ach, Ich habe sie verloren (I Have Lost My Euridice)

Che faro senza Euridice (I Have Lost My Euridice)
By Louise Homer

"Malheureux! qu'ai-je fait? Et dans quel précipice m'a plongé mon funeste amour!" ("Wretched one, what have I done! Into what gulf has my fatal love cast me?") cries the hapless youth, and breaks into his lovely and pathetic lamentation.
"I have lost my Eurydice
My misfortune is without its like.
Cruel fate! I shall die of my sorrow.
Eurydice, Eurydice, answer me!

It is your faithful husband.
Hear my voice, which calls you.
Silence of death! vain hope!
What suffering, what torment, wrings my heart!"

Of the many beautiful numbers in Gluck’s drama this lovely aria of mourning (best known by the Italian title Che faro senza Euridice) is the most familiar. Two renditions, in German and Italian, by two famous exponents of the part of Orpheus, are offered for the choice of opera lovers.

The grief-stricken poet is about to take his own life when the goddess again appears and arrests his arm.

After having given the world his splendid Aida, Verdi rested on his laurels and was silent for sixteen years; then, at the age of seventy-four, he suddenly astonished the world with his magnificent Otello, a masterly music-drama which alone would suffice to make him famous.

The change from the Verdi of 1853 and Il Trovatore, to the Verdi of 1887 and Otello, is amazing. Each opera produced by him shows a steady advance, until something approximating perfection is reached in Otello, the writing of which was an astonishing feat for a man of nearly eighty years of age.

The text, by that accomplished scholar and master librettist, Boito, follows closely the tragedy of Shakespeare.

ACT I

SCENE—Otello’s Castle in Cyprus.  A Storm is Raging and the Angry Sea is visible in the Background

Venetians, soldiers, including Iago, Roderigo and Cassio, are awaiting the return of Otello.  His vessel arrives safely, and amid much rejoicing the Moor announces that the war is over, the enemy’s ships having all been sunk. He goes into the castle, and Iago and Roderigo plan the conspiracy against Cassio and Otello, by which Roderigo hopes to secure Desdemona for himself and Iago to be revenged on Otello. They join the soldiers and try to induce Cassio to drink. He refuses, but when Iago toasts Desdemona, he is compelled to join. Iago sings the rousing Brindisi:

during which he continues to fill Cassio’s glass. When the latter is quite drunk they pick a quarrel with him, and he draws his sword, wounding Montano, while Iago and Cassio rouse a cry of “riot,” which brings Otello from the castle. He disgraces Cassio and orders all to disperse, remaining alone with Desdemona for a long love scene. Part of this scene has been recorded here by Mme. Lotti and M. Conti, of Milan. The curtain falls as husband and wife go slowly into the castle.

ACT II

SCENE — A Room in the Castle

The crafty Iago is advising Cassio how to regain the favor of Otello, telling him that he must induce Desdemona to intercede for him. Cassio eagerly goes in search of Desdemona, while Iago gazes after him, satisfied with the progress of his schemes, and then sings the superb Credo.

By Pasquale Amato, Baritone (In Italian) 88328 12-inch, $3.00
By Ernesto Badini, Baritone (In Italian) *55023 12-inch, 1.50

This is a free adaptation of Iago’s last speech with Cassio in Shakespeare, Act II. In his setting Verdi has expressed fully the character of the perfidious Iago: cynical, vain, weak and subtle. He declares that he was fashioned by a cruel God who intended him for evil, and that he cares naught for the consequences, as after death there is nothing.

The wonderful rendition of this great number by Amato will be pronounced one of the most striking in his list, while a splendid lower-priced record by Badini is also offered.

Iago sees Desdemona approach and Cassio greet her, and as soon as the young officer is earnestly pleading with her to intercede for him, Iago runs in search of Otello, and sows the first seeds of jealousy in the heart of the Moor, bidding him watch his wife well. Otello, much troubled, seeks Desdemona and questions her. She begins to intercede for Cassio, but the Moor repulses her, and when she would wipe his perspiring brow, roughly throws down the handkerchief, which is picked up by Iago.

Left alone with Iago, Otello gives way to despair, and expresses his feelings in the bitter Ora e per sempre.

By Enrico Caruso 87071 10-inch, 2.00
By Nicola Zerola 64168 10-inch, 1.00

Now finally convinced that Desdemona is deceiving him, he bids farewell to peace of mind, ambition and the glory of conquest.

Caruso delivers the number magnificently, being especially effective in the closing passage. Other renditions are the famous one by Tamagno, and a popular-priced record by Zerola.

Iago further says that he has seen Desdemona’s handkerchief in Cassio’s room, at which news Otello is beside himself with rage. The act closes with the great scene in which Iago offers to help Otello secure his revenge, and they swear an awful oath never to pause until the guilty shall be punished.

ACT III
SCENE—The Great Hall of the Castle
Otello now seeks Desdemona and contrives an excuse to borrow her handkerchief. She offers it, but he says it is not the one, and asks for the one he had given her, with a peculiar pattern. She says it is in her room and offers to bring it, but he at once denounces her, and sends her away astonished and grieved at the sudden jealousy which she cannot understand. He remains looking after her in the deepest dejection, then sings his sorrowful soliloquy, Dio mi potevi.

Iago now tells Otello how he had slept in Cassio's room lately and had heard Cassio talking in his sleep, bemoaning the fate which had robbed him of Desdemona and given her to the Moor.

Cassio enters, and Iago, bidding Otello watch behind a pillar, goes to the young officer, and with fiendish ingenuity induces him to talk of his sweetheart Bianca. Otello, listening, thinks that it is of Desdemona that Cassio speaks, as Cassio produces the fatal handkerchief, telling Iago he had found it in his room, and wondering to whom it can belong. Otello, seeing the handkerchief and not hearing the conversation, has no further doubt of Desdemona's guilt, and when Cassio departs he asks Iago how best can he murder them both. The villain suggests that Desdemona be strangled in her bed, and says he will himself kill Cassio.

In a highly dramatic duet, given here by Barrera and Badini, they swear a solemn oath of vengeance.

SCOTTI, WICKHAM, ALDA AND SLEZAK IN OTELLO

ACT IV

SCENE—Desdemona's Bedroom

The heartbroken Desdemona is preparing to retire, assisted by her maid, Emilia. She tells Emilia that an old song of her childhood keeps coming into her mind. Then she sings the sad and beautiful Willow Song. This is an old melody which has been definitely traced to the sixteenth century, and which is supposed to be much older.

Salce, salce (Willow Song)
By Nellie Melba, Soprano

(In Italian) 88148 12-inch, $3.00

This plaintive song seems like the lamentation of a broken heart, its last words being prophetic of the coming tragedy.
The faithful Emilia leaves her, and she kneels before the image of the Madonna and sings the noble Ave, one of the most inspired portions of the wonderful fourth act.

The “Ave Maria” is introduced by a characteristic monotone for the voice, accompanied by some organ-like harmonies which steal in with exquisite effect from the strings of the orchestra.

The portrayal of the mingled apprehension and resignation of Desdemona in this scene through the medium of the voice is worthy to rank with Melba’s most celebrated operatic creations—her Marguerita—her Juliet—her Mimi. The purity and youthfulness of the feeling imparted, apart from the freshness and delicate perfection of the tones themselves is amazing, filling the mind with wonder at the perpetual miracle of the singer’s perfect art. Mme. Alda, whose Desdemona has been one of the finest of her impersonations at the Metropolitan, sings the number beautifully.

At the close of the air Desdemona remains kneeling and prays in broken accents, her voice being almost inaudible.

Otello enters and rushes toward the bed, but stops and gazes at his sleeping wife a long time, then approaches and kisses her. She wakes and speaks his name. He accuses her again of an intrigue with Cassio, but she swears that it is false. He disregards her cries for mercy and strangles her. Emilia knocks at the door and is admitted by Otello, who hardly realizes what he has done. Seeing Desdemona lifeless, she accuses him of the crime and calls loudly for help. All rush in and Emilia, seeing Iago, denounces him as the author of the plot, and tells Otello that Desdemona was innocent. The Moor is torn with remorse, and tenderly gazing on his dead wife, sings his last air.

Ruggiero Leoncavallo was born at Naples, March 8, 1858, and was the son of a magistrate, the Chevalier Vincont, president of the tribunal of Potenza. His mother was a daughter of the celebrated artist, Raffaele d’Auria, famous for his decorations in the royal palace at Naples. He took up the pianoforte at an early age with Simonetti, a well-known teacher of Naples, and entered the Neapolitan Conservatorio, where he studied under Cesi, Ruta and Rossi. At sixteen he made a concert tour as a pianist with some success. Leaving the Conservatoire at eighteen he promptly showed his leaning toward operatic composition by beginning to write an opera, the libretto based on de Vigny’s well-known drama, Chatterton. Finding an impresario, the production of this opera was promised, but at the last moment he was deserted by his manager and the young composer was reduced to poverty. He did not despair, however, and abandoning for a time his operatic pretensions, set to work at anything which would give him a living. He gave lessons and played accompaniments at café concerts, finally becoming a concert pianist, the latter occupation taking him to many countries—England, France, Holland, Germany and Egypt. Returning to Italy after several years of these wanderings, he proved that he had not been idle by submitting to the house of Ricordi the first part of a tremendous trilogy based on the subject of the Renaissance in Italy.

This monumental work he entitled Crepusculum (Twilight), and the three parts were called: I—Medici; II—Girolamo Savonarola; III—Cezare Borgia. This Ricordi accepted, agreeing to produce the first part, and Leoncavallo spent a year in its completion. Three years passed by and the production was not made. In despair he went to the rival firm of Sonzogno, which encouraged him to write the opera which was to make him famous. The young composer went to work and in the space of five months completed his opera, basing the plot on an actual occurrence in the court where his father was presiding as judge.

The production of Pagliacci was made on May 21, 1892, at the Teatro dal Verme, Milan. Its success was overwhelming, and the name of Leoncavallo was heard throughout the world. His fame led to the production, in 1893, of the first section of the great trilogy, Medici; but it was not well received. Other operas by Leoncavallo which have been produced with more or less success are: Chatterton (produced 1896); Bohème (1897); Zaza (1900); and finally Roland, written at the request of the German Emperor (1904). He has written also a symphonic poem, Serafita; a ballet (La Vita d’una Marionetta) and several comic operas.

But it is Pagliacci which will keep the name of Leoncavallo remembered. Its masterfully constructed libretto; its compelling and moving story; the orchestration, written with extraordinary skill; and finally, its moving and intensely dramatic plot, which always holds an audience in rapt attention.

It is indeed a matter for congratulation that the Victor is able to offer such a fine production of this master work.
ANNOUNCEMENT

The Victor Company takes pleasure in announcing Leoncavallo’s famous two-act musical drama, recorded especially for the Victor under the personal direction of the composer. The records in the series were made in the presence of Signor Leoncavallo, and the musics conducted by him, a feature which should make this collection ever valuable and unique. Any question arising in future concerning the composer’s intentions in regard to the opera may be decided by reference to this performance as he himself conducted it. This advantage would have been priceless with regard to many well-known operas of the past, as it would have settled many controversies. But now, by means of the Victor, the composer’s ideas may be imperishably recorded.

The artists selected by Signor Leoncavallo to interpret his great work are well known and most competent ones. Mme. Huget, one of Italy’s most beloved prima donne, has a voice of ample range and power, and sings the music of Nedda most beautifully. Cigada’s Tonio is a remarkable performance, the richness and beauty of his voice being especially noticeable in the Prologue and the duet with Nedda. As Canio a choice of tenors is offered, the more delicate voice of Barbaini being contrasted with the splendid fire and intensity of Paoli’s singing. Badini as Silvio is fully adequate, while the smaller parts are well filled. Nothing need be said about the orchestra and chorus of La Scala, as their reputation is world wide.

Leoncavallo’s beautiful opera is admirably suited for reproduction on the Victor, and while listening to the singing of the artists who have rendered these dramatic scenes, no great imagination is required to picture the various situations.

In addition to the La Scala series, which was made under the composer’s direction, many other Pagliacci records are listed in their proper places.

THE ARGUMENT

During the orchestral introduction Tonio, in his clown costume, suddenly appears in front of the curtain and begs permission to revive the ancient Greek prologue. He then comes forward as Prologue and explains that the subject of the play is taken from real life; reminds the audience that actors are but men, with passions like their own, and that the author has endeavored to express the real feelings and sentiments of the characters he will introduce. He then orders up the curtain.

The first act shows the entrance to an Italian village. Canio and his troupe of strolling players, or pagliacci, having paraded through the village, return to their traveling theater, followed by a noisy crowd of villagers. Canio announces a performance for that evening at seven, then goes with Peppe into the tavern. Tonio, the clown, remains behind ostensibly to care for the donkey, but takes advantage of his master’s absence to make love to Nedda, Canio’s wife. She repulses him scornfully, striking him with her whip, and he swears to be revenged. Silvio, a rich young villager, in love with Nedda, now joins her and begs her to fly with him. She refuses, but admits that she loves him, her confession being overheard by Tonio, who hurries in search of his master. Canio returns too late to see Silvio, but hears Nedda’s parting words, “Forever I am thine!” Mad with jealousy, he demands the lover’s name, and when Nedda refuses, tries to kill her, but is restrained by the others. Nedda goes to dress and Canio is in despair at the thought of being obliged to play while his heart is breaking.

Act II: The curtain rises on the same scene and the play is about to begin. This prove the usual farce in which the Clown makes love to Columbine during the absence of her husband, Punchinello, but is laughed at and resigns his pretensions, finally consenting to act as a lookout while Columbine and her accepted lover, Harlequin, dine together.

Strangely enough, this conventional farce is very like the situation in the real lives of the players, and when Punchinello (Canio) arrives and surprises the lovers, as the play demands, he loses his head when he hears Columbine repeat in the farce the very words he overheard her say to her real lover earlier in the day. Mad with rage, he again demands her lover’s name. Nedda tries to save the situation by continuing the play, while the audience is delighted by such realistic acting until the intensity of Canio’s passion begins to terrify them. The other players endeavor to silence him, but in vain. Finally, stung by his taunts, Nedda defies him and is stabbed, Canio hoping that in her death agony she will reveal the name of her lover. She falls, calling upon Silvio, who rushes from the crowd only to receive in turn the dagger of the outraged husband. As Canio is disarmed by the peasants he cries as if in a dream, “La commedia e finita”—(The comedy is ended).

THE PROLOGUE

Leoncavallo chose to introduce his characters in a novel manner, and wrote this number in the midst of the orchestral prelude, when Tonio comes forward, like the prologue of ancient Greek tragedy, and explains that the subject of the play is taken from real life, and that the composer has devoted himself to expressing the sentiment, good or bad, but always human, of the characters he introduces.

The first part of the Prologue is in itself a miniature overture, containing the three representative themes associated with the main events of the drama to be unfolded.

The first is the motive which always accompanies the appearance of the players or pagliacci:

The second theme represents Canio’s jealousy and is a sombre strain suggestive of revenge:

The third represents the guilty love of Nedda and Silvio: and appears frequently throughout the opera, not only in the love duet, but in the last act, when Nedda refuses to betray her lover even with death awaiting her.

The presentation of these themes is followed by the appearance of Tonio, the clown, who peeps through the curtain and says:

Ladies and gentlemen!
Pardon me if alone I appear,
I am the Prologue!

He then comes in front of the curtain and explains the author’s purpose, which is to present a drama from real life, showing that the actors have genuine tragedies as well as mimic ones.

Our author loves the custom of a prologue to his story,
And as he would revive for you the ancient glory,
He sends me to speak before ye!
But not to prate, as once of old,
That the tears of the actor are false, unreal,
That his sighs and the pain that is told,
He has no heart to feel!
No! our author to-night a chapter will borrow
From life with its laughter and sorrow!
Is not the actor a man with a heart like you?
So ’tis for men that our author has written,
And the story he tells you is true!

* Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED PAGLIACCI RECORDS, page 318.
He then goes on to speak of the author's inspiration, and says:

A song of tender mem'ries
Deep in his list'ning heart one day was ringing;
And then with a trembling hand he wrote it,
And he marked the time with sighs and tears.
Come, then;
Here on the stage you shall behold us in human fashion,
And see the sad fruits of love and passion.
Hearts that weep and languish, cries of rage and anguish,
And bitter laughter!

The beautiful andante which follows is the most admired portion of the aria, and is indeed a noble strain.

Ah, think then, sweet people, when ye look on us,
Clad in our motley and tinsel,
For ours are human hearts, beating with passion,
We are but men like you, for gladness or sorrow,
'Tis the same broad Heaven above us,
The same wide, lonely world before us!
Will ye hear, then, the story,
As it unfolds itself surely and certain!
Come, then! Ring up the curtain!

The curtain now rises, as the pagliacci motive reappears in the orchestra.

Opening Chorus—"Son qua!" (They're Here!)
By La Scala Chorus (Double-faced—See page 318) (In Italian) 16814 10-inch, $0.75

The first scene, representing the edge of a small village in Calabria, is now revealed to the audience. The people are engaged in celebrating the Feast of the Assumption, and among the attractions offered to the crowds who have flocked to the village is the troupe of strolling players headed by Canio. These wandering mountebanks are common in the rural districts of Italy and are known as pagliacci. They take with them a small tent (usually carried in a cart drawn by a donkey), which they set up in the market places of the small villages, or anywhere that they see a prospect for the earning of a modest living.

A number of the townspeople have assembled in front of the little theatre and are awaiting the return of the clowns, who have been parading through the village to announce their arrival, as is the custom. As the curtain rises, the sound of a drum and trumpet is heard from a distance, and the villagers are full of joy at the prospect of a comedy performance. They express their excitement in a vigorous opening chorus. This is a clever bit of writing, but so difficult that it is seldom well given. The famous chorus of La Scala, however, under the leadership of Maestro Sabaino, have given this stirring number in splendid style. This oft-recurring phrase:

which is presented with many odd modulations, produces a peculiar and novel effect.

Boys: Hi! They're here!
They're coming back!
Pagliaccio's there
The grown-up folks and boys
All follow after!
Their jokes and laughter
They all applaud.

Women: See, there's the wagon!
My, what a fiendish din!
The Lord have mercy on us!

All: Welcome Pagliaccio;
Long life to him,
The prince of all pagliaccios.
You drive our cares away
With fun and laughter!

The little troupe has now come into view and the noise is redoubled. Canio appears at the head of his company, his wife, Nedda, riding in the cart drawn by a donkey, while Tonio and Peppe make hideous noises on the bass drum and cracked trumpet, which constitute the orchestra of the players. Canio is dressed in the traditional garb of the clown, his face smeared with flour and his cheeks adorned with patches of red. He tries to address the crowd, but the noise is tremendous. Tonio beats the drum furiously to silence the voices, but it is not until Canio has raised his hand to command attention that he is allowed to speak.

By Antonio Paoli, Tenor; Francesco Cigada, Baritone; Gaetano Pini-Corsi, Tenor; and Sig. Rosci, Baritone

He begins to address the peasants in this fashion:

Canio:
A wondrous performance
I say will be given,
By your humble servants
This evening at seven.
The wrath of Pagliaccio
Will there be presented—
What vengeance he took,
And the trap he invented!
You'll witness the carcass of Tonio tremble,
And see him dissemble and pile up the plot!
So honor us by coming this even;
Come all, then, at seven!

The crowd boisterously express their joy at the prospect of an evening's entertainment. Canio now turns to assist Nedda to alight from the cart, but finds Tonio, the Fool, there before him. Giving him a cuff on the ear, he bids him be off, and Tonio slinks away muttering. The boys in the crowd jeer him, saying:

Does that suit you, Mr. Lover?

Tonio threatens the boys, who run away. He goes grumbling into the theatre, saying, aside:

He'll pay for this ere it's over!

One of the peasants invites the players to the wine shop for a friendly glass. They accept, and Canio calls to Tonio to join them, but he replies from within: "I'm rubbing down the donkey," which causes a villager to remark, jestingly:

A Peasant: Careful, Pagliaccio!
He only stays behind there
For making love to Nedda!

Canio smiles, but knits his brow and is evidently impressed by the thought.

Canio: Eh! What?
You think so?
(He becomes serious, and signing to the peasants to come round him, he begins to address them.)

Un tal gioco (Such a Game!)

By Antonio Paoli and La Scala Chorus
(In Italian) 92010 12-inch, $3.00
By Nicola Zerola, Tenor
(In Italian) 64206 10-inch, 1.00

The first trace of Canio's jealous nature is now shown, as he takes with apparent seriousness the idle joke of the peasant, and begins to warn the spectators as follows:
VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA—LEONCAVALLO'S PAGLIACCI

Canio: Such a game, I'd have you know, 'Twere better not to play, my neighbors! To Tonio, aye, to you all I say it! For the stage there and life, they are different altogether!

If up there, (pointing to the theatre) Pagliaccio his lady should discover With some fine fellow in her room, He'd give the two a rating . . . or resign himself, And take a jolly beating!

(With a sudden change of tone)

But if Nedda I really should surprise so, What came after were a far different story!

Nedda, who is listening, is surprised and says aside: "What does he mean?" The villagers, rather puzzled at his earnestness, ask him if he is serious. With an effort he rouses himself from his gloomy mood and says lightly:

Not I—I love my wife most dearly!

(He approaches Nedda and kisses her on the forehead.)

The sound of bagpipes (oboe) is heard in the distance, telling of the merrymaking in the village, and the church bells begin to toll the call to vespers. The people commence to disperse, and Canio again repeats his melodious strain of invitation:

(He goes with several peasants into the inn.)

Coro della campane (Chorus of the Bells)

By La Scala Chorus (In Italian) 35172 12-inch, $1.25

This is the famous Bell Chorus, or "Ding Dong" Chorus, one of the most remarkable numbers in the opera. It is sung with spirit, and the chiming bells are introduced in a most effective manner. The people go off singing and the measures die away in the distance.

Ballatella, "Che volo d'angelli!" (Ye Birds Without Number!)*

By Alma Gluck, Soprano (In Italian) 74238 12-inch, $1.50

By Giuseppina Huguet, Soprano (In Italian) 35172 12-inch, 1.25

Nedda, left alone, is troubled by her remembrance of Canio's manner and wonders if he suspects her. She speaks of the fierce look he had given her, and says:

I dropt my eyes, fearful lest he should have read there What I was secretly thinking.

But shaking off her depression, she becomes once more alive to the brightness of the day, which fills her with a strange delight. A gay tremolo in the strings announces the theme of the birds, and Nedda speaks of her mother, whom she said could understand their language.

Nedda: Ah, ye birds without number! What countless voices! What ask ye? Who knows? My mother, she that was skillful at telling one's fortune, Understood what they're singing, And in my childhood, thus would she sing me.

Then follows the brilliant Balatella or Bird Song, beginning:
It is a most beautiful number with an exquisite accompaniment, mainly of strings. Mme. Gluck gives it here in delightful fashion, singing with dazzling brilliancy, while a very fine rendition by Mme. Huguet is offered as part of a double-faced record.

So ben che deforme (I Know That You Hate Me)

By Giuseppina Huguet, Soprano, and Francesco Cigada, Baritone
In Italian
35173 12-inch, $1.25

At the close of her song Nedda finds that the hideous Tonio has been listening, and now seeing the handsome Columbine alone, begins to make love to her; but she scornfully orders him away. He persists, but his protestations are greeted with mocking laughter, and Nedda says insolently:

Nedda:
There's time, if you like,
Once more to tell me this evening
When you will be acting the fool!
* * * * *
Just now, it is painful.

In a furious rage, Tonio swears she must listen to him and cries:

Nedda:
A threat, eh? Come, or I'll be calling Canio!
Tonio:
But not until I've kissed you!
(Rushing toward her.)

Nulla scordai! (Naught I Forget!)*

By Giuseppina Huguet, Francesco Cigada, and Ernesto Badini
(Doubled with above duet)
In Italian
35173 12-inch, $1.25

Tonio, driven almost to madness by Nedda's scorn and ridicule, seizes and tries to kiss her. She strikes him across the face with her whip, crying:

Oh, you would, you cur!

Tonio (screaming):
By the Blessed Virgin of Assumption,
Nedda, I swear it,
You shall pay for this, and dearly!

Nedda (watching him):
Scorpion! at last you've shown your nature!
Tonio, the clown,
The heart of you is just as crooked as your body!

The young villager, Silvio, whom Nedda has secretly met on previous visits to the town, now jumps over the wall. Nedda, alarmed, cries:

Nedda:
Silvio! In the daytime? What folly!
Silvio (smiling):
I fancy it's no great risk I'm taking!
Canio I spied from afar with Peppe yonder.
Ay! at the tavern I saw them!

She tells him of Tonio's behavior and bids him beware, as the clown is to be feared. Her lover cheers her and laughs at her fears, and they sing the beautiful love duet, in which Silvio urges her to fly with him; but she is afraid and begs him not to tempt her. He persists, and reproaches her for her coldness, until finally in a passion of abandonment she yields, singing the beautiful passage which begins the record:

Then together they sing the lovely duet:

Both:
All, all forgot!
Nedda:
Look into my eyes, love,
All is forgotten!
Then kiss me, dear!

Silvio:
Thou'lt come?
Nedda (passionately):
Aye! kiss me once more!
Both:
I love thee!
The lovers, who have cast aside all prudence and see only each other, fail to observe Canio, who has been warned by Tonio and has hurried from the tavern.

TONIO (holding Canio back): Now just step softly,
And you will catch them now!

SILVIO (disappearing over the wall):
To-night at midnight,
I'll be there below!

NEDDA: 'Till to-night then,
And forever I'll be thine!

(She sees Canio and gives a cry of fear.)

Aitalo Signor! (May Heaven Protect Him!)*

By Antonio Paoli Tenor; Giuseppina Huguet.
Soprano; Francesco Cigada, Baritone; Gaetano Pini-Corsi, Tenor (In Italian) 92011 12-inch, $3.00

Canio, who has not seen Silvio, but has heard Nedda's parting words, now rushes toward the wall. Nedda bars his way. The record begins with the melodramatic music written by Leoncavallo for this exciting struggle, during which Canio pushes her aside and runs in pursuit of Silvio.

NEDDA (listening anxiously): May Heaven protect him now!
CANIO (from behind): Scoundrel! Where hidest thou?
TONIO (laughing cynically): Ha! Ha! Ha!
NEDDA (turning to Tonio with loathing): Bravo! Well done, Tonio!
TONIO (with fiendish satisfaction): All that I could do!
But I hope in the future to do better!

Canio re-enters, out of breath and completely exhausted. As he turns to Nedda with suppressed rage we hear again in the accompaniment that dismal theme of revenge:

which throughout the opera always accompanies the scenes of Canio's jealousy and passion.

CANIO:
No one!
That shows how well he knows that path.
But no matter!
(Furiously):
Because right now you'll tell me his name!
NEDDA (indifferently):
Me?
CANIO (in frenzy):
You! By God in Heaven!
And if up to this moment I have not cut your throat,
* * * * * * * *
'Tis because I'd have you name him!
Speak now!

Nedda proudly refuses. Filled with joy because of Silvio's escape, she cares not what may be her own fate. Canio, beside himself, rushes on her with the knife, but Peppe holds him back and takes away his weapon. Tonio comes to Peppe's assistance, saying:

Restrain yourself, good master,
'Tis best to sham awhile,
The fellow will come back,
You take my word for it!

They finally persuade him to restrain himself, and beg him to make ready for the play, as the audience is already assembling.

Nedda goes into the theatre and Canio remains alone, his head bowed with shame and baffled revenge in his soul.

Vesti la giubba (On With the Play)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor
By Nicola Zerola, Tenor

88061 12-inch, $3.00
64169 10-inch, 1.00
We now come to the most famous of the numbers in Leoncavallo's opera, the great Lament of Pagliaccio. Its heart-breaking pathos never fails to touch the listener, when sung by such artists as the Victor offers.

The unhappy Canio, left alone after the exciting scene with Nedda, wrings his hands and cries:

CANIO:
- To play! When my head's whirling with madness,
- Not knowing what I'm saying or what I'm doing!

Yet I must force myself!
- I am not a man,
- I'm but a Pagliaccio!

The great aria now follows, in which the unfortunate Pagliaccio describes how he must paint his face and make merry for the public while his heart is torn with jealousy.

CANIO:
- The people pay you, and they must have their fun!
- If Harlequin your Columbine takes from you,
- Laugh loud, Pagliaccio!
- And all will shout, well done!
- Laugh, Pagliaccio, for the love that is ended!
- (Sobbing):
- Laugh for the pain that is gnawing your heart!

(He moves slowly toward the theatre, weeping; he stops at the entrance and hesitates. Seized by a new fit of sobbing, he buries his face in his hands; then as the curtain slowly falls, rushes into the tent.)

Caruso's Canio is still the great feature of Pagliaccio, and his magnificent singing of this famous lament cannot be described—it must be heard. In all that this artist has done there is no piece of dramatic singing to equal in emotional force his delivery of the reproaches of the clown, which he pours out not only on his faithless wife, but on himself and the occupation that bids him be merry when his heart is breaking. Sometimes Caruso's voice merely delights the ear—here he searches the heart; and is not merely the greatest of tenors, but is the clown himself, full of the most tragic emotion.

ACT II

SCENE—Same as Act I

La Commedia (The Play) Part I, Serenata d'Arlecchino (Harlequin's Serenade)

By Giuseppina Huguet and Gaetano Pini-Corsi.

Passing over the preparations for the play and the quarreling chorus of the peasants as they fight for the best seats, which is not interesting without the action, we come to the commencement of the comedy. The curtain is drawn aside, disclosing a small room with two side doors and a window at the back. Nedda as Columbine is discovered walking about anxiously. The tripping minuet movement which runs throughout the action of the comedy now begins.

Columbine rises and looks out of the window, saying:

Parliaccio, my husband, till late this evening
Will not be at home.

The sound of a guitar, cleverly imitated by the violins, pizzicato, causes Columbine to utter a cry of joy, and the voice of Harlequin is heard outside in the Serenade, beginning:

in which he extravagantly rhapsodizes his sweetheart.
La Commedia (The Play) Part II, E dessa! (Behold Her!)

By Giuseppina Huguet, Soprano; Francesco Cigada, Baritone; and Gaetano Pini-Corsi, Tenor

*35174 12-inch, $1.25

TONIO as Taddeo, with his basket, now peeps through the door and says exaggeratedly, with a comical cadenza:

The audience laughs in delight as TONIO tries to express his love by a long exaggerated sigh. COLUMBINE tries to suppress him by inquiring about the chicken he had been sent for, but TONIO kneels, and holding up the fowl says:

See, we are both before thee kneeling!

His pretensions are cut short by HARLEQUIN, who enters and leads him out by the ear. As he goes he gives the lovers a mock benediction, singing:

Then I my claim surrender. Bless you, my children!

This scene is most cleverly done and the three records depicting the little farce are among the most enjoyable of the series.

Versa il filtro nella tazza sua! (Pour the Potion in His Wine, Love!)

*(In Italian) 91073 10-inch, $2.00

The lovers now partake of their feast and make merry together. HARLEQUIN takes from his pocket a little vial, which he gives to COLUMBINE, saying:

HARLEQUIN: Take this little sleeping draught, 'Tis for Pagliaccio! Give it him at bedtime, And then away we'll fly.

COLUMBINE (eagerly): Yes, give me!

Upon the scene suddenly bursts TONIO, in mock alarm crying:

TONIO (bawling loudly): Be careful! Pagliaccio is here! Trembling all over, he seeks for weapons! He has caught you, and I shall fly to cover!

The lovers simulate the greatest alarm, at which the excited spectators are highly pleased, and applaud lustily. HARLEQUIN leaps from the window, and NEDDA continues the scene by repeating COLUMBINE's next lines, which by a strange chance are the very words she had spoken to SILEVIO earlier in the day:

COLUMBINE (lightiy): What nonsense! You are tipsy!

PAGLIACCIO (restraining himself with difficulty): Ah, if thou wast alone here Why these places for two?

COLUMBINE: Taddeo was supping with me. He's there—you scared him into hiding!

TADDEO (from within): Believe her, sir! She is faithful!

SNEERING: Ah, they could never lie, those lips so truthful!

315
The audience laughs loudly, which enrages the unhappy man, and forgetting his part he turns to Nedda and fiercely demands the name of her lover:

Canio: Woman, 'tis thy lover's name I want,
The wretched scoundrel from whose arms thou comest!
Oh, shameless woman!

Nedda (faintly, much alarmed): Pagliaccio! Pagliaccio!

No, Pagliaccio non son!
(No, Punchinello No More!)

*By Enrico Caruso, Tenor
(Italian) 88279 12-inch, $3.00*

*By Antonio Paoli, Tenor
(Italian) 92012 12-inch, 3.00*

*By Nicola Zerola, Tenor
(Italian) 74247 12-inch, 1.50*

*By Augusto Barbaini, Tenor
(Italian) 35175 12-inch, 1.25

Throwing off entirely the mask of the player, Canio becomes again the jealous husband, and sings this great aria, which is second only to the Vesti la giubba in dramatic power.

Canio:

No, Pagliaccio, I'm not!
If my face be white,
'Tis shame that pales it
And vengeance twists my features!
* * * * *

I am that foolish man
Who in poverty found and tried to save thee!
He gave a name to thee,
A burning love that was madness!
(Falls in a chair, overwhelmed.)

The people, while a little puzzled by such intensity, loudly applaud what they think is a piece of superb acting.

Canio (recovering himself): All my life to thee I sacrificed with gladness!
Full of hope and believing far less in God than thee!
* * * * * * * * * *
Go! Thou'rt not worth my grief,
O thou abandoned creature!
And now, with my contempt,
I'll crush thee under heel!

Caruso's rendering of this great scene is a magnificent one. The opening passage is delivered with tremendous power, as Canio pleads his defense, saying that he is no longer a player, but a man, and protests as a man against the wrong inflicted upon him. His passion gives place to a softer strain as he speaks of his love for Nedda, his faithfulness and his sacrifices for her. At the close is the intense climax, with its splendid high B flat. Other fine renditions of the air are by Paoli, Zerola and Barbaini.

Finale to the Opera

*By Antonio Paoli, Tenor; Giuseppina Huguet, Soprano; Francesco Cigada, Baritone; Gaetano Pini-Corsi, Tenor; Ernesto Badini, Tenor; and Chorus
(In Italian) 92013 12-inch, $3.00*
The close of Canio's great air, "No, Pagliaccio No More!" is greeted with loud cries of "bravo" from the excited audience.

Nedda is now thoroughly alarmed, but courageously faces her husband with outward calm.

Nedda (coldly but seriously):
'Tis well! If thou think'st me vile, Send me off, then, Before this moment's over!

Canio (laughing loudly):
Ha! Ha! Oh, nothing better would'st thou ask, Than to be let run to meet thy lover! No! by Heaven, for here thou stayest, Until thy paramour's vile name thou sayest!

Nedda, in desperation, tries to continue the play, and as the little gavotte movement is resumed in the accompaniment, she sings:

THE PLAY—ACT II

Nedda: Oh dear, I never knew that you Were such a fearful man, sir! There's nothing tragic for you here. Come now, Taddeo, answer!

The crowd begins to laugh, but is checked by Canio's appearance, which is alarming.

Canio (violently): Ah, you defy me! * * * * * * * * You'll name him, or else I'll kill you!

(Shouting): Who was it?

Nedda (throwing off her mask defiantly):
No, by my mother, I'm faithless, or whatever you choose to call me;

(Proudly): But cowardly, no, never! * * * * * * * *

I will not speak!
No, not even if you kill me.

As she sings we hear triumphantly appearing above her voice the love motive:

\[ \text{Musical notation}\]

telling of her passion for Silvio, which is to endure even unto death.

Canio now rushes toward her, but is restrained by Tonio and Peppe. Nedda tries to escape, but Canio breaks away and stabs her, crying:

Canio: Take that! Perhaps in death's last agony, You will speak!

Nedda falls, and with a last faint effort calls:
"Oh, help me, Silvio."

Silvio, who has drawn his dagger, rushes to her, when Canio cries:
Ah, 'twas you! 'Tis well! (Stabs him.)

Canio (as if stupefied, letting fall his knife):
The comedy is ended!

Then once more is heard the tragic motive of jealousy and death, now thundered out by the orchestra as if rejoicing at its final triumph.

Curtain.

Gems from Pagliacci

Chorus—“Ding Dong”—“This Evening at Seven”—Bird Song, “Ye Birds Without Number”—“Pagliaccio’s Lament” (Vesti la giubba)—Duet, The Comedy, “Just Look My Love”—Chorus, “See, They Come”

By Victor Opera Company {In English} 31876 12-inch, $1.00

The Victor’s potpourri opens with the famous Bell Chorus, or “Ding Dong” Chorus, one of the most remarkable numbers in the opera. The chiming bells are introduced in a most effective manner, and the measures die away in the distance.

Then comes Canio’s address to the peasants, telling them of the play which will be given that evening, followed by Nedda’s beautiful song to the birds, with its exquisite accompaniment.

Next we have the most famous of the numbers in the opera, the great lament of Pagliaccio. Mr. Rogers now goes to Act II for a bit of the delightful comedy duet between Columbine and Harlequin, and concludes the record with the rousing chorus of villagers which greets the coming of the players at the beginning of the opera.

This is one of the finest records of the Opera Company series, the masterly arrangement being given by the Victor’s famous organization in a most admirable manner.
PARSIFAL

A FESTIVAL DRAMA IN THREE ACTS

Music by Richard Wagner; libretto by the composer, based on the famous Grail Legend. First produced at Bayreuth, in Germany, July 28, 1882, and not elsewhere until December 24, 1903, when it was given at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, in spite of the determined opposition of Mme. Wagner. A production in English was afterward given by Henry W. Savage's company, which toured the United States.

THE STORY

The story of the Grail is perhaps the most beautiful in legendary lore. Wagner’s version, which was inspired by a mediaeval epic written about 1300 by Wolfram von Eschenbach, of Thuringia, whom Wagner has already introduced to us in Tannhauser, tells of the Holy Grail, the cup from which Christ drank at the Last Supper with His disciples, and into which was placed the blood which flowed from the wounds of the Saviour.

This sacred cup, together with the lance which caused these wounds, was in danger of profanation from infidel hands, and was therefore sent by holy messengers to a pure Knight, Titurel, who built a splendid sanctuary on an inaccessible rock in the Pyrenees and gathered together a company of Knights of unimpeachable honor, who are devoting their lives to the guarding of the Grail. Once each year a dove descends from Heaven to renew the sacred powers of the Grail and its guardians. Such a subject as this, mystic, symbolic and poetic, so inspired Wagner that in Parsifal he reached his highest sphere as a composer. By no other writer or composer has this most beautiful of legends been so reverently treated, or given such a wonderful significance.

The events which are supposed to occur before the opening of the opera must be understood before a clear idea of the action of Wagner’s work can be gained. Titurel, finding himself growing old, appoints his son, Amfortas, as his successor. Near the Castle of Monsalvat there lives Klingsor, a Knight, who, feeling himself growing old and wishing to atone for his sins, vainly tries to join the Order of the Grail, but without avail. In revenge, he consults an Evil Spirit and plots to bring about the downfall of the Knights. To this end he invokes the aid of a company of sirens, half women and half flowers, called flower girls, who dwell in a magic garden. One by one the Knights have fallen from grace because of the allurements of the flower maidens, until Amfortas, seeking to end these fatal enchantments, resolves to go himself, carrying the sacred Lance, which he is confident will be proof against the magic of the sirens. But alas! he is not only defeated, but is wounded by the sacred Lance, which his enemy seizes and turns against him, making a wound which nothing can heal. The unhappy Amfortas returns to the Castle weighted with an eternal remorse and a perpetual agony from his wound, but is forced as head priest to continue to celebrate the Holy Rites, all the while feeling himself unworthy. In vain he seeks far and wide for a remedy for his wound and forgiveness for his sin, until one day in a vision he hears an invisible voice proclaim that only a guileless fool (i.e., one who is ignorant of sin and who can resist temptation), and whom heavenly messengers will guide to Monsalvat, will be able to bring him relief.

Amfortas’ downfall was brought about by a strange being, Kundry, who seems to have two natures. She appears alternately as a devoted servant of the Grail, and, when under the magic influence of Klingsor, as a woman of terrible beauty, who lures to their ruin all Knights who come within her power. This cursed existence is a punishment for a crime committed in a previous existence, when as Herodias she mocked at Christ on the cross.
ACT I

SCENE—A Forest Near Monsalvat

The rise of the curtain shows Gurnemanz, a veteran Knight, with two novices, asleep. Trumpet calls from the Castle awaken them, and they join in prayer, afterward preparing the bath with which Amfortas seeks to heal his wound. Messengers from the Castle report that the latest balm which he had tried failed to bring relief. Gurnemanz is much grieved, and sinks down in dejection, until he is roused by the approach of Kundry, who comes in hurriedly, dressed in sombre garments and in her normal mind, but exhausted with fatigue. She brings a new remedy which she had sought in distant Arabia. When Amfortas arrives with his train for a bath in the sacred lake, the new balm is offered to him. He accepts and thanks the strange-looking woman for her kindness. When the procession departs the novices attack Kundry, calling her a sorceress, but she is defended by Gurnemanz, who says she is devoted to the King but is subject to strange spells, during which she vanishes for long periods.

Gurnemanz:

Yea, under a curse she may have been:
Here now's her home,—
Renewed become,
That of her sins she may be shriven
From former life yet unforgiven,
Seeking her shrift by such good actions
As advantage all our knightly factions.
Sure she does well in working thus:
Serves herself and also us.

Novice:

Then it is not surely her fault
So much distress hath come to us?

Gurnemanz:

True, when she often stayed afar from us
Then broke misfortune ever in.
I long have known her now;
But Titurel knew her yet longer:
When he yon castle consecrated,
He found her sleeping in this wood,
All stiff, rigid, like death.
Thus I myself did find her lately,
Just when the trouble came on us
Which yonder miscreant beyond the mountain
So shamefully did bring about.
Gurnemanz:
Could'st thou do murder
Here in holy forest?
Why harmed thee that goodly Swan?

Suddenly a wild swan falls wounded at the feet of Gurnemanz, and two Knights appear dragging the innocent Parsifal, who had shot it, not knowing it was under the King's protection. He is reproached by Gurnemanz and questioned, but can tell little of himself. He remembers that his mother was called Herzeleid and lived in a forest. Kundry, whose attention is attracted, explains that the youth's father was Gamuret, and after his death in battle his mother took him away from the haunts of men lest he meet the same fate. She is now dead, and Parsifal is a wanderer.

The train of Amfortas again approaches, returning from the lake. Gurnemanz invites Parsifal to accompany them to the Castle, the thought having occurred to him that this strange youth may be the "guileless fool" who is to be the means of Amfortas' regeneration.
Gurnemanz:
From bathing comes the King again;
High stands the sun now:
Let me to the holy Feast then conduct thee;
For—an thou'rt pure,
Surely the Grail will feed and refresh thee.
(He has gently laid Parsifal's arm on his own neck, and, supporting his body with his arm, leads him slowly along.)

Parsifal: What is the Grail?

Gurnemanz: I may not say:
But if to serve it thou be hidden,
Knowledge of it will not be hidden.
And lo!
Methinks I know thee now indeed:
No earthly road to it doth lead,
By no one can it be detected
Who by itself is not elected.

Parsifal: I scarcely move,—
Yet swiftly seem to run.

Gurnemanz:
My son, thou seest
Here time and space are one.

The change to the Castle Hall is here effected by a moving scene behind Gurnemanz and Parsifal, so that they seem to be walking slowly along, at first through the forest, then into a covered gallery which ascends to the Castle. This effective device was first used at Bayreuth, and afterward in the American representations.
The two suddenly find themselves in a vast hall, filled with a strange light, while invisible bells are pealing. Parsifal is dazzled and fascinated by the wonderful sight, while he is carefully watched by Gurnemanz, who hopes to see signs of an awakening knowledge of his mission.

In the hall the Knights are preparing for the daily rites which occur before the Holy Grail. Then one of the most impressive scenes in the opera takes place. The unfortunate Amfortas is brought in on a couch and prepares to preside at the ceremony. In agony of mind and body, he endeavors to postpone the rites, but the voice of his aged father, Titurel, is heard from the dark chapel commanding him to proceed. Amfortas, in a heart-breaking plea, begs Heaven to permit him to die, to end his intolerable sufferings.

Amfortas:

No! Leave it unrevealed!
May no one, no one know the anguish dire
Awaked in me by that which raptures ye!
What is the wound and all its torture wild,
'Gainst the distress, the pangs of Hell,
In this high post—accurst to dwell!—
Woeful inheritance on me pressed,
I, only sinner 'mid the blessed,
The holy house to guard for others
And pray for blessings upon my purer brothers!
Oh, chast'ning—chast'ning dire! descended
From the Almighty One offended.
For grace and for compassion yearning
My panting heart is riven.
The hot and sinful blood doth surge,
Ever renewed from my yearnings' fountain,
Which no expiation yet can purge
Have mercy! Have mercy!
God of pity, oh! have mercy!

Titurel's voice is again heard, urging Amfortas to proceed, and the pain-racked priest raises himself from the couch and offers the prayer of consecration. As he speaks a blinding ray of light streams down from the vault above and falls on the Grail, which glows with a great luster. The Cup is covered and all partake of the bread and wine, after which they file slowly out. During the ceremony Parsifal has stood fascinated, but with impassive face. Gurnemannz, finally out of patience, comes up and thrusts him out, saying:

Gurnemannz:
Thou art, then, nothing but a fool!
(He opens a small side door.)
Come away, on thy road be gone
And put my rede to use;
Leave all our swans for the future alone
And seek thyself, gander, a goose!
(He pushes Parsifal out and slams the door angrily on him as the curtain falls.)
ACT II

SCENE—Klingsor’s Magic Castle

In the inner keep of a tower open above; stone steps lead up to the battlemented summit and down into darkness below the stage, which represents the rampart. Magical implements and necromatic appliances are seen. Klingsor is discovered sitting at one side on a rampart before a metal mirror.

Klingsor:
The time has come!

He lights incense, which immediately fills part of the background with a bluish vapor. He then reseats himself and calls toward the depth with mysterious gestures:

Klingsor:
Arise! Draw near to me!
Thy master calls thee, nameless woman:
She-Lucifer! Rose of Hades!

In the bluish light arises the form of Kundry. She is heard to utter a dreadful cry, as if half awakened from a deep sleep. She tries to resist him, but Klingsor’s power over her finally prevails. He tells her she must tempt Parsifal, who is now approaching the Castle of Klingsor.

Kundry: Oh!—Mis’ry—Mis’ry!
Weak e’en he! Weak—all men!
By my curse and with me
All of them perish!
Oh, unending sleep,
Only release,
When—when shall I win thee?

Klingsor:
Ha! He who spurns thee setteth thee free;
So try’t with yon boy who draws near!
Kundry: Oh woe’s me! woe’s me!
Awakened I for this?
Must I—must?

Kundry (wrathfully):
Have a’ care!
One his contempt and scorn hath repented;
The stern one, strong in holiness,
By whom I once was spurned
His stock I’ve ruined:
Unredeemed shall the Relics’ curator soon languish;
And soon—I feel it—
I shall possess the Grail.
Ha! ha!
How suited thy taste Amfortas the brave,
Whom to thee in rapture I gave?
With a last cry of protest and anguish she vanishes in a bluish mist. The tower sinks beneath the earth, while a magic garden filled with wonderful flowers and plants rises to take its place. On the wall stands Parsifal, looking down on the garden in astonishment. From all sides, from the garden and from the palace, rush in mazy courses lovely damsels, first singly and then in numbers; their dress is hastily thrown about them, as if they had been suddenly startled from sleep. They have discovered that several of their lovers have been slain by an unknown foe, and seeing Parsifal, they accuse him of the deed. Parsifal comes nearer, saying innocently:

Parsifal (in great astonishment):

Lovely maidens, why of ye? What love ye, lovely maidens? When they endeavor to check approach to our charms?

Damsels: To us camest thou? (To Parsifal.)

Parsifal: I've seen nowhere yet beings so bright: If I called fair, would it seem right?

Damsels (with merriment): Then will thou not treat us badly?

Parsifal (smiling):

I could not so.

Damsels:

But sadly

What thou hast done has annoyed us; Our playmates thou hast destroyed us: Who'll sport with us now?

Parsifal:

Then well will I.
Damsels (laughing):
If thou are friendly come more nigh,
Let kindness be accorded,
And thou shalt be rewarded;
For gold we do not play
But only for love's sweet pay,
Wouldst thou console us rightly
Then win it from us, and lightly.

Some have gone into the groves and now return in flower dresses, appearing like flowers themselves. They playfully quarrel for possession of Parsifal, who stands looking about him in quiet enjoyment of the scene. He finally gently repulses them, saying:

Parsifal:
Ye wild crowd of beautiful flowers,
If I am to play, ye must widen your bowers.

As they push closer to him he becomes angry and tries to flee, but his attention is suddenly arrested as Kundry calls, “Parsifal, tarry!” He stops in astonishment, saying:

Parsifal:
Parsifal . . .?
So once, when dreaming, my mother called me.

Kundry's Voice:
Here bide thee, Parsifal!
Where joy and gladness on thee shall fall,
Ye frivolous wantons, leave him in peace:
Flow'rs soon to be faded,
He came not here for your delight!
Go home, tend the wounded;
Lonely awaits you many a knight.

Ich sah' das Kind (I Saw the Child)

By Margarete Matzenauer, Mezzo-Soprano

Tenderly gazing at the now attentive youth, she begins, softly:

Kundry:
I saw the child upon its mother's breast;
Its infant lisping laughs yet in my ear:
Though filled with sadness,
How laughed then even Heart's Affliction,
When, shouting gladness,
It gave her sorrow's contradiction!
In beds of moss 'twas softly nested,
She kissed it till in sleep it rested:
With care and sorrow
The timid mother watched it sleeping;
It walked the morrow
Beneath the dew of mother's weeping.
All tears was she, encased in anguish,
Caused by thy father's death and love:

That through like hap thou shouldst not lan-
guish,
Became her care all else above,
Afar from arms, from mortal strife and riot,
Sought she to hide away with thee in quiet.
All care was she, alas! and fearing;
Never should aught of knowledge reach thy hearing.
Hear'st thou not still her lamenting voice,
When far and late thou didst roam?
For days and nights she waited,
And then her cries abated;
Her pain was dulled of its smart,
And gently ebbed life's tide;
The anguish broke her heart,
And—Heart's Affliction—died.

Mme. Matzenauer, whose Kundry is one of her greatest impersonations, sings this number with exquisite tenderness and great beauty of voice.

328
Parsifal is greatly affected and sinks at Kundry's feet, distressed. She embraces him tenderly and tries to comfort him, while he seems to imagine that it is again his mother whose gentle embraces he is receiving. As she gives him the kiss which is to complete his subjection he awakes to a knowledge of his mission, realizes Kundry's evil purpose and repulses her with scorn. She pleads with him, playing on his sympathies:

Kundry:
Let me upon thy breast lie sobbing,
But for one hour together throbbing:
Though forced from God and man to flee,
Be yet redeemed and pardoned by thee!

Parsifal:
Eternally should I be damned with thee,
If for one hour I forgot my holy mission,
Within thy arm's embracing:
To thy help also am I sent,
If of thy cravings thou repent.
The solace, which shall end thy sorrow,
Yields not that spring from which it flows:
Salvation canst thou never borrow,
Till that same spring in thee shall close.

Finally, enraged by his refusal, she calls for help. Fearing that he will escape, Klingsor and the flower maidens rush out of the Castle.

Klingsor (poising a lance):
Halt there! I'll ban thee with befitting gear:
The Fool shall perish by his Master's spear!

He flings the spear at Parsifal, but an invisible force stops it and it remains floating over his head. Parsifal grasps it with his hand and brandishes it with a gesture of exalted rapture, making the sign of the Cross with it.

Parsifal:
This sign I make, and ban thy cursed magic:
As the wound shall be closed,
Whose with this once clovest,—
To wrack and to ruin
Falls thy unreal display!

As with an earthquake the Castle falls to ruins, the garden withers up to a desert, the damsels become shriveled flowers strewn around on the ground.

Kundry sinks down at Parsifal's feet, while the hero, gazing at her with compassion, and referring to the Holy Grail, where true salvation can alone be found, cries:

Parsifal:
Thou know'st—
Where only we shall meet again!

(He disappears, and the curtain falls quickly.)
ACT III

SCENE—A spring landscape in the grounds of Monsalvat. At the back a small hermitage

Gurnemanz, now an aged man, in hermit’s dress but still wearing the tunic of a Knight of the Grail, comes out of the hut and listens. He then goes to a thicket and finds Kundry apparently lifeless, but she revives under his ministrations. She is dressed as in Act I, and soon arises and goes immediately, like a serving maid, to work. She enters the hut, procure a water jug which she fills at the spring. Gurnemanz watches her carefully, seeing signs of a change in her. Parsifal now enters from the wood in complete armor and seats himself. Gurnemanz, not recognizing him, reminds him that no armed knight is allowed in the sacred premises, and especially on this day, Good Friday. Without saying a word, Parsifal rises, removes his helmet, and kneels down in silent prayer. Gurnemanz in surprise, says softly to Kundry:

Gurnemanz:
Dost know who ‘tis?...He who long since laid low the swan. (Kundry confirms him by a slight nod.) For sure ‘tis he! The fool whom in anger I dismissed.

Ha! by what path aye came he? That Spear—I recognize! (In great emotion.) Oh!—holiest day, To which my happy soul awakes! (Kundry has turned away her face.)

Parsifal rises slowly from his prayer, gazes calmly around, recognizes Gurnemanz, and stretches out his hand to him in greeting.

Parsifal:
Thank Heaven that I again have found thee!
Gurnemanz questions him and is confirmed in his belief that this is the one who is to redeem the sins of the Grail brotherhood. He tells Parsifal of the sad state of affairs at the Castle.

Gurnemanz:
Here art thou, in the Grail's domain;
Here waits for thee the knightly band.
Ah, how they need the blessing,
The blessing that thou bring'st!—
Since that first day in which thou camest here,
The mourning which thou heardest then—
The anguish—sorely has increased.
Amfortas, struggling with his torture,
With the wound that tore his spirit,
Desired with reckless daring then his death:
No pray'rs, no sorrow of his comrades
Could move him to fulfill his holy office.
Pale, dejected stays around
The crushed and leader-lacking band of knights.
Here on the woodside lone I hid myself,
For death with calmness waiting,
To which my old commander has succumbed;
For Titurel, my cherished chief,
When he no more beheld the Grail's refu-gence.
Expired,—a man like others!

Parsifal (flying up his arms in intense grief):
And I—I 'tis,
Who all this woe have wrought!
Ha! what a grievous,
What a heinous guilt
Must then my foolish head
Forever be oppressed with!
If no atonement, expiation
My blindness e'er can banish!
I, who to save men was selected,
Must wander undirected;
All paths of safety from me vanish!

He is on the point of falling, helpless. Gurnemanz supports him and allows him to sink down on the grassy knoll. Kundry has brought a basin of water with which to sprinkle Parsifal, but Gurnemanz warns her away, saying that holy water alone must be used for his anointing.

Parsifal asks to be guided to Amfortas, and Gurnemanz and Kundry busy themselves in preparing him for the ordeal. Kundry bathes his feet and dries them on her hair. Parsifal asks Gurn-emanz, who by his pure life has become worthy of this office, to anoint him with the water of purification and the con-tsents of the golden vial which Kundry produces from her bosom. Gurnemanz consents, and bestows on Parsifal the title of Prince and King of the Grail.
Parsifal now looks at Kundry with deep compassion, and taking up some water sprinkles her head, saying:

Parsifal:
I first fulfill my duty thus:—
Be thou baptized,
And trust in the Redeemer!
(Kundry bows her head to the earth and appears to weep bitterly.)
Parsifal (turns round and gazes with gentle rapture on the woods and meadows):
How fair the woods and meadows seem to-day!
Many a magic flow'r I've seen,
Which sought to clasp me in its baneful twingings;
But none I've seen so sweet as here,
These tendrils bursting with blossom,
Whose scent recalls my childhood's days
And speaks of loving trust to me.

Gurnemanz explains that this beauty of the woods and fields is caused by the spell of Good Friday, and that the flowers and trees, watered by the tears of repentant sinners, express by their luxuriousness the redemption of man.
Char-Freitags Zauber (Good Friday Spell)

By Herbert Witherspoon, Bass

Gurnemanz: Thou seest, that is not so.
The sad repentant tears of sinners
Have here with holy rain
Besprinkled field and plain,
And made them glow with beauty.
All earthly creatures in delight
At the Redeemer's trace so bright
Uplift their pray'rs of duty.
To see Him on the Cross they have no power:
And so they smile upon redeemed man,
Who, feeling freed, with dread no more doth cower,
Through God's love-sacrifice made clean and pure:
And now perceives each blade and meadow-flower
That mortal foot to-day it need not dread;
For, as the Lord in pity man did spare,
And in His mercy for him bled,
All men will keep, with pious care,
To-day a tender tread.
Then thanks the whole creation makes,
With all that flow'res and fast goes hence,
That trespass-pardoned Nature wakes
Now to her day of Innocence.
Kundry has slowly raised her head again, and gazes with moist eyes, earnestly and calmly beseeching up at Parsifal.

Parsifal:
I saw my scornful mockers wither;
Now look they for forgiveness hither?—

Like blessed sweet dew a tear from thee flows
Thou weepst—see! the landscape gloweth.
(He kisses her softly on the brow.)

Distant bells are heard pealing, very gradually swelling.

Gurnemanz:
Mid-day.
The hour has come:—
Permit, my lord, thy servant hence to lead thee!

Gurnemanz has brought out a coat-of-mail and mantle of the Knights of the Grail, which he and Kundry put on Parsifal. The landscape changes very gradually, as in the first act. Parsifal solemnly grasps the Spear, and, with Kundry, follows the conducting Gurnemanz. When the wood has disappeared and rocky entrances have presented themselves in which the three become invisible, processions of Knights in mourning garb are perceived in the arched passages, the pealing of bells ever increasing. At last the whole immense hall becomes visible, just as in the first act, only without the tables. There is a faint light. The doors open again, and from one side the Knights bear in Titurel’s corpse in a coffin. From the other Amfortas is carried on in his litter, preceded by the covered shrine of the Grail. The bier is erected in the middle; behind it the throne with canopy where Amfortas is set down.

First Train (with the Grail and Amfortas):
To sacred place in sheltering shrine
The Holy Grail do we carry;
What hide ye there in gloomy shrine,
Which hither mourning ye bear?

Second Train (with Titurel’s coffin):
A hero lies in this dismal shrine
With all this Heavenly strength.
To whom all things once God did entrust:
Titurel hither we bear.
Sorrow! Sorrow! Thou guard of the Grail!
Be once more only
Warned of thy duty to all.

Amfortas (raising himself on his couch and turning to the body):
My father!
Highest venerated hero!
Thou purest, to whom once e’en the angels blended!
Oh! thou who now in Heavenly heights
Dost behold the Saviour’s self,
Implore Him to grant that His hallowed blood,
He pour upon these brothers.
To them new life while giving,
To me may offer—but Death!
My father! I—call thee,
Cry thou my words to Him:
“Redeemer, give to my son release!”

Several Knights (pressing toward Amfortas):
Uncover the shrine!
Do thou thine office!
Thy father demands it;
Thou must, thou must!

Amfortas (in a paroxysm of despair springs up and throws himself amid the Knights, who draw back):

No!—No more!
I bid ye to slay me!
(Tears open his dress.)
Behold me!—the open wound behold!
Here is my poison—my streaming blood.
Take up your weapons!
Kill both the sinner and all his pain:
The Grail’s delight will ye then regain!
All have shrunk back in awe and Amfortas stands alone in fearful ecstasy. Parsifal, accompanied by Gurnemanz and Kundry, has entered unperceived, and now advancing, stretches out the Spear, touching Amfortas' side with the point.

Parsifal:
One weapon only serves:
The one that struck
Can staunch thy wounded side.

Amfortas' countenance shines with holy rapture, and he totters with emotion, Gurnemanz supporting him.

Parsifal:
Be whole, unsullied and absolved!
For I now govern in thy place.
Oh, blessed by thy sorrows,
For Pity's potent might.
And Knowledge's purest power
They taught a timid Fool.
The holy Spear—
Once more behold in this.

All gaze with intense rapture on the Spear which Parsifal holds aloft, while he looks steadfastly at its point and continues:

Oh, mighty miracle of bliss!—
This that through me thy wound restoreth,
With holy blood behold it poureth.
Which yearns to join the fountain glowing.
Whose pure tide in the Grail is flowing?
Hid be no more that shape divine:
Uncover the Grail! Open the shrine!

The boys open the shrine and Parsifal takes from it the Grail and kneels, absorbed in its contemplation, silently praying. The Grail glows with light, and a halo of glory pours down over all.
Titurel, for the moment reanimated, raises himself in benediction in his coffin. From the dome descends a white dove and hovers over Parsifal's head. He waves the Grail gently to and fro before the upgazing Knights. Kundry, looking up at Parsifal, sinks slowly to the ground, dead. Amfortas and Gurnemanz do homage on their knees to Parsifal.

All (with voices from the middle and extreme heights, so soft as to be scarcely audible):
Wond'rous work of mercy:
Salvation to the Saviour!

(The curtain falls.)

Guards, Esthetic Maidens.

Time and Place: Castle Bunthorne; the last century.

Patience is Gilbert's famous satire on the esthetic craze of the early 80's, set to some of the most delightful of all Sullivan's music. This absurd school of estheticism, represented by Oscar Wilde and his imitators, did not long survive the witty ridicule which Gilbert aimed at it, and soon disappeared. The opera was one of the most successful of the Gilbert and Sullivan series, and well deserved its great vogue.

In the first act twenty love-sick maidens are sighing, and singing plaintively of their love for Bunthorne. Patience, a buxom milkmaid, appears and ridicules them, telling them the Dragoon Guards are expected shortly; but though the maidens doted upon the Dragoons a year ago they scorn them now. The Guards arrive, also Bunthorne, followed by the fair twenty, who pay no attention whatever to the Dragoons but follow the poet, listening to his latest creation, whereupon the Dragoons leave in a rage. When alone Bunthorne confesses to himself that he is a sham. Patience appears, and the poet immediately makes love to her, but she is frightened and runs to Lady Angela, who tells her it is her duty to love some one. Patience thereupon declares she will not allow the day to go by without falling in love.

Grosvenor, the idyllic poet, and an old playmate of Patience, enters, and she promptly falls in love with him, but he remains indifferent. Bunthorne, twined with garlands, enters, led by the maidens, and, unable to decide between them, puts himself up as the prize in a lottery, but Patience interrupts the drawing and announces that she will be his wife. She is promptly accepted, whereupon the fickle maidens transfer their affections to Grosvenor. This does not please Bunthorne, and he predicts that his rival shall "meet a horrible doom."

In the opening of the second act we see a rather ancient damsel, Jane, mourning because of the maidens' desertion of Bunthorne, who is content with a milkmaid. Grosvenor enters, followed by Patience, who tells him that she still loves him but that her duty is toward Bunthorne. Bunthorne enters with Jane clinging to him in spite of all his efforts to get rid of her. Finally, in a jealous rage at Patience's regard for the fleshy poet, he exits with Jane. Now the maidens are beginning to make advances to the Dragoons, and the poets begin to quarrel with each other. Bunthorne asks Grosvenor how to make himself less attractive, and is told to dress himself in a more commonplace manner. When the maidens find he has given up esthetics they declare they will do likewise. Patience deserts Bunthorne for Grosvenor, the maidens find suitors among the Dragoons, and Jane goes over to the Duke, leaving Bunthorne lonely and disconsolate.

The Opera Company has given us a splendid medley of the airs of this delightful opera, no less than six of the most interesting numbers, in abbreviated form, being included.

Priests, Priestesses, Pearl Fishers, Women, etc.

_Scene and Period_: Ceylon; barbaric period.

Les Pêcheurs de Perles, one of Bizet’s earlier operas and the first one to achieve success, is a work dealing with an Oriental subject, and contains much music of charm and originality, showing traces of that dramatic force which reached its full development in Carmen. The character of the music, less passionate and highly colored than Carmen, is yet equally original and of even more striking beauty.

The story tells of the love of two Cingalese pearl fishers for the priestess Leila, and of the generosity of the unsuccessful rival, who helps the lovers to escape at the cost of his own life.

THE PRELUDE

The prelude is a most beautiful number, and considered one of the finest of Bizet’s instrumental writings.

ACT I

SCENE—The Coast of Ceylon

The rise of the curtain discloses a company of Cingalese pearl fishers, who, after choosing one of their number, Zurga, to be their chief, are enjoying themselves with games and dances. Nadir appears and Zurga recognizes him as a friend of his youth. They greet each other and speak of the days when they were rivals for the hand of a beautiful woman. Nadir, beginning the duet, recalls the moment when the friends first beheld the lovely Leila.

That form I still can see!

'Twas a vision of beauty!

NADIR:

ZURGA:

They speak of their sudden realization of the fact that they had both fallen in love at sight with the priestess, and fearing their friendship was in danger, they swore never to see her again. The comrades, now pronouncing themselves entirely cured of their infatuation, pledge anew their friendship and swear to be brothers to the end.

A fisherman now enters and announces the arrival of the mysterious veiled lady who comes once a year to pray for the success of the fisheries, and whom the Ceylonese have adopted as their guardian saint. She enters and begins her prayer. Nadir recognizes her voice and realizes that it is the priestess Leila. The pearl fishermen sing a chorus of appeal to Brahma for a blessing, in which Leila joins.

The high priest sternly recites the punishment which will overtake her should she prove false to her vow. "Shame and death be thy portion!" cries the stern priest. Bound by an oath which she now regrets, and conscious of her love for Nadir, which may mean death for them both, she sinks down in an agony of despair. Nadir enters and asks her to fly with him, defying Brahma and the priests. The lovers are surprised by Nourabad, and Nadir flees, closely pursued by the priests. He is captured and brought back, while Zurga is summoned to pronounce sentence on the guilty lovers. His friendship for Nadir moves him to mercy, and he spares their lives and bids them fly the country. As they go, however, the high priest tears the veil from Leila, and when Zurga realizes that it is the woman Nadir has sworn never to see, he is enraged and sentences them both to death.

ACT III

SCENE I—The Camp of Zurga

Zurga is discovered alone, brooding over the impending death of his friend and the woman he loves. His mood of despair is interrupted by Leila, who appears at the entrance to his tent and asks him to dismiss the guards and speak with her alone. She asks mercy for Nadir in a dramatic aria.

She proudly refuses to plead for her own life, but begs that he spare the friend whom he loves. Zurga refuses and summons the guards to conduct her to execution.

SCENE II—The Place of Execution

The scene shows the wild spot where the funeral pile has been erected. Leila and Nadir are led in, and are about to mount the pyre when a red glow is seen in the sky, and Zurga enters crying that the camp is on fire, and bids the people fly to save their children and effects. All run out except Leila, Nadir and Zurga, and the high priest, who, suspecting a plot, hides to hear what Zurga will say. The latter confesses that he kindled the fire in

The lovers praise the generosity and greatness of Zurga, who for the sake of friendship has committed an act which may cost him his own life. He bids them fly at once, and they go as the voices of the enraged Indians are heard returning for vengeance. Nourabad denounces Zurga for the escape of the victims and for the destruction of the camp, and he is forced to mount the funeral pyre. As the flames mount about him he cries:

Zurga:

Farewell, my friend!
Farewell, my Leila!
For thee I give my life!

As Zurga dies a fiery glow reveals that the forest is ablaze, and all prostrate themselves, fearing the displeasure of Brahma. The curtain falls as the flames envelop the stage.

THE PEARL OF BRAZIL
LYRICAL DRAMA IN THREE ACTS

Words by Gabriel and Sylvain Saint Étienne; music by Félicien David. First produced at the Théâtre Lyrique, Paris, November 22, 1851. Revived at the same theatre March, 1858, with Mme. Miolan-Carvalho; and at the Opéra Comique, 1883, with Emma Nevada as Zora.

Characters
(With the Original Cast)

ZORA ................................................................. Mlle. Duez
LORENZ, her lover .................................................. Soyer
ADMIRAL SALVADOR ............................................. Bouché

Sailors, Brazilians, etc.

The Pearl of Brazil was David's first dramatic work, and is the story of Zora, a young girl whom Admiral Salvador found in Brazil, and whom he intends to educate and eventually to marry. They set sail from South America, but Salvador soon discovers that Zora has a lover, Lorenz, a young lieutenant, who has disguised himself as a sailor and is on board in order to be near his sweetheart. A storm arises and the ship is compelled to seek shelter in a harbor of Brazil. The natives attack the ship and almost overpower the sailors, when Zora chants a hymn to the Great Spirit, and the Brazilians, recognizing their compatriot, make peace. In gratitude for the young girl's act, which saved the lives of all on board, the Admiral gives his consent to her marriage with Lorenz.

The Charmant oiseau is the most beautiful number in David's opera, and is offered here by three celebrated sopranos. This is one of the most famous of colorature airs, and one of which colorature sopranos are very fond as it exhibits to perfection the skill of the singers, showing to rare advantage the flexibility of the voice, especially in the duet with the flute, with its difficult runs.

Delightful bird of plumage glowing
With sapphire and with ruby dyes.
'Tmid the shade his rare beauty showing
Before our wonderstricken eyes;
When on the branch with blossoms trembling,
He poises swinging gay and bright,
His checkered pinions' gleams resembling
A many-colored prism of light.
How sweet is he, the Mysoli!

When day appears his joyful singing
Awakes the dawn's enchanted rest;
When evening falls his notes are ringing,
While fiery day fades from the west.
A-down the grove the silence doubles.
As now his plaintive dulcet lay,
That breathes of love's ecstatic troubles,
From out the tulip tree dies away.
How sweet is he, the Mysoli!

THE LASS THAT LOVED A SAILOR
COMIC OPERA IN TWO ACTS

Text by W. S. Gilbert; music by Sir Arthur Sullivan. First produced at the Opéra Comique, London, May 28, 1878. First American production occurred in New York in 1878, but was unauthorized, and was followed by the first important production at the Boston Museum, in November, 1879. Successfully revived in New York in 1911 and again in 1912.

Time and Place: The scene is laid on the quarterdeck of "H. M. S. Pinafore"; time, the present.
The production of this little opera marked the temporary retirement of opera bouffe in America; its dainty music and the sparkling wit of its dialogue being grateful to a public which was becoming satiated by the productions of German and French composers. Gilbert’s satire was keen, but the wit was always delicate without a single touch of the coarseness which frequently marred the opera bouffe translations.

Pinafore has an inexhaustible fund of this Gilbertian wit, and never fails to please an audience. When first presented in London, however, so little interest was shown that the management decided to withdraw the piece, but its ultimate success was quite phenomenal.

ACT I

The story of Pinafore is so generally known that it is like repeating an old, familiar tale to outline the plot. The rise of the curtain shows the deck of His Majesty’s Ship Pinafore. The Captain is in a mournful mood because his daughter does not favor his plan to marry her to Sir Joseph Porter, and confesses that she loves an ordinary sailor. Soon after she meets Ralph, who tells her of his love, but is haughtily repulsed. In desperation he threatens to shoot himself, and Josephine then confesses that she cares for him. Their plans to get ashore and be married are overheard by Dick Deadeye, a sort of comedy villain, who threatens to prevent their elopement.

ACT II

In the second act Little Buttercup naively reveals her affection for the Captain, but he tells her he can only be her friend. This angers her, and she prophesies a change in his fortunes. Sir Joseph enters and complains to the Captain that Josephine has disappointed him. Corcoran tells him his daughter is probably dazzled by the exalted station of her suitor, and suggests that he plead his cause on the ground that love levels all rank. Sir Joseph accepts his suggestion, but only succeeds in strengthening his rival’s cause, as Josephine becomes even more firmly resolved to wed Ralph. Dick Deadeye now reveals the planned elopement, and the Captain stops the couple as they are stealing away, demanding where they are going. Ralph confesses his love, which so angers Corcoran that he swears. Sir Joseph overhears him and orders him to his cabin, but on being told the cause of the excitement, orders Ralph also to be confined. Little Buttercup, interrupting, reveals her secret and tells how the Captain and Ralph were accidentally exchanged when both were infants. Whereupon Sir Joseph, revealing the crowning absurdity of Gilbert’s plot, sends for the swimmer, gives him command of the ship and nobly consents to his marriage with Josephine. The Captain, who now automatically becomes a common sailor, marries the happy Little Buttercup.

The Victor’s fine singing organization has given two splendid medleys from this melodious nautical opera, and these two attractive records contain, in condensed form, thirteen of the most popular numbers from the production.

THE PIRATES OF PENZANCE

THE SLAVE OF DUTY

COMIC OPERA IN TWO ACTS

Text by Sir W. S. Gilbert; music by Sir Arthur Sullivan. The first performance on any stage took place in New York, December 31, 1879, under the immediate supervision of Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Gilbert. Produced at the Opéra Comique, London, April 3, 1880. Recently revived by Messrs. Shubert and W. A. Brady.

Pirates, Police, etc.

Time and Place: The scene is laid on the coast of Cornwall; time, the present.
The Pirates, as it is familiarly called, is one of the very few operas of note to have its first production in America. This unusual step was taken to protect the rights of the composers and publishers in American representations of the work.

The first act was written and the entire opera scored in this country, and the work was not published until after Messrs. Gilbert and Sullivan had returned to England.

Gilbert’s delightfully whimsical story tells of Frederic, apprenticed when a child to the Pirates of Penzance, who were very gentle with orphans for the reason that they themselves were orphans!

ACT I

The Pirates are celebrating the twenty-first birthday of Frederic, who, tiring of a piratical career, is about to leave them to seek another occupation. Ruth, a “female pirate,” begs him to marry her, and as she is the only woman he has known, he consents, after she has assured him that she is “a fine figure of a woman.”

Shortly afterward Frederic meets General Stanley’s daughters, who have come to this rocky shore on an outing, falling in love with Mabel, the youngest. The Pirates capture Mabel’s sisters and propose to marry them (the ladies meanwhile doing very little struggling with the handsome pirates!), but when their father arrives and tells them he also is an orphan, they relent and release the girls.

ACT II

In the second act the General, with a highly exaggerated sense of honor, is lamenting because he has deceived the Pirates by telling them he is an orphan. Frederic, who is about to lead an expedition (composed of brave policemen!) to exterminate the Pirates, comes to bid Mabel good-bye.

The Pirate King and Ruth arrive and show Frederic the apprentice papers which bound him to the Pirates until his twenty-first birthday, and call attention to their discovery of the fact that as he was born in leap year on the 29th of February, he has had but five birthdays, and consequently is still a member of the band until sixteen more leap years have rolled around! A strong sense of duty influences him to consent to return to the Pirates and serve out his unexpired term of something like sixty years! He also considers it his duty, now that he is a pirate once more, to tell them of the General’s falsehood, and they swear vengeance.

In an attempt to carry off the General the pirates are captured by the policemen, but ask for their liberty on the ground that they are really English noblemen “gone wrong.” On promising to give up their piratical career they are pardoned, and this releases Frederic, who is now free to marry Mabel.

The Victor offers here, in condensed form, six of the best numbers from the opera.

Scene and Period: Holland and Germany; in 1543, at the time of the Anabaptist uprising.

Meyerbeer’s great work is certainly entitled to be called a grand opera, for it is grand to the utmost in theme, character and scenes; and with its brilliant and impressive music, at the time of its production sixty years ago was a model of its kind, as opera-goers demanded melodramatic action, tuneful music and opportunity for ballet; and all these requirements are fully met with in Le Prophète.

The plot is based on the Anabaptist fanaticism of the sixteenth century, which agitated a large part of Germany and Holland, and the leader of which was one Bockelson, commonly called John of Leyden.

ACT I

SCENE—A Suburb of Dordrecht, Holland

The story furnished by the librettists describes John as the son of the widow Fidès, an innkeeper of Leyden. At the opening of the opera he is about to wed Bertha, an orphan. She, being a vassal of the Count Oberthal, is obliged to ask his permission before marrying, and goes with Fidès, John’s mother, to beg the Count’s consent. The Count, struck with the young girl’s beauty, covets her for himself, refuses his consent and orders Fidès and Bertha into the castle.

ACT II

SCENE—The Inn of John in the Suburbs of Leyden

Three Anabaptists enter and being struck with the resemblance of John to the portrait of the guardian saint, David, at Munster, they try to induce him to become their leader. He refuses, but tells them of a strange dream he has had.

JOHN: Under the vast dome of a splendid temple
I stood—the people at my feet were prostrate—
The royal coronal adorn’d my brow!

The Anabaptists declare that Heaven has spoken in the dream, and promise that he shall yet be a ruler; but John’s thoughts turn to his beloved Bertha, and in the beautiful Pastorale he tells them that another and sweeter life calls to him.
SCHUMANN HEINK AS FIDES
Ah, mon fils! (Ah, My Son!)

By Louise Homer, Contralto
By Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Contralto

Fidès:
Ah, my son! Blessed be thou!
Thy loving mother to thee was dearer
Than was Bertha, who claim'd thy heart!
Ah, my son! For thou, alas,
Thou dost give for thy mother more than life,
For thou giv'st all the joy of thy soul!
Ah, my son! now to heav'n my pray'r ascends for thee;
My son, blessed be forever more!

The part of Fidès, is perhaps most interesting in the opera, and this Ah, mon fils, is a dramatic aria full of real passion.

John, left by his mother to bitter thoughts, hears the Anabaptists in the distance, and resolves to join them as a means of vengeance on the Count. The three conspirators enter and are addressed by John:

John:
When in my dreams I thought of supreme power,
Did you not say follow us,
And you shall reign?

First Anabaptist:
And again we offer thee
A crown to be a king.

John:
Can I then destroy my enemies?

Anabaptists:
At thy word they shall be Destroyed in an instant.

The compact is soon made and they depart, leaving some blood-stained garments to lead Fidès to believe John has been slain by the Count's assassins.

ACT III

SCENE—Camp of Anabaptists in the Westphalia Forest

The city of Munster is about to be besieged by the rebels, and before proceeding to the charge, John, now the Prophet, and in command of the rebels, makes them kneel and pray for victory. They chant the Miserere, and John sings this noble Inno or hymn.

Re del cielo e dei beati (Triumphal Hymn, "King of Heaven")

By Francesco Tamagno, Tenor (Piano acc.) (In Italian) 95005 10-inch, $5.00
By Antonio Paoli, Tenor, and La Scala Chorus (Italian) 91080 10-inch, 2.00
By Luigi Colazza, Tenor (Double-faced—See p. 351) (Italian) 16578 10-inch, .75

John:
King of Heaven and of the angels,
I will praise Thee,
Like David, Thy servant.
A voice I heard—"Array thyself,
And safely on I will guide thee."
Praise to the Omnipotent!
Yes, victory is on our side,

Let's unfurl the sacred flag,
He whom we serve is Lord
Of Heaven and earth.
Let's sing and march away.
The eye of Heaven will watch over us,
A supreme power will guide us!
With songs of joy—with shouts of glory—
On—on to Munster!

Three renditions of this inspiring number are presented. Tamagno, who was perhaps the most famous of all Prophets, sings the air gloriously, while other fine records are furnished by Colazza and Paoli, the latter being assisted by La Scala Chorus.
ACT IV

SCENE I—A Public Square in Munster

The insurgents have captured the city. The Prophet is received with mixed feelings, some denouncing him as an impostor. Fidès, reduced to beggary, meets Bertha, who has escaped from the Count and come to Munster to seek John. Fidès tells her John is dead, and Bertha, thinking the Prophet is responsible, swears to have vengeance.

SCENE II—The Munster Cathedral

This magnificent cathedral scene is one of Meyerbeer’s most brilliant compositions. It forms a striking contrast to the rest of the opera, so gloomy with religious and political fanaticism, and as a piece of glittering pageantry with gorgeous decoration, pealing bells, solemn chants, and the stately Coronation March, has seldom been equaled.

Coronation March

By Arthur Pryor’s Band

31503 12-inch, $1.00

The great symphonic march which occurs in this scene is by far the most striking instrumental number in Meyerbeer’s opera. It is brilliant and powerful, with superb instrumentation, and always produces a marked effect on the listener.

As John passes into the church, Fidès sees him, and in a transport of joy greets him as her son. He declares she is mad, knowing it is death to both if he acknowledges her. She finally realizes the situation, confesses that she is mistaken, and is led away to prison.

Fidès:
Yes, the light comes to my darkened eyes.
People, I have deceived you—
It is not my son!—I have no longer a son.

People:
Hail to the great Prophet.

ACT V

SCENE I—The Crypt of the Palace at Munster

The first scene takes place in the prison vaults beneath the palace, where Fidès, feeling certain that John will contrive to see her, patiently awaits his coming. She at first denounces him as an ungrateful son, then, prays that Heaven may lead him to repent.

Prison Scene

By Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Contralto (In French) 88095 12-inch, $3.00

Fidès (alone):
O! my cruel destiny! Whither have you led me?
What, the walls of a prison! they arrest my footsteps.
I am no longer free.
Bertha swore my son’s death, he denied his mother;
On his head let the wrath of Heaven fall!

(her wrath subsides.)
Though thou hast abandoned me,
But my heart is disarmed,
Thy mother pardons thee.
Yes, I am still a mother.
I have given my cares that thou may’st be happy,
Now I would give my life,
And my soul exalted, will wait for thee in heaven!

An officer enters and announces the arrival of the Prophet,
Fidès then begins the second part of her great scene.

Fidès (joyfully):
He comes!
I shall see him, delightful hope!
Oh, truth! daughter of heaven,
May thy flame, like lightning,
Strike the soul of an ungrateful son.
Celestial flame restore to him calmness!
Restore, bless’d Heaven, his guardian angel!
Immortal grace, Oh! conqu'ring come;
With thy pure love his heart reprove;
Tho’ he be guilty, save him now
From that dark abyss which threatens to engulf him;
Let thy light pierce this ingrate son,
Conscience riv’n, his soul soften,
Like brass in furnace fierce,
That he may ascend and reign in Heav’n!

When John enters, Fidès denounces the bloody deeds of the Anabaptists and calls on her son to repent and renounce his false robes.

Fidès:
But thou, whom the world detests,
Yes, thou, braving Heaven’s behests;
Thou, whose fell hand is reeking with blood;
Go thou, my son no longer now!
Far from my heart, far from my eyes—
Blood-stain’d, go!

John confesses his sins and pleads for forgiveness, finally kneeling and receiving her blessing, just as a faithful officer enters and informs John that the Anabaptists are plotting to deliver him to the Emperor’s forces, which are marching on the city.

Bertha enters through a secret passage, revealed to her by her grandfather, who was once keeper of the palace. She has resolved to blow up the palace and the false Prophet, and is horrified to learn that John is the Prophet. She denounces him for his crimes, and declaring she has no longer reason to live, stabs herself.

John, in despair, resolves to die with his enemies, and sending away his mother, plans to have the palace set on fire, and goes to the banquet hall.

SCENE II—The Great Hall of the Palace

After the Emperor’s forces have entered, crying, “Death to the Prophet,” John orders the gates closed. An explosion occurs and the palace falls, carrying down to death John and all his enemies.

Oberthal:
You are my prisoner!

John:
Nay, ye are all my captives!
(An explosion takes place, the walls fall and flames spread on every side.)

John (to Gione and Oberthal):
Thou, traitor! and thou, tyrant! shalt perish with me;
Justice has sealed our doom;
We, all guilty, are all punished!

(A woman with dishevelled hair rushes through the ruins into John’s arms. He recognizes his mother.)

John:
My mother!

Fidès:
Yes, receive my pardon; I will die with thee!

Fidès and John:
Welcome, sacred flame!
To you celestial sphere may our souls take flight!
Adieu!
(As the flames mount about them the curtain falls.)

Chorus of Puritans, Soldiers of Cromwell, Heralds and Men-at-Arms of Lord Arthur, Countrymen and Women, Damsels, Pages and Servants.

Scene and Period: England in the neighborhood of Plymouth, in the period preceding the impeachment and execution of Charles II by Parliament.

Previous to Mr. Hammerstein's revival in 1906, Puritani had not been given in America since the production of 1883, with Gerster as Elvira. This is not strange, as the opera on the whole is somewhat dreary, only the few numbers the Victor has collected being really worth hearing.

The plot is rather a foolish one: the libretto being one of the poorest ever written for Bellini, but the music is delightful and fascinating. However, we will briefly sketch the story, as it will add to the enjoyment of the lovely melodies of Bellini which the Victor has recorded. The only available translation is a very unsatisfactory one, but a few quotations are given.

The action occurs in England in the time of the Stuarts, during the civil war between the Royalists and the Puritans. Lord Walton, the Puritan Governor-General, has a daughter Elvira, whom he wishes to marry to Richard Forth, a Puritan colonel, but the young girl loves an enemy, Lord Arthur.

ACT I

SCENE I—Exterior of a Fortress near Plymouth

At the beginning of Act I, Forth, learning that Elvira loves Arthur, and that her father refuses to force her into an unwelcome marriage, is disconsolate and gives vent to his feeling in a famous air, best known as Ah per sempre ("To me forever lost"). The Battistini record, however, takes its title from the second part of the number.

Bel sogno beato di pace (Blissful Dream)

By Mattia Battistini, Baritone (In Italian) 88352 12-inch, $3.00

FORTH:
Ah! to me forever lost,
Flow'r of love, and hope the dearest!
Life, to me thou now appearest,
Gloomy and with tempests cross'd.
Oh, happy and lovely dream of peace and joy!
Oh, change thou my fate, or change my heart!
Ah, what a keen torment, in the day of grief,
Becomes the memory of a vanish'd love!

Bruno, a Puritan officer, enters and offers Sir Richard command of the army. He refuses, saying that his disappointment in love has unfitted him for so high an honor.
SCENE II—Elvira’s Room in the Castle

The next scene shows Elvira’s apartment, where her uncle, Sir George, in a fine air, tells her that he has persuaded her father to consent to her marriage with Arthur. This is sung here by de Segurola and issued as a double-faced record, the opposite selection being the Infelice from Ernani.

Sorgea la notte (The Night Was Growing Dark)

By A. Perelló de Segurola, Bass

(In Italian) 55007 12-inch. $1.50

The night was growing dark, And heav’n and earth were silent,— Favorable the sad hour, Thy prayer’s gave courage to my soul, And to thy sire I went.

Thus I began,—“My brother”— “Your angel-like Elvira Is for the valiant Arthur pining— Should she another wed, Oh, wretched one! she dies!”

Said thy father “She is to Richard promised!” “Thy unhappy child,” repeated I, “will die.” “Oh! say not so,” he cried, “I must yield, let Elvira live,— Ah! may she be happy— Let her live in love!”

Elvira is overjoyed, and expresses her gratitude. Trumpets are now heard, and Elvira’s surprise is complete when Lord Arthur arrives, attended by squires and pages, and bearing nuptial presents, prominent among which is a splendid white veil, soon to play an important part in the events to come.

Shortly after his arrival Arthur discovers that the widow of Charles I is in the castle under sentence of death, and his sense of duty toward the late Queen impels him to contrive her escape by concealing her in Elvira’s veil, the guards thinking it is the bride. The escape is soon discovered and Elvira, supposing that her lover has deserted her on the eve of her bridal day, becomes insane. All denounce Arthur and swear to be revenged.

ACT II

SCENE—The Puritan Camp

Act II shows the camp of the Puritan forces. Sir George announces that Parliament has condemned Arthur to death for aiding in the escape of the late Queen. Elvira enters, demented, and sings her famous air, much like the Mad Scene in Lucia.

Qui la voce (In Sweetest Accents)

By Marcella Sembrich, Soprano

(In Italian) 88105 12-inch. $3.00

She recalls her first meeting with Arthur and repeats the vows he swore.

Elvira:

It was here in accents sweetest, He would call me—he calls no more! Here affection swore he to cherish, That dream so happy, alas! is o’er! We no more shall be united, I’m in sorrow doomed to sigh, Oh, to hope once more restore me, Or in pity let me die! (Her mood changes.)

Yes,—my father: thou call’st me to the temple?

’Tis no dream, my Arthur, oh, my love! Ah, thou art smiling—thy tears thou diest, Fond Hymen guiding, I quickly follow! Then dancing and singing. All nuptial feasts providing. (Dancing toward Richard, whom she takes by the hand.)

And surely you will dance with me— Come to the altar.
Eloïra's uncle, hoping that the sight of her lover will restore her reason, begs Sir Richard to pardon the young man. Richard consents, provided he returns helplessly and in peril, but if he comes bearing arms against his country he shall die. Sir George agrees to this, and in the splendid Sound the Trumpet they pledge themselves to fight together for their country.

Suoni la tromba (Sound the Trumpet)
By Pasquale Amato, Baritone, and Marcel Journet, Bass
(In Italian) 89056 12-inch, $4.00

This favorite duet, often sung in concert, has been aptly described as a "stentorian" number. It is undeniably a most vigorous piece of declamation, and if the loyalty of Sir George and Sir Richard can be judged by the vigor of the usual rendition, they are loyal indeed!

Sir Richard and Sir George:
Sound, sound the trumpet loudly!
Bravely we'll meet the foe men,
'Tis sweet affronting death!
Bold love of country aiding,
The victor's wreath unfading,
Will unto us be proudly
Restor'd by Love and Faith!
Morn! rising on a nation,
Whose only trust is freedom—
Will bring us eternal fame!
Earth's tyrants who dissemble,
At the war-message tremble,
Midst the world's execution
They sink in endless shame!

The Puritans then renew their pledge as to Arthur, saying:

Sir George:
All is now concluded,
If Arthur is defenceless—
Richard:
He'll find support and succor.
Sir George:
If he in arms returns—
Richard:
He comes to shame and vengeance!

ACT III

SCENE—A Garden near Eloïra's House

The rise of the curtain discloses Arthur, who is fleeing from the enemy, and has come to the castle in the hope of seeing Eloïra once more before he leaves England forever. She comes from the castle and at the sight of Arthur her reason suddenly returns. The lovers are reconciled after Arthur explains that it was in the service of his Queen that he had fled from the castle. They sing a lovely duet:

Vieni fra queste braccia (Come to My Arms)
By Maria Galvany, Soprano, and Francesco Marconi, Tenor
(In Italian) 89046 12-inch, $4.00

Forgetting their present danger, they think only of their love and that they are in each other's arms again.

Arthur:
Come, come to my arms,
Thou my life's sole delight!
And thus press'd to my heart,
We'll no more disunite!
Thrill'd with anxious love and fear,
On thee I call—for thee I sigh—
Come, and say the love is dear
That soareth to boundless height!

The sound of a drum is heard, and Eloïra again becomes delirious, which so alarms Arthur that he thinks not of escape and is captured by the Puritan forces. The sentence of death is read to him and he is being led to his execution, when a messenger arrives from Cromwell saying that the Stuarts were defeated and a pardon had been granted to all captives. Eloïra's reason returns, and the lovers are finally united.

Scene: Jerusalem and vicinity.

Mosenthal's story tells of the struggle of Assad, a courtier of Solomon, against fleshly temptation, and of his final victory which involves the sacrifice of the happiness of his betrothed, Sulamith.

For this text Goldmark furnished some of the most beautiful and sensuous music in the entire range of opera, and it is an interesting detail that after he had finished his opera and had submitted it to the Imperial Opera, Vienna, it was not accepted on the ground that it was too "exotic"! Later, through the influence of Princess Hohenlohe, it was presented and was a great success.

ACT I

The wisdom and fame of Solomon having reached even distant Arabia, the Queen of Sheba decides to visit him, and a favorite courtier, Assad, has been sent to meet her and escort her to the city. When Assad arrives with the Queen, his betrothed, Sulamith, is astonished to find him pale and embarrassed, and trying to avoid her. Assad afterward confesses to Solomon that he had met a beautiful woman at Lebanon and had fallen in love with her. When the Queen of Sheba arrives and removes her veil, Assad is astounded to recognize in her the mysterious woman who had captured his senses. Involuntarily he rushes toward her, but she coldly repulses him and passes on with the King.

ACT II

In Act II the Queen discovers that she loves Assad, and seeing him in the garden, bids her maid attract his attention with a weird Oriental song. Assad starts when he hears the mysterious air, as it seems to bring back memories of the night at Lebanon. He sings his beautiful air, Magic Tones.

Magiche note (Magic Tones!)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor

(In Italian) 87041 10-inch, $2.00

A lovely melody, sung at first in mezzo-voce, develops gradually until the intense and passionate climax is reached.

The Queen and Assad soon meet and confess their love for each other, but are interrupted by the arrival of the night guard.

ACT III

In the next scene the Court assembles for the wedding of Sulamith and Assad, but Assad insults his bride and declares his love for the Queen. He is banished from Jerusalem and finally dies in the arms of Sulamith, who is crossing the desert on her way to a convent.
La Reine de Saba is one of the four operas which Gounod composed between his Faust (1859) and Romeo (1867). None of these works have been very successful, but they contain much beautiful music.

ACT I

SCENE I—The Studio of Adoniram

The curtain rises, disclosing Adoniram at work on an important group of statuary. Benoni enters and informs him that the King desires his presence, as the Queen of Sheba is expected to arrive at any moment. As Adoniram prepares to leave the studio his workmen demand higher wages, but he refuses them and they go out muttering threats.

SCENE II—Square in front of the Temple

The Queen arrives and is welcomed by King Solomon and the people. Adoniram is presented to her as one of Palestine's great artists, and she seems greatly impressed by the handsome young sculptor.

ACT II

SCENE—Moulding Room of Adoniram's Studio

King Solomon and the Queen have promised to come and see the final casting of Adoniram's masterpiece, and he is preparing for this event when Benoni enters hurriedly and reveals the plot of the workmen, who have stopped the channels so that the melted bronze cannot flow. His information comes too late, and the molten mass overflows, apparently ruining the statue.

ACT III

SCENE—Open place on the Feiche

Adoniram meets the Queen of Sheba here, and she confesses her love for him. He is at first inclined to repel her advances, but soon falls under the spell of her fascinations and clasps her in his arms. He tells her that he also is of her race, the Nimrod. The faithful Benoni hurriedly enters in search of Adoniram, telling him that in spite of the plot of the workmen the moulding of his statue has been successful.

ACT IV

SCENE—The Great Hall of Solomon's Palace

Adoniram is received by Solomon and the Court and proclaimed the greatest sculptor of the time. All leave the hall except Solomon and the Queen, who gives a sign to her maid, Sarahil, to bring a draught which she presents to Solomon. He soon falls asleep at the feet of the Queen, who takes the ring from his finger and leaves the Palace.

ACT V

SCENE—The Valley of Hebron

Adoniram and the Queen have planned to fly together, and are already approaching the meeting place, when three of Adoniram's discontented workmen, bent on revenge, set upon and stab him. The Queen hurries to his side and falls on his body, cursing his murderers and Solomon.

The Victor has selected four numbers from Queen of Sheba which are worthy of preservation—the first being the splendid recitative and air, Lend Me Your Aid, sung by Evan Williams; the second the great air of the Queen, given by Mme. Gerville-Reache; two records of the Sous les pieds by Journet and Witherspoon; and a Sousa's Band record of the Queen of Sheba March. This famous marche et cortège is a grand number, and played with the full strength of the band.

THE SHEPHERD KING

DRAMATIC CANTATA IN TWO ACTS

Text by Metastasio; music by Mozart. First production Salzburg, April 23, 1775. The libretto is the one used for Bono's opera of the same name, given in Vienna in 1751.

Characters

ALESSANDRO, King of Macedonia.
AMINTA, shepherd descendant of the Kings of Sidon and lover of Elisa.
ELISA, shepherdess.
TAMIRI, fugitive princess, daughter of the tyrant Stratone.
AGENOR, noble of Sidon, lover of Tamiri and friend of Alessandro.

The opera of "Il Rè Pastore" was written by Mozart in honor of the Archduke Maximilian, the composer having been ordered to produce the work for the entertainment of the Archduke during his visit to Salzburg in 1775.

The story tells of the capture of Sidon, the execution of the usurper Stratone by Alessandro, King of Macedonia, who places on the throne the rightful king, Aminta, who has been living as a shepherd. Alessandro plans that the new king shall marry Tamiri, daughter of Stratone, but Aminta is already in love with Elisa, a shepherdess, and rather than give her up he refuses the crown. The King, pleased with Aminta's fidelity, gives his consent to the marriage with Elisa and establishes the couple upon the throne. He also gives Tamiri to her lover Agenor, and promises them the next kingdom he shall conquer.

The aria L'amero saro costante, which Melba has sung for the Victor, was a great favorite with Jenny Lind. The beauty of Mozart's music is enhanced by the pure vocalization of Melba, and no fitter vehicle of expression for the composer's beautiful melody than the perfect vocal organ of this great singer could be imagined. The double cadenza at the conclusion for voice and instrument is an intricate and striking one, and provides a strong and effective climax to Melba's performance of this fine air. Kubelik's playing of the violin part is a masterly performance.

Rheingold is not a "society" opera. Played in complete darkness and with no intermissions during the two hours required for its presentation, it is a work only for real music-lovers who understand something of the story and appreciate Wagner's wonderful music.

This first part of the Ring is an introduction to the Trilogy proper, and a full understanding of its incidents is necessary to properly appreciate the other Ring operas.

SCENE I—The Bottom of the Rhine

The stage is in semi-darkness, representing the murky depths of the Rhine, and the light glimmering on the surface of the water above shows but faintly the three Rhine maidens guarding the Rheingold.

They sing their quaint songs as they float about the rock which conceals the treasure.

MOTIVE OF THE RHINE MAIDENS
Alberich, prince of the Nibelungs, a strange race of dwarfs who dwell deep in the earth, observes the beauty of the maidens and tries to make love to them. They laugh at him and evade with ease his clumsy endeavors to catch them. Suddenly, as the sun rises, the gleam of the Rhinegold is seen. Alberich, dazzled by the splendor of this glow, asks what it is, and the maidens foolishly inform him that whoever can secure this treasure and form it into a ring can become lord of all the world. One condition, however, is that the possessor cannot wield this power unless he renounces forever the joys of love.

Alberich, having failed in his amorous attempts towards the Naiads, now conceives an ambition for power. He cries, "Then love I renounce forever," and swimming to the rock, he tears the gold from its place and flees, while from the complete darkness which ensues comes the dwarf's mocking laughter and the wailing of the maidens who are moaning for their lost treasure.

SCENE II—A Mountain Top, Showing the Castle of Walhalla

During this darkness the scene changes and as the stage becomes lighter we see Walhalla, the abode of the gods, a wonderful castle built for Wotan by the giants. Wotan and his wife are lying asleep on a flowery bank, but soon wake and see the castle which has been built while they slept. Wotan is overjoyed at the glorious sight, but the more practical Fricka reminds him of the price which he had agreed to pay the giants for this godly dwelling; this being the surrender of Freia, goddess of youth and beauty. Wotan tells her that he never intended to keep his agreement, the god Loge having promised to show him a way to evade payment.

Freia now hastily enters, closely pursued by the giants Fasolt and Fafner, who call upon Wotan to deliver the goddess to them as agreed. Wotan repudiates his promise, saying that it was made only in jest.

WOTAN:
How sly to take for truth
What only in sport we had settled!
This beauteous goddess, light and bright,
What use to you are her charms?

Frisch and Donner, Fricka's brothers, enter, also Loge, and a long argument ensues, Wotan finally realizing that he must give up Freia to the giants. Loge, however, tells them of the Rhinegold, saying that if this treasure could be stolen from Alberich by Wotan, it might be accepted by the giants in place of Freia. Wotan refuses to entertain this plan and the giants seize Freia and carry her off, declaring that if the Rhinegold is not in their hands by night the original bargain must stand, and Freia be lost to the gods forever.

Left alone, the gods realize the serious predicament they are in, especially as it is seen that, deprived of their youth goddess, they are suddenly aging. Wotan thereupon decides to secure the Nibelungs' gold, and goes with Loge in search of Alberich. A vapor arises from the earth, concealing the stage, and when it disappears the scene has changed.

SCENE III—Alberich's Cave

Alberich, since he has acquired the Rhinegold, has become more arrogant and cruel than ever, and compels Mime and the other Nibelungs to continually toil and slave to bring him in more gold. At the beginning of the scene he is berating Mime for loitering over his task of making a Tarnhelm, or magic cap, fashioned from the Rhinegold, and which gives the wearer the power to become invisible. Wotan and Loge now enter on this scene and are rudely greeted by Alberich, who demands their business, and holding out the Ring bids them tremble at his power. They at first craftily flatter him, but he is surly and says that naught but envy could have brought them here. Wotan is angry and is about to voice his wrath when the crafty Loge makes him a sign to be quiet and begins to taunt Alberich, doubting his power. Alberich is so enraged that he offers to change himself into any shape required to prove the magic of the Tarnhelm, and immediately becomes a huge dragon. Loge affects extreme terror, at which Alberich laughs and resumes his human shape again. The god then cunningly asks him to change to a toad, which shape he has no sooner assumed than Loge puts his foot on the toad and seizes the Tarnhelm, thus robbing Alberich of his power. His natural form returns and they bind him and start for the upper earth. The scene changes again to the mountain summit.

SCENE IV—Same as Scene II

Wotan and Loge enter, dragging the helpless Alberich, who is beside himself with rage. They demand that he give them his hoarded store of gold as the price of his freedom. He reluctantly obeys and summons the Nibelungs, who instantly swarm up from below carrying the hoard. He then asks to be set free, but Wotan demands also the Ring. Alberich is horrified, but is finally compelled to add it to the pile of gold. He then sings his bitter and ironical air, Bin ich nun frei?
Bin ich nun frei?
(Am I Now Free?)

By Otto Goritz, Baritone
(In German)
64203 10-inch, $1.00

He lays a frightful curse on the Ring, predicting that it will bring misery and death to each possessor until it is restored to him again.

Alberich (with bitter irony):

Am I now free?—
Really free?
Then listen, friends,
To my freedom's first salute!—
As at first by my curse 'twas reached,
Henceforth cursed be this ring!
Gold which gave me measureless might,
Now may its magic deal each owner death!
No man shall e'er own it in mirth,
And to gladden no life shall its luster gleam.
May care consume each several possessor,
And envy gnaw him who neareth it not!
All shall lust after its delights,
But none shall employ them to profit him.
To its master giving no gain,
Aye the murd'rer's brand it shall bring.
To death he is fated,

Its fear on his fancy shall feed;
Though long he live shall he languish each day,
The treasure's lord and the treasure's slave:
Till within my hand I in triumph once more behold it!—
So—stirred by the hardest need,
The Nibelung blesses his ring!—
I give it thee,—guard it with care—
But my curse canst thou not flee!

Weiche, Wotan, weiche!
(Waver, Wotan)

By Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Contralto
(Wotan's responses by Mr. Witherspoon)
(In German) 88092 12-inch, $3.00

She warns him solemnly that the Ring is cursed and charges him to give it up.
Hear! hear! What? I from Gotterdammerung! I, so-hailed Wotan's curse, ruines to my boundless downfall. I, will I hear? I, will I hear? All that exists, endeth! A dismal day dawns for the Æsir: O render wisely the ring! (She begins to sink slowly into the earth.)

Wotan: A secret spell speaks in thy words: Wait and impart more wisdom.

Erda (disappearing): I've warned thee now; thou wott'st enough: Pause and ponder truth! (She completely disappears.)

Mme. Schumann-Heink sings this powerful number with dignity and dramatic force.

Wotan at last yields and throws the Ring on the heap of gold. The giants, as if to prove the curse, immediately begin to quarrel about its possession, and Fasolt is killed by Fafner; after which the murderer coolly proceeds to collect the gold and then departs.

Donner, the god of thunder, now calls up a storm and causes a magic rainbow bridge to form, making a passage to the castle.

Wotan then sings the famous invocation to the Castle of Valhalla, which gleams with great brilliance, illumined by the setting sun. The god, absorbed in contemplation of the castle, sings:

Wotan: See how at eve the eye of sunlight
With glorious touch gilds turret and tower!
In the morning glamour, manful and glad,
It bided masterless, mildly beckoning to me.

As the gods proceed across the bridge to Valhalla the voices of the Rhine maidens can be heard from below, still bewailing the loss of their gold.

Scene and Period: Mantua and vicinity; sixteenth century.

The story tells of the gay and unprincipled Duke of Mantua, who is assisted in his crimes by his jester, Rigoletto, a hunchback. The father of one of the Duke's victims is mocked by Rigoletto and launches upon him a father's awful curse, which stuns and sobers the jester, as he, too, has a daughter, Gilda, unknown to the court.

On his way home Rigoletto meets a professional assassin, Sparafucile, who offers, for a price, to kill any enemy he may have. Rigoletto says he may need him later. The Duke, in the guise of a young student, has already met Gilda, not knowing who she is, and the young girl has fallen in love with him. When Rigoletto has left the house the Duke's courtiers abduct Gilda and take her to the Palace. The father's rage is terrible to witness, and he goes to the Palace, but too late to save his daughter. She pleads for the Duke's life, but Rigoletto swears to kill him, and arranges with the assassin, Sparafucile, to accomplish the deed. The Duke is lured to a lonely inn by Sparafucile's attractive sister, Maddalena, and is about to be murdered when Maddalena, who has taken a fancy to him, begs for his life. Sparafucile consents provided a substitute should happen along before midnight. Gilda, whom Rigoletto had brought hither (disguised as a page) in order that she might witness the fickleness of her lover, has been listening to the conversation, and now resolves to save the Duke's life at the cost of her own. She enters the hut, is stabbed by Sparafucile, who delivers the body to Rigoletto according to agreement. Rigoletto is about to cast the body into the river when he hears the Duke's voice in the distance. The wretched man opens the sack, sees his daughter and falls senseless on her body.

ACT I

SCENE 1—Ballroom in the Duke's Palace

As a fête is in progress in the ducal residence, the Duke confides to one of his courtiers that he is about to make a new conquest. For some months he has seen a young and beautiful girl at church, but knows nothing of her except that she is visited often by a man who is supposed to be her lover. The Duke then sings his first air, Questo o quella.

Questa o quella ('Mid the Fair Throng)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor
By Florencio Constantino, Tenor

This melodious number is perhaps the best of the Duke's solos, though usually cast somewhat in the background by the popular La donna e mobile. In it the Duke announces himself as a man of pleasure, sets forth his code of morals, and boasts of his conquests.

Duke:

'Mid the fair throng that sparkle around me,
Not one o'er my heart holds sway;
Though a sweet smile one moment may charm me,
A glance from some bright eye its spell drives away.
All alike may attract, each in turn may please;
Now with one I may trifle and play,
Then another may sport with and tease—
Yet all my heart to enslave their wiles display.

As a dove flies, alarm'd, to seek shelter,
Pursued by some vulture, to bear it aloft in flight,
Thus do I fly from constancy's fetter:
E'en women's spells I shun—all their efforts I slight.
A husband that's jealous I scorn and despise,
And I laugh at and heed not a lover's sighs;
If a fair one take my heart by surprise,
I heed not scornful tongues or prying eyes.

Caruso's interpretation of the Duke is quite different from the one to which opera-goers have been accustomed. He does not picture Mantua as a deliberate villain, a fiend in human guise, but as a light-hearted, careless and irresponsible devotee of pleasure,—so attractive that the infatuation of Gilda seems wholly natural. This air is always sung by the tenor with perfect ease and extreme brilliancy, and the record is a superb one, not surpassed by any in his list.
Victor Book of the Opera—Verdi's Rigoletto

Constantino, who has made a great success as the Duke in recent seasons, both at the Manhattan Opera and in Boston, sings this gay air with grace and abandon.

After making another enemy in the person of the Count Ceprano, by his marked attention to the latter’s wife, the Duke departs. Marullo enters and eagerly announces to the courtiers a rich discovery. Rigoletto, the Duke’s jester, is in love! The courtiers refuse to believe this, as Rigoletto is known as a confirmed woman-hater. Marullo insists that the jester makes frequent visits to a young girl. The nobles, who all hate Rigoletto for his cruel tongue, are eager to turn this knowledge into a means of revenge, and agree to meet Ceprano the next evening for a rare adventure.

The voice of the aged Count Monterone, whose daughter is one of the recent victims of the Duke, is now heard outside demanding admittance. He throw aside the guards who seek to stop him, and entering, denounces the Duke for his crimes.

Ch’io le parli (I Will Speak to Him)

By Francesco Cigada, Baritone; Aristo-demo Sillich, Bass; La Scala Chorus

(In Italian) 68190 12-inch, $1.25

Rigoletto ridicules and mocks the old man, who calls him a “vile buffoon,” and then, in an awful rage, utters so terrible a curse upon him—the curse of a father—that all are horrified.

Rigoletto is stunned and sobered by this terrible maldecition, for he, too, has a daughter, unknown to the court; and love for his child and respect for her dead mother are the sole redeeming traits in his cruel nature.

Monterone is removed by the guards, and the scene changes to the street in front of Rigoletto’s house.

Scene II—A Street; Rigoletto’s Cottage on one side, opposite the Palace of Count Ceprano

The jester enters, brooding with superstitious fear over the curse which had been laid upon him. He is accosted by Sparafucile, a professional assassin, who offers to rid him of an enemy if he has one. Rigoletto looks at him thoughtfully and says that if he has need of his services he will inform him. Sparafucile departs and Rigoletto delivers his famous monologue.

Monologo—Pari siamo (We Are Equal)

By Mario Sammarco, Baritone
By Titta Ruffo, Baritone
By Ernesto Badini, Baritone

He looks at theretreating form of the bravand says:

Rigoletto:
You assassin is my equal—
He stabs in darkness,
While I with a tongue of malice
Stab men by daylight!
(He thinks of Monterone’s curse.)
He laid a father’s curse on me.
(Continuing in a burst of rage.)
Oh hideous fate! Cruel nature!
Thou hast doom’d me to a life of torment.
I must jest, I must laugh.
And be their laughing stock!
Yonder the Duke, my master,
Youthful and brilliant, rich and handsome.

The jester enters the court-yard and is affectionately greeted by Gilda, who comes from the house. She notes his anxious looks and begs him to confide in her. She asks him about her mother, whom she but dimly remembers. Rigoletto avoids her question and sings a pathetic air, in which he begs her to refrain from questions regarding their past life. The duet then follows:

Deh non parlaré al misero (Recall Not the Past)

By Mme. Magrini, Soprano, and Titta Ruffo, Baritone (In Italian) 89058 12-inch, $4.00

Rigoletto:
Recall not the past!
Speak not of one whose loss to thee
All earth can boast could ne'er restore;
Her angel form methinks I see.
Who lov'd me, though deform'd and poor.
Pity, oh! Gilda; spare me!

Gilda:
Father, dear father, calm yourself,
Or my heart will surely break.
To me your name pray tell;
The grief that saddens you impart.

Rigoletto bids his daughter a tender farewell and takes his departure. The Duke, again dressed as a student, now enters, having previously purchased the silence of Giovanna. Gilda is alarmed, not thinking her innocent flirtation in the church would lead to this, and bids him begone, but he reassures her, beginning a fine duet.

He soothes her fears, telling her he loves her with a pure devotion.

Duke:
Love is the sun by which passion is lighted,
Happy the mortal who feels its power;
Each pleasure once priz'd without it seems blighted;
With it we heed not what fate may shower.
Feeling celestial, no joy terrestrial
Ever to me can such sweet joys impart.
Ah! may no blight ever this heart from thee sever;
Rest in my bosom, ne'er to depart!
Footsteps are now heard, and after a tender farewell he leaves, after telling her that his name is Walter Malde.

Gilda remains pensively gazing at the gate through which the pretended student has departed. In rapturous soliloquy she sings:

Gilda:
Walter Malde! That romantic name!
Already it is on my heart engraven!

Then the lovely air, Caro Nome, begins.

Gilda:
Car' d upon my inmost heart
Is that name forevermore
Ne'er again from thence to part,
Name of love that I adore,
Thou to me are ever near,
Ev'ry thought to thee will fly,
Life for thee alone is dear,
Thine shall be my parting sigh!
(Gilda enters the house, but reappears on the balcony.)
Oh, dearest name!
Oh name beloved!

(She disappears, but can be heard from within.)
Oh! name beloved!
Dear name, within this breast,
Thy mem'ry will remain!
My love for thee confess'd,
No power can restrain!
Carved upon my inmost heart
Is that name for evermore,
Ev'ry thought to thee will fly,
Thine shall be my parting sigh,
Oh Walter mine!

Melba's rendition is worthy of so exquisite a number, and she has surpassed herself here. The ease with which she sings is wonderful, and her voice shows in an unusual degree that luscious smoothness, golden purity and perfect equality for which it is noted.

The character of Gilda is always represented by Mme. Sembrich with genuine simplicity, yet with truly impassioned feeling where occasion calls for it; as in this tuneful "Caro nome," when the young girl in soliloquy dwells with rapture on the name of her lover.

Tetrazzini's delivery of this lovely air is marked by surpassing beauty of tone, the roulades, trills and staccatos in the concluding portion being poured out lavishly and with the utmost ease and fluency. Other adequate renditions, at lower prices, are also listed above.

Night has now fallen and the courtiers, led by Ceprano, enter, wearing masks. Rigoletto returns and is much alarmed to see them in this neighborhood, but his fears are allayed when they announce that they have come to carry off Ceprano's wife, as he is well aware that the Duke has had designs on that lady for some time past. He tells them Ceprano's palace is on the opposite side and offers to help them. They insist that he must be disguised and contrive to give him a mask which covers his eyes and ears, and lead him in a circle back to his own balcony, giving him a ladder to hold. Gilda is seized, her mouth gagged with a handkerchief, and she is carried away.

Rigoletto, suddenly finding himself alone, becomes suspicious, tears off his mask and finds himself at his own balcony. Frantic with fear he rushes in, finds his daughter gone, and falls in a swoon as the curtain descends.

ACT II

SCENE—A Hall in the Duke's Palace

Parmi veder le lagrime (Each Tear That Falls)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor

In Italian

88429 12-inch. $3.00

The Duke, after his tender parting with Gilda, in the previous act, had again returned to the Jester's house, only to find it deserted and the young girl gone. Not knowing that his courtiers had carried her off under the very nose of Rigoletto, he bewails the unhappy fate which has robbed him of his latest conquest. As we hear him sing his pathetic lament, we forget his real nature and almost sympathize with the unhappy lover!

This melodious number has been much neglected in American performances of the opera, being usually omitted.

The Duke:

Dear maid, each tear that bosom heaving
Each sad sigh that bosom heaving
Fills me with grief there's no relieving.
Ah! vainly didst thou cry to me,
"Help me, dear Walter, help!"

No aid could I afford thee;
Yet, could my life thy woes repay,
Gladly exchang'd it should be.
Not e'en the angels' blessed abode
Could peace to me restore,
If from thee apart.

The courtiers enter and tell the Duke that they have captured Rigoletto's mistress. He expresses his appreciation of the adventure, not knowing they had abducted the young girl he had just left, and asks for particulars. They sing their chorus, Scorrondo unioe.

Scorrondo unioe remota via (On Mischief Bent)

By New York Grand Opera Chorus

(In Italian)

64049 10-inch. $1.00

which gives the details of the huge joke they have played on Rigoletto by making him assist in the capture of his own mistress.

Courtiers:

Unto a lonely abode directed,
When shades of evening were falling fast,
By dark'ning shadows we were protected
Until our game we spied at last;
With timid footsteps she scarce came nigh us,
We were preparing our prey to seize.
When Rigoletto just then came by us,
With angry brow and ill at ease.

And that the joke might be all the madder,
We said Ceprano's wife should be our prey,
We then desir'd him to hold the ladder;
His eyes were bandag'd, he did obey.
We swiftly mounted to the room,
And the startled beauty bore away!

When the Duke learns that Gilda is in an adjoining room he joyfully goes to her, saying that her fears will be soothed when she discovers he is the Walter Malde she loves.

Then occurs one of the most dramatic scenes in the opera, and the greatest opportunity for Rigoletto. This scene has been recorded in its entirety by Amato, one of the greatest of Rigolettos, assisted by Bada, Setti and the Metropolitan Chorus,
Povero Rigoletto! (Poor Rigoletto!)
By Pasquale Amato, with Bada, Setti and Chorus
88340 12-inch. $3.00

Rigoletto's voice is now heard outside, singing a careless air. He enters, affecting indifference, but trying to find some clue to Gilda's whereabouts. A page enters with a message for the Duke and the courtiers tell him their master cannot be disturbed. Rigoletto listens, his fears becoming confirmed, and he exclaims:

Rigoletto:
Ah, she must be here then!
In yonder chamber!
Courtiers: If a sweetheart you've lost,
Go somewhere else to seek her!

Rigoletto (with terrible emphasis):
Give me my daughter!
Courtiers (in astonishment):
What, his daughter?

His rage, now terrible to witness, is expressed in the second part, Courtigiani, vil razza.

He at first denounces them as abductors and assassins, then breaking down, asks for pity.

Rigoletto:
Race of courtiers, vile rabble detested.
Have ye sold her, whose peace ye molested?
Where is she? do not rouse me to madness—
Though unarmed, of my vengeance beware,
For the blood of some traitor I'll pour!
(Reeling and falling)

Rigoletto (overjoyed):
Gilda, my daughter!
My lost one—my treasure!
Angel, I've found thee!
Come tell me, 'twas but jesting?
(To the courtiers)
I who was weeping rejoice now.
(To Gilda.)
But why art thou weeping?

Ah, I weep before ye, Marullo, so kindless?
Others' grief never yet saw thee mindless,
Tell, oh tell where my child they have hidden,
Is't there?—say in pity—thou'rt silent! alas!
(On tears)

Gilda (hiding her face):
Dishonor, oh my father!
Rigoletto: Horror, what say'st thou?

Gilda:
Father, oh hide me from ev'ry eye but thine!
Rigoletto (imperiously, to the courtiers):
Hence, I command, and leave us!
If the worthless duke ye serve dares approach,
I forbid him to enter!
Say that, I charge ye!

The courtiers, somewhat ashamed, obey, and Gilda begins her pitiful confession.

On ev'ry festal morning
Near to the holy altar,
I saw a youth observing me,
Beneath whose gaze mine did falter,
Though not a word he said to me,
My heart his meaning well did know!
Last night he stood before me,
Fondly he vow'd to love me,
And I gave him vow for vow.

Rigoletto (despairingly):
Ah! that thou be spared my infamy
I've worshiped Heaven with praying,
That every good may light on thee
Far from the world's betraying,

Ah, in my hopeless misery.
My saint I have enshrined thee.
In horror and anguish here I must find thee,
Thy future all turned to woe!
(To Gilda.)
Daughter come, let me comfort thee in thy sorrow—

Father!

Gilda:
Yes, my father, let us go!
Rigoletto (aside):
Oh, how all our fate has been changed in a day!

The Count Monterone now passes through the hall under guard. He pauses before the Duke's portrait and exclaims:
Monterone:
Oh, then, 'twas in vain in my anger I cursed thee!
No thunder from Heaven yet hath burst down to strike thee.
With pleasure triumphant thy days yet are crowned.

ACT III

SCENE I—A Lonely Spot on the River Mincio

A house, half in ruins, at one side. The front of the house, open to the spectator, shows a rustic inn on the ground floor; a broken staircase leads from this to a loft, where stands a rough couch. On the side towards the street is a door, and a low wall extends backwords from the house. The Mincio is seen in the background, behind a ruined parapet; beyond, the towers of Mantua. It is night. Sparafucile is in the house, seated by a table polishing his belt, unconscious of what is spoken outside.

Rigoletto and Gilda, the latter in male attire, now approach the inn. Rigoletto pitifully asks his daughter if she still can love the Duke. She confesses that she does, and he exclaims:

RIGOLETTO:
Thou lovest him?
GILDA:
Always.
RIGOLETTO:
Still to love him is mere infatuation.
GILDA:
I love him.
RIGOLETTO:
Ah, tender heart of woman!
Oh, base despoiler!
Thou, my child, shalt yet have vengeance.

---

GILDA:
Nay, rather pity.
RIGOLETTO:
And if I could convince thee that he is worthless, wouldst thou still then love him?
GILDA:
Perhaps. Ah, he does love me!
RIGOLETTO (leads her towards the house to look through a fissure in the wall):
Come here, and look within.

She does so, and is startled to see the Duke, who comes in disguised as a soldier. He demands some wine, and while Sparafucile is serving him, sings his famous La donna è mobile.

This familiar canzone, beginning

\text{Woman is fickle, false altogether, Mov'd like the feather borne by the breeze} \\ is perhaps the best known of all the airs of the opera. Its spontaneous melody pictures the gay, irresponsible character of the young noble who thus sings of changeable womankind.

DUKE:
Woman is fickle, false altogether,
Moves like a feather borne on the breezes;
Woman with guiling smile will e'er deceive you,
Often can grieve you, yet e'er she pleases,
Her heart's unfeeling, false altogether;
Moves like a feather borne on the breeze,
Borne on the breeze, borne on the breeze!

Wretched the dupe is, who when she looks kindly,
Trusts to her blindly. Thus life is wasted!
Yet he must surely be dull beyond measure,
Who of love's pleasure never has tasted.
Woman is fickle, false altogether,
Moves like a feather, borne on the breeze!

Caruso delivers the gay air with an ease and abandon which are infectious, and sings the difficult cadenza in the second verse with unusual effectiveness.

Other renditions are given at varying prices.

At the close of the Duke's song Sparafucile enters with the wine. He knocks twice on the ceiling and a young girl comes down. The Duke tries to embrace her but she laughingly escapes him. Now occurs the great Quartet, one of the most famous of concerted pieces.

Among the musical gems with which the score of Rigoletto abounds, none is so well known and universally admired as this fine number, sung by the Duke, Gilda, Maddalena and Rigoletto. It is undoubtedly the most brilliant and musicianly of all Verdi's concerted pieces, and the contrasting emotions—the tender addresses and coquetry on the one side, and the heart-broken sobs of Gilda and the cries for vengeance of her father on the other—are pictured with the hand of a genius.

No less than five records of this great number, in various classes, also three instrumental renditions, are offered by the Victor. The singers who have been engaged for these records are all noted for their artistic interpretations of the characters represented. Caruso's Duke, with its glorious outpourings of luscious voice in the lovely airs; Sembrich's perfect portrayal with its wonderful vocalization; Abott's girlish and brilliantly sung impersonation; Homer's Maddalena, which is fascinating enough to attract any Duke, and whose one vocal opportunity occurs here; Scotti's truly wonderful and superbly sung Jester, one of the most powerful impersonations on the operatic stage—all these are familiar and admired portrayals; while the artists who render the black label records are all well-known and competent singers.

The situation at the opening of the act is a most dramatic one. The Duke, gay and... careless, is making love to Maddalena, all unconscious that the assassin hired by Rigoletto is waiting for his opportunity.

He sings, beginning the quartet:

Duke:
Fairest daughter of the graces,
I thy humble slave implore thee,
With one tender word to joy restore me,
End the pangs, the pangs of unrequited love.
Of my anguish see the traces,
Thy I treasure all above.

Maddalena (repulsing him):
I appreciate you rightly,
All you say is but to flatter.
Ah, I laugh to think how many
Yet your tender tale may move!

Rigoletto, who desires to prove to Gilda that her lover is false, bids her look through the window of the inn at the scene within. The unhappy girl, convinced, exclaims:

Gilda:
Ah, to speak of love thus lightly!
Words like these to me were spoken,
He is false; my heart is broken!

Rigoletto:
Silence, thy tears will not avail thee,
It were baseness to regret him!
Thou must shun him and forget him.
(With fierce joy.)
Thy avenger I will prove
The strength to punish will not fail me
That I vow to every power that rules above!

The Duke now goes to his bedroom and is soon asleep. Rigoletto bids his daughter go to Verona with all speed and he will meet her there. She reluctantly departs and Rigoletto pays Sparafucile half his price, the remainder to be paid on the delivery of the body of the Duke at midnight. Rigoletto goes away just as Gilda, who has disobeyed her father, returns and tries to see what is going on inside the house. Sparafucile enters the house and Maddalena, who has taken a fancy to the Duke, begs her brother to spare his life, delicately suggesting that he kill Rigoletto and take the money from him. Sparafucile is indignant and protests that he has never yet failed in his duty to his employers. Maddalena pleads with him and he finally says if another guest should enter he will kill him instead of the Duke.

Sparafucile:
If some one should enter ere midnight has sounded,
I promise that he for thy favorite shall die!
Gilda:
Oh, what a temptation! my fate! I have found it,
In silence and darkness, to save him and die!
During this dramatic scene a storm is raging, and in addition to the stage effects of thunder and lightning Verdi has the chorus humming in chromatic thirds to illustrate the moaning of the wind. This scene is given here in a most impressive record.

Tempesta—Somiglia un Apollo (He’s Fair as Apollo)

By Linda Brambilla, Soprano; Maria Cappiello, Mezzo-Soprano; Arisdemo Sillich, Bass; and La Scala Chorus (In Italian) 68190 12-inch. $1.25

Gilda hears this terrible agreement and the broken-hearted girl resolves to sacrifice her own life to save that of her false lover. She knocks at the door, is seized and stabbed by the bandit and her body wrapped in a sack. Rigoletto soon returns, pays the remainder of the price agreed upon, and receives the body. Sparafucile, fearing that Rigoletto will discover the substitution, offers to throw the body into the river. The Jester says he will do it himself and bids the brave depart.

Left alone, the Jester gazes on the body with a horrible satisfaction, saying:

Rigoletto:

He is there, pow’rless! Ah, I must see him! Nay, ’twere folly! ’tis he surely! I feel his spurs here.

Look on me now ye courtiers!

Look here and tremble,

Here the buffoon is monarch!

Yes, my foot is upon him!

My grief has vanish’d,

’Tis turned to joy triumphant;

Thy tomb shall be the waters,

This coarse sack thy shroud and grave cloth!

Away, now!

He is about to drag the sack towards the river, when he hears the voice of the Duke leaving the inn on the opposite side.

Duke:

Woman is fickle, false altogether, etc.

Rigoletto (tearing his hair):

That voice! Am I mad? What fiend deludes me?

No, no, no! here I hold him!

(Calling to the house.)

Hola, thou thief, thou bandit!

(The Duke’s voice dies in the distance.)

Then whom have I within here?

I tremble—the form is human!

(With utmost horror, recognizing Gilda.)

My daughter, oh, Heav’n, my daughter!

Ah, no! Not my daughter! She is in Verona!

’Tis a dream!

Then begins the wonderful final duet, a fitting end to such a noble and powerful work, and a number which is unfortunately omitted in American performances of the opera. However, the Victor customer, more fortunate than the opera-goer, may hear it at his pleasure.

Lassù in cielo (In Heaven Above)

By Grazziella Pareto and Titta Ruffo

By Giuseppina Huguet and Renzo Minolfi

Rigoletto:

’Tis Gilda!

(Kneeling.)

Child of sorrow! my angel, look on thy father!

The young girl, who is not yet dead, opens her eyes and cries feebly:

Gilda:

Ah, who calls me?

Rigoletto:

Ah, she hears me! She lives then!

Oh, thou, my heart’s only treasure,

Behold thy father despairing!

Who was’t that struck thee?

Gilda:

Oh, my father, for him that I cherish,

I deceived thee, and for him I perish.

Rigoletto:

Heaven’s avenging wrath has undone me,

Turn thine eyes, oh my angel, upon me,

Speak, oh speak to me, who hath bereft me?

Gilda:

Father, oh ask not,

Bless thy daughter and forgive her.

The assassin deceived me. Hola!

(Knocks desperately on the door of the house.)

No answer! despair! my daughter! my Gilda!

Oh, my daughter!

Rigoletto:

Child, in pity, oh speak not of dying;

Stay thou to bless me, oh leave me not alone.

Gilda (feebly):

There we wait, my father, for thee!

Rigoletto:

Ah, no, no, leave me not!

Live, my child.

Canst thou leave me alone, despairing?

Gilda:

Ah, no—forgive my betrayer, my father.

From yonder sky—there we wait—my father, for—

(She dies.)

Rigoletto:

Gilda! my Gilda! I’ve lost her!

(He recalls the curse.)

Ah! ’twas a father cursed me!

(Tears his hair and falls senseless on the body.)

GILDA'S DESPAIR—ACT II

RINALDO
(Ree-nahl-doh)

OPERA IN THREE ACTS

Text by Adam Hill; Italian text by Rossi, founded on the episode of Rinaldo and Armida in Tasso’s Gerusalemme liberata. Music by George Frederick Handel.

Rinaldo was produced at a time when Italian music had become the fashion in London, and the composer followed the plan then in vogue, to write the dialogue in recitative form. This opera was written by Handel in the amazingly brief time of fourteen days, and first performed at Queen’s Theatre, February 24, 1711. The work was put on to signalize the coming of Handel to London, and was a magnificent production for that period. Only the year before the composer had been induced to leave the Court of Hanover for that of England; and upon his arrival in London Mr. Aaron Hill, the enterprising manager of the new Haymarket Theatre, engaged him to supply an Italian opera. Hill planned Rinaldo, Rossi wrote the Italian libretto, and Handel hurriedly dashed off the music.

The opera ran for fifteen consecutive nights—an unprecedented feat for that age—and was mounted with a splendor then quite unusual. Among other innovations, the gardens of Armida were filled with living birds, a piece of realism hardly outdone even in these days.

Characters in the Opera

RINALDO, a knight.................................Soprano
ARMIDA, an enchantress..............................Soprano
ALMIRENA, Godfrey’s daughter..................Soprano
ARGANTE, a Pagan king..............................Bass
GODFREY, a noble..................................Bass
EUSTAZIO................................................Altos

The action takes place in Palestine at the time of the Crusade.

Rinaldo is a Knight Templar who loves Almirena, daughter of Godfrey. The enchantress, Armida, also loves Rinaldo, and in a jealous rage seizes Almirena and conceals her in a magic garden. Armida’s lover, a Pagan King named Argante, complicates matters by himself falling in love with Almirena. Rinaldo finally rescues Almirena, and the sorceress and her lover are captured and converted to Christianity.

Among the many arias of great beauty with which the score abounds is the Lascia ch’io pianga, in which Almirena laments her capture by the sorceress. This striking number is delivered by Schumann-Heink with great beauty of tone coloring and impressive power in the most dramatic passages. The melody is a beautiful one.

Lascia ch’io pianga (‘Mid Lures! ‘Mid Pleasures!)

By Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Contralto (In Italian) 88189 12-inch, $3.00

ALMIRENA: Armida, thou enchantress,
With thy craft, dark and fiendish,
Hast stolen from my sad heart
The bliss of Heaven;
And here a doom eternal
Suffer I ever,
The prey of pow’rs infernal!
Alas! naught’s left to me

But grief with bitter tears!
‘Mid lures, ‘mid pleasures,
Hopeless I languish
Vainly deploring my freedom lost!
Heaven, who canst measure
My pain and anguish,
Thee I’m imploring
By ill fate toss’t!

OPERA IN FIVE ACTS

Words by Scribe and Delavigne; music by Giacomo Meyerbeer. First presented at the Académie, Paris, 1831; in London, in English, at Drury Lane, 1832; in Italian at Her Majesty's Theatre, May 4, 1847 (first appearance of Jenny Lind).

Although Meyerbeer had produced several operas, mostly unsuccessful, it was not until the production of Robert le Diable in 1831 that the genius of the composer became known. The opera met with an unparalleled success and really made the fortune of the Paris Opéra with its splendid scenic effects, brilliant instrumentation, vigorous recitative and its heroic and partly legendary story.

Robert, Duke of Normandy, who was called Robert the Devil because of his courage in battle and his successes in love, is banished by his subjects and goes to Sicily, where he continues to struggle with an Evil Spirit, which seems to tempt him to every kind of excess. Alice, his foster sister, suspects that his supposed friend Bertram, is in reality this evil influence. At the close of Act I Robert, led on by Bertram, gambles away all his possessions, and failing to attend the Tournament, loses the honor of a knight and greatly displeases the Lady Isabella, whom he loves.

The second act shows the entrance to the Cavern of Satan, wherein a company of Evil Spirits are collected, and where occurs the great scene for Bertram and the chorus of fiends.

Valse Infernal, "Ecco una nuova preda" (I Have Well Spread My Toils)

By Marcel Journet and Chorus  (In French) 74282 12-inch, $1.50

Bertram promises the Demons that he will complete the ruin of Robert and the fiends rejoice at the prospect of adding another soul to their company.

Bertram:
I have well spread my toils, another soul to capture!
One more gained! glorious conquest,
At which demons must rejoice!
(A subterraneous noise is heard; darkness falls. Bertram, under the control of the evil one, feels an unholy joy.)
King of fallen angels! ruler mine! * * *
He is here! * * * he awaits me! * * *
I hear the noise

Of their infernal joy * * * the fallen spirits seek
To drown their remorse in hellish mirth!
Infernal Chorus (from the cavern):
Ye demons, who Heaven and its laws defy,
The sound of your revels now mounts to the sky,
Your voices lift high!
Praise the master who reigns over us,
Sing aloud in lusty chorus!
Praise the Master, yes praise!
Alice, who has come to the vicinity of the cave to meet her lover, overhears this infernal bargain and determines to save him. Robert, dejected over the loss of his honor and wealth, meets Bertram, who promises that all shall be restored to him if he will have the courage to visit the ruined abbey and secure a magic branch, which can give wealth, power and immortality.

Bertram speaks of the founding of the convent and of the false nuns who lie buried here, and calls upon them to arise.

Bertram:
Here are the nuns of the ancient monastery,
To Heaven’s cause bequeathed by St. Rosalie,
Here lie buried the false daughters
Whose unholy devotion was offered to other gods.

Nuns, who beneath this cold stone repose,
For an hour forsake your sepulcher beds,
King of Hell, it is I who calls you.

The spectres arise, and when Robert appears they dance around him and lead him to the grave of St. Rosalie, where he is shown the magic branch. Overcoming his fears, he grasps it, and by its power defeats the multitude of demons who arise from the infernal regions to prevent his escape.

In the next scene Robert uses the branch to become invisible, and goes to Lady Isabella’s room to carry her off. In this scene occurs the famous air for Isabella, “Oh, Robert, My Beloved.”

Isabella:
Oh, Robert, oh, my beloved!
I live alone, yes, alone for thee
My anguish thou see’st,
On thyself, have mercy, and pity on me!
Ah, the ties that once bound thee
Now no more canst thou feel?
Once I receiv’d thy homage,
The air, which is written for a soprano, is well adapted to show the great range of Mme. Matzenauer’s voice, her high notes being beautifully taken.

Moved by her entreaties, he yields to the promptings of his good angel and breaks the branch, thus destroying the spell.

In the last act Bertram renews his efforts to induce Robert to sign an eternal contract. Tired of life, he is about to yield when Alice appears and tells him of the last words of his mother, warning him against the Fiend, who is in reality Robert’s father. The clock strikes twelve, and the baffled Fiend disappears, while the cathedral door opens showing the Princess waiting for the reformed Robert.

Time and Place: Nottingham, England, in the twelfth century.

At the beginning of the opera a merrymaking is in progress at the marketplace in Nottingham. The three outlaws, Little John, Will Scarlet and Friar Tuck, enter and sing of their free life in the Forest of Sherwood, and finally the handsome, dashing Robin Hood appears, declaring that he is the Earl of Huntington, and demanding that the Sheriff shall so proclaim him. The Sheriff, however, protests that the youth has been disinherited by his own father, who before the birth of Robin Hood was secretly married to a peasant girl, who died when her child was an infant. The child is Sir Guy of Gisborne, the rightful heir to the earldom and the Sheriff's ward, whom he is planning to marry to Lady Marian, ward of the Crown. However, the young girl and Robin Hood are already deeply in love and exchange vows of eternal faith, much to the indignation of Sir Guy. Lady Marian protests against her marriage to Sir Guy, hoping that on the return of the King from the Crusades she will be released, while Robin Hood plans with the help of the King to prove his right to the earldom. The outlaws sympathize with the pair and invite Robin Hood to join them, promising him he shall be their king and rule them under the Greenwood Tree, to which proposal Robin Hood at length agrees.

In the last act the dashing king of the outlaws brings the message which saves Maid Marian from the hated marriage with Sir Guy, and the opera ends amid general rejoicings at the triumph of Robin Hood and the gentle Marian over the plotting Sheriff and his ward.

This early work of Massenet's is founded upon an Indian subject, and deals with the Mussulman invasion. It is noted for its brilliant ballet, illustrative of an Indian paradise.

_Sita_, niece of the high priest, _Timur_, is beloved by _Alim_, King of Lahore. His rival, _Scindia_, accuses her of profaning the Temple and she is condemned to death, but is saved by the King, who asks her hand in marriage.

In the second act _Alim_, at war with the Mussulmans, is betrayed to the enemy by _Scindia_, and is killed in battle, while _Scindia_ seizes his throne and carries away _Sita_.

_Alim_ is transported to the celestial realm of India, but is not contented, and begs the divinities to allow him to return to earth. His request is granted on condition that he does not resume his rank and returns to India when _Sita_ dies. On his return he finds that _Scindia_ has secured the throne and forced _Sita_ to become his wife. _Alim_ declares himself, but _Scindia_ denounces him as an impostor. _Alim_ is obliged to flee, but _Sita_ goes with him, and when they are about to be captured she kills herself. _Alim_, in fulfillment of his vow, also dies, and the lovers are united in celestial India.

The most famous of the numbers is of course this superb air for baritone in the fourth act, which La Salle sung in the first production with great success. A portion of the fine translation by Dudley Buck, from the Schirmer "Operatic Anthology" (Copy't G. Schirmer), is given here by permission.

Scindia:

_The Sultan's barb'rous horde, who had so gladly riven_
_From us fair Lahore, By our own might have from the field been driven._
_From care my people free, Loudly sound forth my praises!_

_Sita, my queen thou soon shalt be! To thee the world its glory offers, To thee a king his crown now proffers; Come, Sita, O come! ah! be mine!_

_A fine rendition of this air is given here by Mr. de Gogorza, whose beautiful voice and perfect French diction are well exhibited._

Guests; Relatives and Retainers of the Capulets and Montagues.

The action takes place at Verona.

Romeo and Juliet overflows with charming music, Gounod having written for the lovers some of the most emotional passages ever composed, and the opera has even been called "a love duet with occasional interruptions." It is of course not another Faust,—no composer could write two such works,—but it is a most beautiful setting of the story of the ill-fated Italian lovers, and will always be listened to with pleasure.

Several of the Shakespearean personages have been omitted from the opera cast by the librettists, and a new character, that of the page Stephano, has been added.
ACT I

SCENE—Ballroom in Capulet’s House, Verona

The curtain rises on a scene of festivity. Capulet, a Veronese noble, is giving a masked fête in honor of his daughter Juliet’s entrance into society.

Juliet is presented to the guests by her father, and Capulet, in a rousing air, calls on his guests to make merry.

When the guests have gone to the banquet hall, Juliet lingers behind and gives expression to her girlish joy in the famous waltz.

Valse (Juliet’s Waltz Song)

By Louise Tetrazzini, Soprano  (In Italian)  88302 12-inch, $3.00
By Emma Eames, Soprano  (In French)  88011 12-inch, 3.00
By Blanche Arral, Soprano  (In French)  74151 12-inch, 1.50

It is maintained by some critics that this waltz is too showy and brilliantly effective to be sung by a modest young girl at her first ball. However, Gounod has written such an uncommonly pretty waltz of exquisite melody, that most hearers are too delighted to inquire very closely into questions of dramatic fitness.

Juliet:

Song, jest, perfume and dances.
Smiles, vows, love-laden glances
All that spells or entrances
In one charm blend
As in fair dreams enfolden
Born of fantasy golden,

Three records of this delicate waltz, with its ear-haunting melody, are offered for a selection. Mme. Tetrazzini gives it with much animation, its difficult requirements being met with a perfect ease and grace.

Mme. Eames, whose Juliet is remembered with pleasure, sings the number with much charm; while another fine rendition is contributed by Mme. Arral.

Juliet is about to leave the room when Romeo enters, having ventured masked into the house of his enemy. He is much impressed with her beauty and grace, and contriving to speak with her, asks her to remain a moment. They sing the first of their duets, the opening portion of which is full of airy repartee. As the number progresses a mysterious attraction seems to draw the youth and maiden toward each other, and the duet becomes an impassioned love scene.

Ange adorable (Lovely Angel)

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano, and Edmond Clement, Tenor  (In French)  88421 12-inch, $3.00

By Alice Nielsen and Florencio Constantino  (In French)  74108 12-inch, 1.50

Romeo:

Angel that wearest graces the fairest,
Forgive, if to touch I dare,
The marble whiteness of thy hand
That Heav’n hath formed so fair!
Claim, then, unsparing, that for my daring
I one soft kiss be fined.
Kiss, that effaces unworthy traces,
This hand hath left behind.

Juliet:

Thy hand, good pilgrim, this fine but wrong’d
For thou dost blame it o’ermuch,
To pure devotion surely belongeth,
Saintly palm that thou mayst touch,
Hands there are, sacred to pilgrim’s greeting,

But, ah me! I not such as this,
Palm unto palm, not red lips meeting,
Is a holy palmer’s kiss!

Romeo:

To palmer and to saint, have not lips too been given?

Juliet:

Yes; but only for prayer!

Romeo:

Then grant my pray’r, dear saint, or faith
may else be driven,
Unto deepest despair!

Juliet:

Know, the saints ne’er are moved.
And if they grant a pray’r, ’tis for the prayer’s sake!
ROMEO:
Then move not, sweetest saint,
Whilst the effect of my pray'r, from thy lips
(He kisses her)
I shall take!

JULIET:
Ah! now my lips from thine burning,
Have the sin that they have taken!

ROMEO:
O give that sin back again,
To my lips their, fault returning.

JULIET:
No, not again! No, not again!

ROMEO:
O give the sin to me again!

Tybalt, a hot-headed member of the Capulet family, recognizes Romeo through his mask, and threatens to kill him for his presumption in coming to the house of his enemies. Capulet restrains Tybalt and the dancing recommences.

ACT II

SCENE—Capulet’s Garden; Juliet’s Apartments Above

This scene is taken almost literally from Shakespeare, the only variation being the entrance of Gregorio and the servants, which serves merely to divide the long love duet.

Romeo, who is braving the displeasure of his enemies in the hope of seeing Juliet again, appears, and gazing at the balcony, sings his lovely serenade.

Ah! leve toi soleil (Arise, Fairest Sun)

By Herman Jadlowker, Tenor
(In French) 76025 12-inch, $2.00

By Lambert Murphy, Tenor
(In French) 70102 12-inch, 1.25

ROMEO:
Rise, fairest sun in heaven!
Quench the stars with thy brightness,
That o'er the vault at even
Shine with a feeble lightness,
Oh! rise again! Oh! rise again!
And banish night's dark shades,
She is watching, ah! ever untwining
From their bonds her tresses shining!
Now she speaketh. Ah! how charming!
By her beauty's brilliant ray,
As burneth, ashamed and jaded,
A lamp by the light of day!
At her window, on her fair hand,
See now she leaneth her cheek.
On that hand, were I a glove,
That I might touch that cheek!

Juliet appears on the balcony and Romeo conceals himself. She speaks to the stars of her new-found happiness.

JULIET:
Ah, me—and still I love him!
Romeo, why art thou Romeo?
Doff then thy name, for it is no part;
My love, of thee! What rose we call?
By other name would smell as sweetly:
Thou'rt no foe, 'tis thy name!
A long scene between the lovers is interrupted by Gregorio and some retainers, who are searching for Romeo. He conceals himself, and on their departure the duet is resumed.

Romeo:

Both:
Good night! Dearest, this fond good night is such sweet sorrow
That I would say good night, till it be dawn!

Romeo:
Soft be thy repose till morning!

ACT III

Scene I—The Cell of Friar Laurence

Romeo and Juliet meet by appointment in the Friar’s cell to ask him to marry them. He at first protests but finally consents, hoping the union will bring the rival houses together in friendship. The marriage takes place, and Juliet returns home with her nurse.

Scene II—A Street in Verona

Stephano enters, seeking his master. Observing the residence of Capulet, he decides to sing a song, thinking Romeo may still be lingering near the house. A fine rendition of this air has been given by Rita Fornia.

Chanson de Stephano (Page Song)
In French 74211 12-inch, $1.50

This brilliant young soprano, who has just been engaged by the Victor, has made an especial success at the Metropolitan in this rôle, her fresh and youthful voice being admirably suited to the music of the Page, while in the recent revival of Romeo her singing of Stephano’s air was pronounced one of the best features of the performance. Gregorio appears, angry at being waked up, and scolds the noisy youth, finally recognizing him as the companion of Romeo on the previous night. They fight, but are interrupted by Mercutio and Tybalt, who begin to quarrel with Gregorio. Romeo enters and tries to act as peacemaker, but is insulted and forced to fight, killing Tybalt. The action comes to the ears of the Duke of Verona, who happens to be passing with his suite, and he banishes Romeo from the kingdom. The unhappy youth yields to the decree, but secretly vows to see Juliet again.

ACT IV

SCENE—Juliet’s Room

Romeo has made his way into Capulet’s house at imminent risk of death, and has penetrated to the room of his bride. As the curtain rises he is taking leave of her, and in another exquisite duet she begs him not to go. He finally departs after a tender farewell, just as Capulet and Friar Laurence enter to tell her that it was Tybalt’s dying wish that she should marry Paris. Left alone with the good priest she tells him she will die rather than be separated from Romeo. The Friar tells her to have patience, as he has a plan by which they are to be reunited. He then gives Juliet a potion, commanding her to drink it when her marriage with Paris seems imminent, and tells her she will go into a death-like trance. He continues:

FRIAR LAURENCE:
Loud will they raise the sound of lamentation, “Juliet is dead! Juliet is dead!” For so Shall they deem thee reposing. But The angels above will reply, “She but sleeps!” For two-and-forty hours thou shalt lie in death’s seeming, And then, to life awaking as from a pleasant dreaming, From the ancient vault thou shalt haste away; Thy husband shall be there, in the night to watch o’er thee!

The good priest leaves her and shortly afterward, seeing her father and Paris approaching, she drinks the contents of the phial, and growing faint, apparently expires in Capulet’s arms.

ACT V

SCENE—The Tomb of Juliet

The curtain rises, showing the silent vault of the Capulets, where Juliet is lying on the bier still in her trance. Romeo, who has failed to receive Friar Laurence’s message, and believes Juliet is dead, now forces the door with a iron bar and enters.

He sees his bride apparently dead, and flings himself on her body. After a mournful air in which he bids her farewell, he drinks poison, but is soon startled to see signs of life in the body of Juliet. Forgetting the poison he had taken, he embraces her joyfully and they sing their final duet:

ROMEO:
Come, let’s fly hence!

ROMEO:
Come, the world is all before us, two hearts, yet one!

JULIET:
Grant that our love—
 Romeo now and ever
Holy and pure, till our life shall end.

Suddenly remembering the fatal draught, Romeo cries out in horror:

ROMEO:
Now, happy dagger, behold thy sheath!

JULIET:
Ah, happy moment. My soul now with rapture is swelling, Thus to die, love, with thee. Romeo half rises himself to prevent her.

ROMEO:
Hold! Hold thy hand!

JULIET:
Ah, happy moment. My soul now with rapture is swelling, Thus to die, love, with thee. (She lets fall the dagger.)

ROMEO:
Yet one embrace! I love thee!

JULIET:
O heav’n grant us thy grace!

(The die.)

Camille Saint-Saëns has been for two generations the foremost figure in music in France. Poet, astronomer, traveler, excelling in every branch of the art of music, he is undoubtedly the most versatile musician of our time. He has held a commanding position on the concert stage since 1846, when at the age of ten he gave a concert in Paris. On October 15, 1906, he played one of his own concertos at the Philharmonic concert in Berlin. Sixty years before the public! In all the history of music there is no more wonderful career than that of the composer of Samson, who a few years ago visited America for the first time.

Samson et Dalila may be called a biblical opera, almost an oratorio, and the polished beauty and grace of this great composition has caused it to be pronounced Saint-Saëns' masterpiece. The religious and militant flavor of the Jewish nation is finely expressed in the score, and the exquisite love music is more or less familiar by its frequent performance on the concert stage.

ACT I

SCENE—A Public Square in Gaza

The opera has no overture. The first scene shows a square in the city of Gaza, where a crowd of Hebrews are lamenting their misfortunes, telling of the destruction of their cities and the profanation of their altars by the Gentiles.

Samson speaks to the people and bids them take courage.

Samson (coming out from the throng):
Let us pause, O my brothers,
And bless the holy name of the God of our fathers!
For now the hour is here when pardon shall be spoken.
Yes, a voice in my heart is the token.
'Tis the voice of the Lord, who by my mouth thus speaketh.
Our prayers to him have risen,
And liberty is ours.
Brothers! we'll break from bondage!
Our altars rise once more
To our God, as before!

The Hebrews are cheered by Samson's words, but their mood soon changes when a number of Philistines enter and revile them. A fight occurs, and Samson wounds Abimelech. The High Priest of Dagon comes out of the Temple and curses Samson.

From the Temple now comes Delilah, followed by the Priestesses of Dagon, bearing flowers and singing of Spring. Delilah speaks to Samson and invites him to the valley where she dwells. He prays for strength to resist her fascinations, but in spite of himself he is forced to look at her as she dances with the maidens. As the young girls dance Delilah sings to Samson the lovely Song of Spring.

Printemps qui commence—Der Frühling erwachte
(Delilah's Song of Spring)

By Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Contralto (In German) 88417 12-inch, $3.00
By Gerville-Réache, Contralto (In French) 88244 12-inch, 3.00

Delilah: Spring voices are singing,
Bright hope they are bringing,
All hearts making glad.
And gone sorrow's traces,
The soft air effaces.
All days that are sad.
The earth glad and beaming.
With freshness is teeming.
In vain all my beauty:
I weep my poor fate!
(She gazes fondly at Samson.)
When night is descending,
With love all unending,
Bewailing my fate,
For him will I wait.
Till fond love returning,
In his bosom burning
May enforce his return!

Samson shows by his hesitation and troubled bearing that Delilah has shaken his resolutions, and as the curtain falls he is gazing at her, fascinated.

ACT II

SCENE—Delilah's Home in the Valley of Soreck

Delilah, richly attired, is awaiting the coming of Samson, and muses on her coming triumph over his affections, and the plot to secure his downfall. In a fine air she calls on Love to aid her.

Amour viens aider (Love, Lend Me Thy Might)

By Louise Homer, Contralto
(In French) 88201 12-inch, $3.00

Delilah:
O Love! in my weakness give power!
Poison Samson's brave heart for me!
'Neath my soft sway may he be vanquished;
Tomorrow let him captive be!
Ev'ry thought of me he would banish,
And from his tribe he would swerve,
Could he only drive out the passion
That remembrance doth now preserve.
But he is under my dominion;
In vain his people may entreat.
'Tis I alone that can hold him—
I'll have him captive at my feet!

After a scene between Delilah and Dagon, who urges her not to fail in her purpose, Samson arrives, impelled by a power he cannot resist.

Delilah greets him tenderly, and when he bitterly reproaches himself for his weakness, she sings that wonderfully beautiful song of love and passion.

This lovely air of Delilah, perhaps the most beautiful contralto air ever written, and the most familiar of the numbers in the opera, is in the repertoire of almost every contralto.

This quotation from the effective translation by Nathan Haskell Dole is from the Schirmer libretto. (Copyright 1892, G. Schirmer.)

DELILAH:
My heart at thy sweet voice opens wide like the flower
Which the morn’s kisses waken!
But, that I may rejoice, that my tears no more shower,
Tell thy love still unshaken!
O, say thou wilt not now leave Delilah again!
Repeat thine accents tender, e’ry passionate vow,
O thou dearest of men!

Five records of this well-known air are listed here. Delilah now asks that Samson confide to her the secret plans of the Hebrews, and when he refuses she calls the Philistines, who are concealed, and Samson is overpowered.

ACT III

SCENE I—A Prison at Gaza

Samson is shown in chains, blinded and shorn of his hair. As he slowly and painfully pushes a heavy mill which is grinding corn, he calls on Heaven to forgive his offence.

A file of guards enter and conduct him to the Temple.

SCENE II—A Magnificent Hall in the Temple of Dagon

The High Priests and Philistines, with Delilah and the Philistine maidens, are rejoicing over the downfall of their enemies. The music of the opening chorus and the Bachanal has been given here in a fine record by a famous Spanish band.

They have sent for Samson to make sport of him. Delilah approaches him and taunts him with his weakness. He bows his head in prayer, and when they have wearied of their sport Samson asks the page to lead him to the great pillars which support the Temple. He offers a last prayer to God for strength to overcome his enemies, then, straining at the pillars, he overthrows them. The Temple falls amid the shrieks and groans of the people.

SAPHO
OPERA IN THREE ACTS

Text by Émile Augier; music by Gounod. The opera was first presented at the Opéra, Paris, April 16, 1851, with Mme. Viardot, and was the first work Gounod had written for the stage. In 1858 it was reduced to two acts and revived. Another revival occurred in Paris, April 2, 1884, under the direction of Gounod. The first London production, under the title Saffo, occurred at Covent Garden in 1851, with Viardot, Castellan, Tamberlik and Tambourini.

The scene of Gounod's Sapho is laid in Mytilene, where Sapho, the poetess, rules. She has fallen in love with Phaon, but this affection proving hopeless, she leaps from the rock of Lencadia and is drowned.

The music of this opera is little known in America with the exception of the beautiful air, O ma lyre immortelle, a fine record of which is here offered by a famous contralto.

O ma lyre immortelle (Oh, My Immortal Lyre)

By Jeanne Gerville-Reache, Contralto
(In French) 88166 12-inch, $3.00

SAPHO: Where am I?
Ah! yes, I now remember,
All which ere now to life hath bound me,
Is no more.
For me there now remaineth
Naught but night eternal,
Wherein my heart may rest from its woe,
Oh harp immortal, consoling!
Days full of woe abound;
By thee my grief controlling,
When thy sweet tones resound.
In vain thy voice, soft sighing,
Strives to comfort my pain;
Ah! it will aye remain:
Of this last wound I'm dying!
'Tis a wound of the heart;
Grief I must know till from life I depart.
Farewell, thou moonlight tender,
Shine on with radiance blest!
Cold wave, I now surrender;
Grant me eternal rest.
The day which soon is dawning,
Phaon shall light for thee,
Think not, I pray, of me,
For thee returns the morning.
Open, thou wat'ry grave!
I soon shall sleep evermore
'Neath the wave.

IL SEGRETO DI SUSANNA
(Eng-gray'-toh Soo-zan'-nah)

THE SECRET OF SUZANNE (Soo-zan'

OPERA IN ONE ACT

From the French of Golisciani; text by Kalbeck; music by Ermanno Wolf-Ferrari. First production Munich, 1909; in America, Chicago, 1911, with White, Sammarco and Daddi.

Characters

COUNT GIL (aged thirty) .............................................. Baritone
COUNTESS SUZANNE, his wife (aged twenty) ..................... Soprano
SANTE, a servant (aged fifty) ....................................... Acting part

Time and Place: A drawing room in Piedmont; 1840.

Il Segreto di Susanna is a playful conceit, with a very simple little plot. Count Gil is very much in love with his wife, but is averse to cigarette smoke, and Countess Suzanne, who is a devotee of the cigarette, takes the opportunity to smoke during her husband's absence. On his return he smells the smoke and questions the servant, who denies being the guilty party. The Count immediately concludes that his beautiful wife is receiving attentions from some Piedmont gallant. His wife's efforts to pacify him are unsuccessful, and in a huff he leaves the house. On his departure Suzanne lights a cigarette, but on her husband's sudden return she throws it into the fire. The testy Count notices the fresh smoke and rushes about the apartment in jealous rage, determined to capture the culprit. Failing to find any one, he once more goes out. As Suzanne attempts to enjoy another cigarette, the Count peeps through the window and seeing the smoke, rushes in triumph into the room. Suzanne hides the cigarette behind her, and the Count, trying to reach the imaginary man whom the lady is concealing, burns his hand! The secret is out, the Count forgives Suzanne, Suzanne forgives the Count, and husband and wife smoke a cigarette together.

Three of the best airs of the opera are offered—the first being the charming duet of Suzanne and the Count, in which they recall their first meeting; the second the Via l'cosi, in which Suzanne entreats her husband not to go away angry; and the last the song of Suzanne which tells of the delights of smoking.

SEMIRAMIDE

(Seh-mee-rahm'-ee-deh)

TRAGIC OPERA IN TWO ACTS

Text by Rossi; music by Gioachino Antonio Rossini. It is founded on Voltaire's tragedy Semiramis. First produced at the Fenice Theatre, Venice, February 3, 1823; in London at the King's Theatre, July 15, 1824. In French, as Semiramis, it appeared in Paris, July 9, 1860. First American production occurred in New York, April 25, 1826. Some notable American revivals were in 1855 with Grisi and Vestvalli; in 1890 with Adelina Patti as Semiramide; and in 1894 with Melba and Scalchi.

Semiramide is perhaps the finest of Rossini's serious operas, but although it was a great success in its day, its splendid overture and the brilliant Bel raggio are about the only reminders of it which remain.

The story is based on the classic subject of the murder of Agamemnon by his wife, called Semiramis in the Babylonian version. It is a work which the composer completed in the astonishingly short time of one month, but which shows his art at its ripest.

The action takes place in Babylon; Semiramide, the Queen, assisted by her lover Assur, has murdered her husband, King Ninus, who, in the second act, rises in spirit from the tomb and prophesies the Queen's downfall.

The overture opens with an unusually brilliant introduction, followed by a beautiful chorale for brass which is one of the most admired portions of the work. The familiar melody which forms the principal theme of the overture then appears as a clarinet passage. It begins:

---

The finale is rather long drawn out for modern ears, but is a fine example of its kind, and the overture is a most showy one, very popular on band and orchestra programs. Two splendid records of this famous number are presented here, and a comparison of the playing of these two great organizations is most interesting.

The Bel raggio, a favorite cavatina with all prima donnas, and a brilliant and imposing air, occurs in the first act.

The scene shows the Temple of Belus, where a religious festival is in progress. Semiramide is about to announce an heir to the throne and has secretly determined to elect Arsaces, a young warrior, with whom she has fallen in love, unaware that he is in reality her own son.

Bel raggio lusinghier (Bright Gleam of Hope)

*By Marcella Sembrich, Soprano
(In Italian) 88141 12-inch, $3.00*

Semiramide:

Here hope's consoling ray
Bids sorrow hence away,
And joy calls from above!
Arsaces to my love soon will return dejected,
But ere while with grief I dropp'd my head,
Now once more beams my smile!
Hence all my doubts have fled,
No more I feel the sway of grief and anguish dread!
Yes! now hope's consoling ray
Bids dark sorrow hence away,
And calls down joy from above,
Awhile in this breast to stay.
Arsaces will return!
Vision enchanting, my spirit haunting,
With fond emotion thou fill'st my heart,
Ah, bright smiles the morn
When dark waves of sorrow
Like some wild ocean sink and depart!

Rossini, who objected to the ornamentation of his music by famous singers, is said to have written this air in so elaborate a fashion as to make further additions impossible. But even as left by Rossini, Bel raggio is not sufficiently elaborate to show the skill of a Sembrich, and the additions with which the diva has embellished it not only make it more dazzling, but belong also to the true spirit of the air.

Thus the inspiring declamatory passages, with their brilliant runs, receive a lavish addition of the singer's splendid high notes, notably the high B on the alfin per se brillo, and the astonishing arpeggio up to C sharp on the dal mio pensier which follows.

The ensuing cantabile is sung with all the legato and grace which it requires, its principal figure being also additionally embellished.

There is little of tragedy and much of lightness and the joy of youth and love in this most beautiful of the Ring Cycle, which tells of the young Siegfried,—impetuous, brave, joyful and handsome; and Brünnhilde, the god-like maid—unselfish, lovely, innocent, who finds she is but a woman after all.

After Sieglinde had been saved from the wrath of Wotan by Brünnhilde (related in the last part of Walküre), she wanders through the forest and dies in giving birth to the child Siegfried, who is found and brought up by Mime, the Niblung.

In the first two acts of Siegfried the hero is shown in his forest home, where he mends his father's sword, and with it slays the dragon. Having accidentally tasted the dragon's blood, he becomes able to understand the language of the birds, which tells him of Brünnhilde, the fair maiden who sleeps on the fire-encircled rock. He follows the guidance of one of the birds, cuts through the spear of Wotan, who endeavors to stop him, and penetrates the flames. On the top of the rock he beholds the sleeping Valkyrie covered with her shield. He removes the armor, and Brünnhilde lies before him in soft, womanly garments. She is the first woman he has ever seen, and he kneels down and kisses her long and fervently. He then starts up in alarm; Brünnhilde has opened her eyes. He looks at her in wonder, and both remain for some time gazing at each other. She recognizes him as Siegfried, and hails him as the hero who is to save the world. This part of the trilogy ends in a splendid duet.

ACT I

SCENE—A Forest. At One Side a Cave

Mime, the Niblung, brother of Alberich, found Sieglinde in the forest after she had escaped from Wotan, and brought up her child, knowing that it was Siegfried, who was destined to kill Fafner and regain the Ring. The opera opens with an air by Mime, who is discovered at the anvil in his forest smithy trying to forge a sword for Siegfried.
Siegfried and the Dragon
Zwangvolle Plage! (Heartbreaking Bondage)

By Albert Reiss, Tenor
(In German) 74235 12-inch, $1.50

Mr. Reiss' wonderful character study of Mime, the dwarf, has been one of the most impressive features of the Metropolitan performances during the past few years. His impersonation gains each year in the sardonic and malignant side of Mime's nature, but is always amusing, nevertheless. The artist's portrayal, dramatically and vocally, leaves nothing to be desired, and in the episodes where the dwarf is most abject and fawningly malicious he is superb.

Siegfried, in forest dress, with a horn around his neck, bursts impetuously from the woods. He is driving a great bear and urges it with merry roughness towards Mime, who drops the sword in terror and hides behind the forge. Taking pity on the frightened dwarf, Siegfried drives the bear back into the wood, and seeing the sword, breaks it over the anvil, as he has broken all of the others. He questions Mime about his childhood, and the dwarf tells him reluctantly about his mother and about the sword his father had broken in his last fight. Siegfried demands that Mime shall mend his father's sword without delay, and goes back into the forest.

Wotan now enters and in answer to Mime's questions says he is the Wanderer, and speaks to Mime of the sword, telling him that only he who knows no fear will be able to forge the broken weapon. After the Wanderer has departed, Siegfried returns, and Mime, who is now beginning to be afraid of the youth, tells him that it was his mother's wish that he should learn fear. "What is this fear?" says Siegfried, and Mime attempts to describe it.

MIME: Feltst thou ne'er in forest dark,
At glooming hour in gloomy spots,
Feltst thou then, no grisly gruesomeness grow
O'er thy fancy?
Balefullest shudders shake thy whole body,
All thy senses sink and forsake thee,
In thy breast bursting and big
Beat thy hammering heart?

Siegfried regretfully admits that he has never felt any such sensation. Mimi, in despair, then tells him of the Dragon which dwells near by. Siegfried eagerly asks Mime to conduct him hither, but says he must have his sword mended first, and, when Mime refuses, he forges it himself. When it is finished, to try the blade, he strikes the anvil a mighty blow and splits it in half, while Mime falls on the ground in extreme terror. Siegfried brandishes the sword and shouts with glee as the curtain falls.

ACT II

SCENE—The Dragon's Cave in the Forest

Fafner, who has changed himself into a dragon, the better to guard his gold, dwells within a cave, keeping constant watch. Alberich is spying near by, hoping to regain the treasure by killing the hero whom he knows will overcome the Dragon. The Wanderer enters and warns Alberich of the approach of Siegfried.

Alberich wakes the Dragon and offers to save its life in return for the Ring. Fafner contemptuously refuses, and makes light of the hero's prowess. Wotan departs, laughing at the discomfited Alberich, who hides as Siegfried and Mime approach. The latter is still trying to terrorize Siegfried with awful descriptions of the Dragon, but Siegfried laughs at him and finally drives him away.
The young hero, left alone, sits down under a tree and meditates about his mother, whom he pictures as gentle and beautiful. His dreaming is ended by the song of the birds, and he regrets that he cannot understand their language. He answers their song with a blast of his horn, which disturbs Fafner and the Dragon utters an awful roar, which, however, only makes the youth laugh. The Dragon rushes upon him, but Siegfried jumps aside and buries his faithful sword in the reptile’s heart.

Having accidentally tasted of the Dragon’s blood by carrying his stained hand to his lips, he finds to his astonishment that he is able to understand the song of the bird, which tells him to go into the cave and secure the Ring. Siegfried thanks the warbler and goes into the cavern. Mime comes back and, seeing the dead Fafner, is about to enter the cave when Alberich stops him and a heated argument occurs. This scene has been given for the Victor by two celebrated impersonators of these rôles, Goritz and Reiss.

Wohin schleichst du? (Whither Slinkest Thou?)

By Otto Goritz, Baritone, and Albert Reiss, Tenor

(In German) 64215 10-inch, $1.00

Alberich:
Wither slinkest thou, hasty and sly, slippery scamp?
Mime:
Accursed brother, what brings thee here?
I bid thee hence.
Alberich:
Graspest thou, rogue, towards my gold?
Dost lust for my goods?
Mime:
Yield the position! This station is mine.
What stirrest thou here?
Alberich:
Startled art thou— from stealthy concerns, that I’ve disturbed?
Mime:
What I have shaped with shrewdest toil shall not be shaken.
Alberich:
Was’t thou that robbed the golden Ring from the Rhine?
Or charged it with great and choice enchantment around?
Mime:
Who formed the Tarnhelm which to all forms can turn?
By thee ’twas wanted; its worker wert thou too?
Alberich:
What couldst thou ere, fool,
By thyself have fancied and fashioned?
The magic Ring made the dwarf meet for the task.
Mime:
Where now is thy Ring?
The giants have robbed thee, thou recreant!
What thou hast lost, by my lore, belike, I will gain.
Alberich:
By the boy’s exploit
Shalt thou, booby, be bettered?
Thou shalt have it not,
For its holder in truth is he.
Mime:
I nourished him,
And his nurse now shall he pay:
For toil and woe long while have I waited reward.
ALBERICH:
For a bantling’s keep
Would this beggarly, niggardly boor,
Bold and blustering,
Be well nigh as a king?
To rankest of doge booteth the ring
Far rather than thee:
Never, thou rogue, shall reach thee the magic round!

MIME:
Then hold it still and heed it well,
Thy hoarded Ring.
Be thou head, and yet hail me as a brother!
For my own Tarnhelm,
Excellent toy, I'll tender it thee!
'Twill boot us twain,
Twin we the booty like this.

ALBERICH (laughing scornfully):
Twin it with thee?
And the Tarnhelm too?

MIME (beside himself):
Wilt not bargain? Wilt not barter?
Giv’st thou to me no booty?

ALBERICH:
Not an atom, not e’en a nail’s worth!

MIME (furiously):
In the Ring and Tarnhelm
Ne’er shalt thou triumph!
Nought talk we of shares!
Siegfried, the caustic boy,
Shall crush thee, brother of mine!

ALBERICH:
The Tarnhelm he holds!—

MIME:
Aye, and the Ring!—
(With an evil laugh):
Let him the Ring to thee render!
I ween full soon I shall win it.
(He slips back into the wood.)

ALBERICH:
And yet to its lord
Shall it alone be delivered!

They hide themselves as Siegfried comes from the cave with the Ring, the value of which he does not yet comprehend. The bird’s voice is again heard explaining its history, and revealing the intended treachery of Mime. When the dwarf approaches, Siegfried is able, by the magic of the Ring, to read his thoughts. Horrified to learn that Mime is planning to kill him, he strikes down the dwarf and throws his corpse in the cave, rolling the body of the Dragon before the entrance.

Wearied by his adventures, Siegfried reclines under the tree and asks the bird to sing again. This time the songster reveals to him that Brünnhilde lies sleeping, waiting for the hero who is able to reach the fire-encircled spot.

THE BIRD:
Hey! Siegfried has slain now the sinister dwarf!
I wot for him now a glorious wife,
In guarded fastness she sleeps,
Fire doth emborder the spot:
O'erstepped he the blaze,
Waked be the bride,
Brünnhilde then would be his!

He laughs with delight, saying, “Why, this stupid lad who knows not fear,—it is I!” and follows the bird, who flies ahead to guide him to Brünnhilde’s fiery couch.

ACT III

SCENE—A Wild Region at the Foot of a Rocky Mountain

The act opens with a long scene between Erda and Wotan. The god summons his earth goddess wife and tries to consult her regarding the coming deliverance of the world through Siegfried and Brünnhilde. The goddess, however, is confused and bewildered by Wotan’s eager questions and fails to give counsel, asking only to be allowed to return to her sleep. Wotan, wearying of the struggle against fate, renounces his sway over the world, realizing that the era of love must supplant the rule of the gods.
Siegfried approaches and Wotan attempts to bar his way as a final trial of his courage. The youth, however, makes short work of the weary god, shatters his spear at a single stroke, and continues on his way singing:

Siegfried:

Ha! Heavenly glow! brightening glare!
Roads are now opening radiantly round me!
In fire will I bathe,
Through fire will I fare to my bride!
Oho! Oho! Aha! Aha! Gaily! Gaily!
Soon greets me a glorious friend!

As the hero plunges fearlessly through the fire the flames gradually abate, and when he reaches the sleeping Brünnhilde they die out completely. Siegfried approaches the unconscious maiden with awe and removes her helmet. He is speechless with admiration, and naively asks if the strange emotion which he feels can be fear. Finally, when he presses an ardent kiss on her lips she awakes and greets him joyfully as the hero Siegfried who is to save the world. After a long scene in which Siegfried's ardent wooing is gently repulsed by Brünnhilde, he finally seizes her in his arms. Frightened, she repulses him, crying:

Brünnhilde:

No god e'en has touched me!
As a maiden ever heroes revered me:
Virgin I hied from Valhalla!—
Woe's me! Woe's me!
Woe for the shame, the shunless disgrace!
My wak'ning hero deals me this wound!

Siegfried pleads his love and asks her to be his bride, but she begs him to spare her in a wonderful plea, Deathless Was I, sung here by Mme. Gadski.

Ewig war Ich (Deathless Was I) (Brünnhilde's Appeal to Siegfried)

By Johanna Gadski, Soprano

Brünnhilde:

Deathless was I, deathless am I,
Deathless to sweet sway of affection—
But deathless for thy good!
O Siegfried, happiest hope of the world!
Life of the universe! Lordliest hero!
Leave me in peace!
Press not upon me thy ardent reproaches!
Master me not with thy conquering might!
Saw'st e'er thy face in crystal floods?
Did it not gladden thy glance?

But the impetuous hero resumes his wooing, and love finally conquers the god-like maiden. She laughs in a transport of love, exclaiming:

Brünnhilde:

O high-minded boy! O blossoming hero!
Thou babe of prowess,
Past all that breathe!
Glady love do I glow with,
Glady yield to thee blindly,

and throws herself into Siegfried's arms as the curtain falls.

The scene is laid in Bevendey, an imaginary province of Russia.
Those who have enjoyed Mme. Gluck's beautiful interpretation of The Snow Maiden air will like to know something of this Russian opera, and we therefore give a brief sketch of the plot.

The opera abounds in picturesque scenes, representing Winter and Spring, and the poetic little story is supposed to take place in the happy country of Berendey, an unknown province of an imaginary Russia, ruled by a benevolent old Czar who has devoted his life to the happiness of his people, governing his kingdom by the law of love.

The beautiful, unknown Snegourotchka, daughter of old Winter and the fairy Spring, is found one cold morning by some villagers, abandoned in the forest, and the old drunkard, Boby, and his wife, Bobylycka, adopt her without knowing her parentage. Misguir, a merchant, falls in love with her, abandoning his sweetheart Koupava, but Snegourotchka, as her name indicates, is made of ice, and her coldness and indifference discourage all the young men who are infatuated with her beauty. Even the handsome shepherd Lehl, who sings such wonderful songs, gives up in despair and offers his heart to Koupava. The old Czar is grieved that this coldness has entered his kingdom, and offers the hand of the Snow Maiden and a handsome gift besides to any one who can win her love. Snegourotchka finds it impossible to love, and appeals to her mother, the fairy Spring, who invokes the aid of the flowers—the carnation lending its grace, the rose its heart and the jasmine its languor. This influence gradually touches the heart of the Snow Maiden, and she finds herself falling in love with the handsome Misguir. They both attend the festival of lovers and present themselves to the good Czar as a betrothed couple. But, alas, at the first kiss from her lover the little snowflake melts and disappears, while Misguir, in despair, throws himself into the river.

This dainty little shepherd song is the gem of the opera—a tender, melodious air which Miss Gluck sings exquisitely in perfect English.

The scene is laid in a Swiss village.

How our grandfathers and grandmothers doted on this fine old opera by Bellini! In the '30's it was a novelty by a young and gifted composer; by 1850 it was part of every opera season and shone through a halo of great casts—Malibran, Pasta, Jenny Lind, Gerster, Campanini, Grisi—and in the '60's and '70's it continued to be popular. Then came the Wagnerian era, and the pretty little pastoral work was all but forgotten.

Now, however, Italian opera of the old-fashioned kind has begun to be appreciated once more, and even the Wagnerites admit that there may be some pleasure in witnessing this charming little work.

ACT I

SCENE—A Village Green

The peasants are making merry in honor of the marriage of Amina and Elvino. Lisa, the hostess of the inn, enters and gives way to bitter reflections. She also loves Elvino, and her jealousy finds expression in a melodious air, Sounds So Joyful. Alessio, a villager who fancies Lisa, tries to console her, but she repulses him. Amina and her friends enter, followed soon after by Elvino, and the marriage contract is signed. Elvino places the ring on his bride's finger, and they sing a charming duet, Take Now This Ring.

By Maria Galvany and Fernando De Lucia (In Italian) 89045 12-inch, $4.00
By Emilio Perea, Tenor (In Italian) *62092 10-inch, .75

Two renditions of this number are given here, the Perea record including only Elvino's solo at the beginning of the duet. The words are not given, being merely a succession of flowery phrases to which Bellini has written his delightful melodies.

The nuptial celebration is interrupted by the sound of horses' hoofs, and a handsome and distinguished stranger enters, inquires the way to the castle, and learning that it is some distance, decides to remain at the inn. He looks around him, appearing to recognize the scene, and sings his fine air, Vi ravviso.

Vi ravviso (As I View These Scenes)
By Perello de Segurola, Bass (In Italian) *62092 10-inch, .75

Count:
As I view the scene, how familiar that mill-stream, yon fountain, those meadows!
Oh remembrance of scenes long vanish'd,
Soft enchantment long lost and banish'd,
Where my childhood serenely glided,
Where the joyous moments flew;
Oh how peaceful have ye abided,
While those days nought can renew!

The stranger inquires the reason for the festivities, and is presented to the pretty bride, in whom he is much interested. He tells the peasants that in his childhood he lived with the lord of the castle, and now brings news of the lord's only son, who disappeared some years since.

Amina's mother, Teresa, now says that as night is falling they must go within, as the phantom may appear. The stranger is told that a spectre has been often seen of late, and he scoffs at the tale, but the peasants, in an effective chorus, describe the appearance of the ghost.

Ah! fosco ciel! (When Daylight's Going)
By La Scala Chorus (In Italian) *62642 10-inch, .75

Chorus:
When dusky nightfall doth shroud the sunbeam,
And half repulses the timid moonbeam,
When thunder booms, where distance loometh;
Floating on mist, a shade appears;
In filmy mantle of pallid whiteness,
The eye once gentle now glaring brightness,
Like cloud o'er Heaven by tempest driven,
Plainly confest the phantom wears!

Rudolph:
You are all dreaming; 'tis some creation
Of mere gossips, to frighten youth.

The stranger now desires to retire and is shown to his room. Amina and Elvino remain, and the latter reproaches his bride for her interest in the guest; but at the sight of her tears he repents his suspicions, and the act closes with a duet by the reconciled lovers.

ACT II

SCENE—The Apartment of the Stranger

The guest muses that he might have done worse than stop at this little inn—the people are courteous, the women pretty, and the accommodations good. Lisa enters and asks if he is comfortable, calling him "my lord," the villagers having suspected that he is the Count Rudolph.

The Count, although somewhat annoyed that his identity is revealed, takes it good-naturedly, and even flirts a little with the buxom landlady. She coyly runs away, dropping her veil as she does so.

Amina now appears at the window, walking in her sleep. She unlatches the casement and steps into the room, saying in her sleep, "Elvino, dost thou remain jealous? I love but thee." The Count is at first astonished, but soon sees that the young girl is asleep. Just here Lisa peeps into the room, and seeing Amina, runs off scandalized. Amina, in her dream, again goes through the marriage ceremony, and entreats Elvino to believe that she loves him, finally throwing herself on the bed in a deep sleep. The Count is somewhat puzzled at the situation, and finally deciding to leave the young girl in possession of the room, goes out by the window.

Elvino and the villagers, who have been summoned by Lisa, now enter and are astonished to see Amina asleep in the Count's room. She wakes at the noise, bewildered, and runs to Elvino, who repulses her roughly. She is met with cold looks on every hand, and sinks down in despair, crying bitterly. Rousing herself, she begins the duet, D'un pensiero.

D'un pensiero (Hear Me Swear, Then)

By Giuseppina Huguet, Soprano; Aristodemo Giorgini, Tenor; and Chorus

(In Italian) 88255 12-inch, $3.00

Amina: Not in thought's remotest dreaming,
Was a crime by me intended;
Is the little faith now granted,
Fit return for so much love?

Finding all turned against her except her mother, she runs to the maternal arms, while Elvino rushes from the room. The curtain falls.

ACT III

SCENE I—A Shady Valley near the Castle

Amina and Teresa enter on their way to the castle to plead with the Count to clear the girl's good name. Seeing Elvino, Amina makes another effort to convince him she is still true, but he reproaches her bitterly, takes the ring from her finger, and rushes away.

SCENE II—A Street in the Village. Teresa's mill on the left

The villagers enter and inform Lisa that Elvino has transferred his affections to her. He enters and confirms the good news, and they go toward the church. The Count stops them, and assures Elvino that Amina is the victim of a dreadful misunderstanding. Elvino refuses to listen to him and bids Lisa follow him to the church, but they are again interrupted by Teresa, who has learned of the proposed marriage, and now shows Lisa's veil which she had found in the Count's room. "Deceived again," cries Elvino, and asks if any of these women are to be trusted.

Rudolph assures him again that Amina is guiltless, and Elvino desperately says, "But where is the proof?" "There," cries the Count, suddenly pointing to Amina, who in her night dress comes from a window in the mill roof, carrying a lamp. All watch her breathlessly, fearing to wake her lest she fall. She climbs down to the bridge over the wheel, and descends the stairs.

Amina (advancing, still in her sleep, to the middle of the stage):
Oh, were I but permitted
Only once more to see him,
Ere that another he doth lead to the altar!

Rudolph (to Elvino):
Hear her—

Teresa:
She is thinking, speaking of thee!

(Amina, clasping her hands on her bosom, takes from it the flowers given her by Elvino in the first Act.)

Amina:
Sweet flowers, tenderest emblems,
Pledging his passion, from ye ne'er will I sever.
Still let me kiss you—
But your bloom is fled forever!

The first of the two lovely airs for Amina in this act now occurs.
Ah! non credea mirarti (Could I Believe)

By Luisa Tetrazzini, Soprano
(In Italian) 88305 12-inch, $3.00
By Grazziella Pareto, Soprano
(In Italian) 76003 12-inch, 2.00
By Alma Gluck, Soprano
(In Italian) 74263 12-inch, 1.50

Perhaps the most effective part of the opera lies in this sleep-walking scene, when Amina, in a state of somnambulism, walks along the roof of the building, and finally climbs down to the ground. This act establishes her innocence, and clears up a mystery which had caused her good character to be doubted.

Ah! non credea is sung by the sleeper as she descends from her dangerous position, while her lover and friends watch in terror, fearing to awaken her. It opens with a beautiful cantabile in the key of A minor, its paths being fully in keeping with the plight of Amina, who, being discarded by her lover and doubted by her friends, weeps over her short-lived love and happiness. At the words "Patrio novel vigore," the pathetic note gives place to a more ardent emotion, as hope is mingled with her despair.

Regarding the flowers which her lover had given her, and which are now faded, she exclaims:

Amina:
Ah! must ye fade, sweet flowers,
Forsaken by sunlight and showers,
As transient as lover's emotion
That lives and withers in one short day!

But tho' no sunshine o'er ye,
These tears might yet restore ye,
But estranged devotion
No mourner's tears have power to stay!

—From the Ditson Edition.

The singer's aim has been to illustrate the simple charm of the character of Amina and the pathos of the scene, rather than exhibit brilliance of ornament. The cadenza at the close, although typical of Tetrazzini's marvelous powers of execution, is well subordinated to the character of the song, and pleases as much by its delicate beauty as by its amazing technical perfection.

Elvino can restrain himself no longer, and rushes to Amina, who wakes, and seeing Elvino on his knees before her, utters a cry of delight and falls in his arms.

The opera then closes with the joyous, bird-like air, Ah! non giunge, which is a fitting close to this charming work, with its graceful and tender music and peaceful pastoral scenes. In Amina, Mme. Tetrazzini finds a most congenial rôle, and for her sake alone Sonnambula would always be worth hearing. She has the voice, style and technical skill to make such music as this captivating; while Sembrich's impersonation of the ingenuous village beauty, who is all liveliness and joy, leaves nothing to be desired. Hers is a graceful and natural impersonation, and the delightful sleep-walking scene is given with a delicacy which is admirable.

Offenbach’s delightful and fantastic opéra comique, first produced at Paris in 1881, has been a success wherever performed, although it was tabooed in Germany for many years after the disastrous fire at the Ring Theatre in Vienna, which occurred during the presentation of the opera at that house. Its American successes are familiar to opera-goers, especially the brilliant and altogether admirable Hammerstein production, which drew large and delighted audiences for several years.
THE PROLOGUE

This introductory scene occurs in Nuremberg at Luther's tavern, a popular student resort. Hoffman, the favorite of all, enters with his friend Nicholas and joins in the merry-making. In response to calls for a song, Hoffman sings the Ballad of Klein-Zach, and then volunteers to relate his three love affairs. This proposal is greeted with enthusiasm, and as Hoffman begins by saying "The name of my first was Olympia," the curtain falls. When it rises, the first tale of Hoffman is seen in actual performance.

PROLOGUE—THE LEGEND OF KLEINSACK

ACT I

Spalanzani, a wealthy man with a mania for automatons, has perfected a marvelous mechanical figure of a young girl which he calls Olympia, pretending it is his daughter. Hoffman and Nicholas call upon him, and during Spalanzani's absence, Hoffman discovers Olympia, and falls in love at sight. Unable to take his eyes from the doll-like perfection of the figure, he expresses his infatuation in a beautiful air.

C'est elle ("Tis She!)

By Charles Dalmares, Tenor (In French) 87089 10-inch, $2.00

Dalmares makes a great success in the part of Hoffman. This rôle calls for a handsome appearance, a gallant bearing, and enduring vocal powers, and this tenor fulfills these requirements admirably. He sings this beautiful air with graceful fluency and much warmth of tone.

Nicholas tries in vain to prevent his friend from making a fool of himself, but Hoffman, owing to the magic glasses Spalanzani has induced him to wear, sees only a lovely woman instead of an automaton; but is undeceived when he dances with the figure and she falls to pieces before his astonished eyes.

ACT II

This adventure concerns the Lady Giulietta, who resides in Venice. Among her many friends are Hermann and Nathaniel, and the latter, fearing the power of the lovely coquette, tries to get Hermann away, but he insists that he is proof against her fascinations. Daperitutto, the real lover of the lady, hearing this boast, induces Giulietta to try her arts on the young man. She succeeds, and Hoffman, madly in love, challenges Giulietta's protector, Schlemil, and kills him in a duel. Hoffman rushes back to his charmer's residence only to find that she has fled with her chosen admirer.

This second tale introduces that lovely gem, the Barcarolle, with its languorous, fascinating rhythm and charming melody.

By the Victor Orchestra, with duet for two violins  5333  10-inch. .60
By the Vienna Quartet  5754  10-inch. .60

This popular Offenbach number, which is given as a duet in the Venetian scene and afterwards as an instrumental intermezzo, is one of the best known examples of the barcarolle.

As the name implies, it was originally a song or chant used by the Venetian gondoliers.

The music, in 6-8 time, portrays admirably the swaying of the boat and its dreamy melancholy suggests the calm of a perfect moonlight night.

O Night of Love

Beauteous night, O night of love,
Smile thou on our enchantment;
Radiant night, with stars above,
O beauteous night of love!
Fleeting time doth ne'er return
But bears on wings our dreaming,
Far away where we may yearn,
For time doth ne'er return.
Sweet zephyrs aglow,
Shed on us thy caresses—
Night of love, O night of love!

From Ditson Edition—Copyright 1909

In this act is also the air sung by Dapertutto to the sparkling diamond, which he says never yet failed to tempt a woman.

Air de Dapertutto (Dapertutto’s Air)

By Marcel Journet, Bass  (In French)  74103  12-inch. $1.50

Journet delivers this song of the swaggering, garrulous Venetian bravo with much spirit.
ACT III

The third adventure of Hoffman introduces us to an humble German home where Antonia, a young singer, has become the victim of consumption. She is forbidden to sing by her father, but a Dr. Miracle, who is the secret enemy of the family, Svengali-like, urges her on, and Hoffman, who knows nothing of the poor girl’s affliction, sees her literally sing herself to death, and she dies in his arms.

Romance—Elle a fui (The Dove Has Flown)
By Frances Alda, Soprano

The pathetic air sung by the unfortunate young singer, Antonia, whose life is finally sacrificed to her art.

THE EPILOGUE

The epilogue shows again the tavern of the prologue, where Hoffman is apparently just concluding his third tale. Having tried three kinds of love—the love that is inspired by mere beauty, the sensuous love, and the affection that springs from the heart—he says he has learned his lesson, and will henceforth devote himself to art, the only mistress who will prove faithful. He bids farewell to another of his flames, Stella, an opera singer, and as the curtain falls is left alone, dreaming, while the Muse appears and bids him follow her.

THE STORY

There are a great many people who like to go to the opera, but who do not care for Wagner's Ring Operas, with their Teutonic myths and legends, and their long and sometimes undeniably tedious scenes. But Tannhäuser, with its poetry, romance and passion, and above all its characters, who are real human beings and not mysterious mythological gods, goddesses and heroes, appeals strongly to these opera-goers.

To show the wonderful vogue of this work, it is estimated that more than one thousand performances of the opera take place annually throughout the world.

The story is quite familiar, but the chief events will be noted here in brief. It tells of conflict between two kinds of love: true love of the highest human kind as distinguished from mere sensuous passion; and relates how the higher and purer love triumphed in the end.

Tannhäuser, a knight and minstrel, in an evil moment, succumbs to the wiles of Venus and dwells for a year in the Venusberg. Tiring of these monotonous delights, he leaves the goddess and returns to his home, where he is warmly received and told that the fair Elizabeth, niece of the Landgrave, still mourns for him. He is urged to compete in the Tournament of Song not far distant, the prize being the hand of Elizabeth. The theme of the contest is The Nature of Love, and when Tannhäuser's turn arrives the evil influence of the Venusberg is apparent when he delivers a wild and profane eulogy of passion. Outraged by this insult the minstrels draw their swords to slay him. Coming to his senses, too late, he repents, and when a company of Pilgrims pass on their way to Rome, he joins them to seek pardon for his sin. In the last act we see Elizabeth, weary and worn, supported by the noble Wolfram, who... also loves her, watching for the Pilgrims to return, but Tannhäuser is not among them. Elizabeth is overcome with disappointment and feebly returns to her home.

Tannhäuser now appears, in a wretched plight, on his way to re-enter the Hill of Venus. He tells Wolfram that he appealed to the Pope for pardon, but was told that his redemption was as impossible as that the Pope’s staff should put forth leaves. Wolfram’s remonstrances are in vain, and Tannhäuser is about to invoke the goddess, when a chant is heard and the Pilgrims appear, announcing that the Pope’s staff had blossomed as a sign that the sinner was forgiven. Tannhäuser kneels in prayer as the mourners pass with the body of Elizabeth, who, overcome by her bitter disappointment, had suddenly passed away.

The Overture

Overture—Part I
By Arthur Pryor’s Band

Overture—Part II
By Arthur Pryor’s Band

This overture, with its sombre opening chorus, its weird music of the Venus Mount, and the final return of the penitents, when the chant is accompanied by a striking variation for clarinets, is one of the greatest works of Wagner. It has become quite familiar by its frequent repetitions in orchestra and military band concerts, and no concert piece is more admired.

The overture depicts the struggle between good and evil, and as Liszt has said, is a poem on the same subject as the opera and equally comprehensive.

The sombre religious motive appears first:

beginning softly and gradually swelling to a fortissimo. Then, as it is dying away, it is suddenly interrupted by the Venusberg motive:

with its rising tide of sensual sounds. This motive continues with terrible persistence, leading into Tannhäuser’s hymn to Venus, after which the enchanting Venus motive returns and is developed with various changes. The tide now changes again and the majestic pilgrim theme predominates, finally reaching a climax in the final hymn of triumph.

ACT I

SCENE I—The Hill of Venus—Nymphs, Sirens, Naiads and Bacchantes dancing or reclining on mossy banks

The rising of the curtain discloses Venus reclining on a couch gazing tenderly at Tannhäuser, who is in a dejected attitude. The goddess asks him why he is melancholy, and he tells her he is weary of pleasure and would see the earth again. She reproves him fondly:

Venus:
What! art thou wav’ring? Why these vain lamentings?
Canst thou so soon weary of the blisses
That love immortal hath cast ’round thee?
Can it be—dost thou now repent that thou’rt divine?
Hast thou soon forgotten how thy heart was mourning,

Till by me thou wert consoled?
My minstrel, come, let not thy harp be silent;
Recall the rapture—sing the praise and bliss of love
In tones that won for thee love’s self to be thy slave!
Of love sing only, for her treasures are all thine!

417
He rouses himself and sings the Praise to Venus, but it is a forced effort, and throwing down his harp he exclaims:

Tannhäuser:

For earth I'm yearning,
In thy soft chains with shame I'm burning,
'Tis freedom I must win or die—
For freedom I can all defy;

To strive or glory forth I go,
Come life or death, come joy or woe,
No more in bondage will I sigh!
Oh queen, beloved goddess, let me fly!

Venus in a rage, then tells him to go if he will, but predicts his return and disappears with all her train, while the scene instantly changes.

SCENE II—A Valley

Tannhäuser suddenly finds himself in a beautiful valley near the Wartburg. On the peaceful scene there break in the notes of a shepherd’s pipe, and tinkling sheep bells sound from the heights. A company of Pilgrims pass, singing their chant, while the little shepherd pauses in his lay, and begs them utter a prayer for him in Rome. This scene is effectively given by Mme. Runge and the Nebe Chorus, while additional records of the Pilgrims’ Chorus are provided by Pryor’s Band and the Brass Quartet.

Tannhäuser (kneeling in ecstasy):

Almighty, praise to Thee!
Great are the marvels of Thy mercy!
Oh, see my heart by guilt oppress’d—

I faint, I sink beneath the burden!
Nor will I cease, nor will I rest,
Till heav’nly mercy grant me pardon!

The Landgrave and several minstrels now enter, and seeing a knight kneeling in prayer, accost him. They are amazed and delighted to see that it is the long lost Henry, their brother knight. They question him, but he gives evasive replies. The Knights urge him to return with them, and speak the name of Elizabeth, Wolfram telling him that he is beloved by the Landgrave’s fair niece.

Wolfram:

When for the palm in song we were contending,
And oft thy conq’ring strain the wreath had won,
Our songs anon thy victory, suspending,
One glorious prize was won by thee alone!
Was’t magic, or a pow’r divine,
That wrought thro’ thee the wondrous sign,
Thy harp and song in blissful hour
Enthrall’d of royal maid the flower!
For ah, when thou in scorn hadst left us,
Her heart was closed to joy and song,
Of her sweet presence she bereft us,
For thee in vain she weared long.
Oh! minstrel bold, return and rest thee,
Once more awake the joyous strain!
Cast off the burden that oppress’d thee,
And her fair star will shine again!

Tannhäuser joyfully consents to return and promises to compete in the forthcoming Tournament of Song, the prize for which is to be the hand of Elizabeth. The remainder of the hunting train of the Landgrave now arrives, and as Tannhäuser is being greeted by his friends, the curtain falls.

ACT II

SCENE—The Great Hall in the Wartburg

Elizabeth enters, full of joy over the return of Tannhäuser, and greets the Hall in a noble song.
Dich, theure Halle (Hail, Hall of Song)
By Johanna Gadski (German) 88057 12-inch, $3.00
By Louise Voigt (German) 31849 12-inch, 1.00

Elizabeth:
Oh, hall of song, I give thee greeting!
All hail to thee, thou hallowed place!
'Twas here that dream so sweet and fleeting,
Upon my heart his song did trace.
But since by him forsaken
A desert thou dost seem—
Thy echoes only waken
Remembrance of a dream.
But now the flame of hope is lighted,
Thy vault shall ring with glorious war;
For he whose strains my soul delighted
No longer roams afar!

Mme. Gadski sings this glorious air in a surpassingly beautiful fashion, while a fine rendition is given by Miss Voigt. Tannhäuser enters and kneels at the feet of Elizabeth, who in blushing confusion bids him rise.

Verzeiht wenn ich nicht weiss (Forgive, I Scarcelly Know What I am Saying)
By Johanna Gadski (German) 88442 12-in., $3.00

With that frankness which seems characteristic of Wagner's heroines, the young girl makes no secret of her partiality for the Knight, and a long scene between the lovers ensues, interrupted by the entrance of the Landgrave, who greets Tannhäuser cordially and welcomes him to the contest.
The Knights and Ladies now assemble to the strains of the noble Fest March, given here in splendid fashion by Sousa’s Band.

Fest March

By Sousa’s Band
By Sousa’s Band (Double-faced—See page 423)

When the company is seated, the Landgrave rises and makes the address of welcome.

Landgrave:
Minstrels assembled here, I give you greeting,
Full oft within these walls your lays have sounded;
In veiled wisdom, or in mirthful measures
They ever gladdened every list’ning heart.
And though the sword of strife was loosed in battle,
Drawn to maintain our German land secure,
Unto the harp be equal praise and glory!
The tender graces of the homestead,
The faith that holds the good and true—
For these you fought with word and voice;
The meed of praise for this is due.
Your strains inspiring, then, once more attune,
Now that the gallant minstrel hath returned,
Who from our land too long was parted.

Four pages, who have drawn lots from a gold cup, now announce that Wolfram is to begin the contest. He rises and delivers his Eulogy of Love.

Wolfram’s Ansprache (Wolfram’s Eulogy of Love)

By Otto Goritz, Baritone
In German

The singer gives his conception of love, which he describes as pure and ethereal, comparing it to a crystal spring.

Wolfram:
Gazing around upon this fair assembly,
How doth the heart expand to see the scene!
These gallant heroes, valiant, wise and gentle—
A stately forest soaring fresh and green.
And blooming by their side in sweet perfection,
I see a wreath of dames and maidens fair;
Their blended glories dazzle the beholder—
My song is mute before this vision rare!
I raised my eyes to one whose starry splendor
Is this bright heaven with mild effulgence beams.
And gazing on that pure and tender radiance,
To what we owe his presence here amongst us
In strange, mysterious darkness still is wrapp’d;
The magic power of song shall now reveal it,
Therefore hear now the song you all shall sing.
Say, what is love? by what signs shall we know it?
This be your theme. Who so most nobly this can tell,
Him shall the Princess give the prize.
He may demand the fairest guerdon:
I vouch that whatsoe’er he ask is granted.
Up, then, arouse ye—sing, oh, gallant minstrels!
Attune your harps to love—great is the prize.
Fie ye begin, let all receive our thanks!

Wolfram, who has shown signs of impatience during this recital, now jumps to his feet, flushed and eager, while the company looks at him in astonishment.

Tannhäuser:
Oh, minstrel, if ’tis thus thou singest,
Thou ne’er hast known or tasted love!
If thou desire an unapproached perfection—
Behold the stars—adore their bright reflection—
They were not made to be belov’d:
My heart was sunk in prayerful holy dreams.
And lo! the source of all delights and power
Was then unto my listening soul revealed,
From whose unfathomed depths all joy doth shower—
The tender balm in which all grief is healed.
Oh, may I never dim its limpid waters,
Or rashly trouble them with wild desires!
I worship thee kneeling, with soul devoted:
To live and die for thee my heart aspires!
(After a pause.)
I know not if these feeble words can render
What I have felt of love both true and tender.

At this definition of love, strange for such an occasion, Biterolf, a hotheaded Knight, rises and challenges Tannhäuser, who excitedly retorts that such a grim wolf as Biterolf can know nothing of the delights of love! He then, in wild exultation, sings his blasphemous Praise of Venus, saying

Tannhäuser:
Dull mortals, who of love have never tasted
Go forth! Venus alone can show ye love!

At this the Knights rush toward him with drawn swords, exclaiming:

Knights:
Ye all have heard,
His mouth hath confess’d
That he hath shared the joys of Hell,
In Venus’ dark abode that dwell,
Disown him—curse him—banish him!
Or let his traitor life-blood flow!
Elizabeth throws herself in front of the unhappy Tannhäuser, who stands as if in a trance. She begs for his life in a touching plea.

Zuruck, von ihm! (Away from Him!)
By Johanna Gadski, Soprano

ELIZABETH:
Away from him! 'Tis not for you to judge him!
Shame on you! He is one against you all!
I pray for him—spare him, oh, I implore ye!
Let not the hope of pardon be denied!
To life renew'd his sinking faith restore ye.
Think that for him, too, once the Saviour died!
Oh, let a spotless maid your grace implore!

Let Heav'n declare through me what is its will—
The erring mortal, who hath fallen
Within the weary toils of sin,
How dare ye close the heav'nly portal?
On me, a maiden young and tender,
Yon knight hath struck a cruel blow—
I, who so deeply, truly loved him,
Am hurl'd in dark abyss of woe!

The Landgrave pronounces judgment and declares Tannhäuser banished, suggesting that he join the band of Pilgrims about to start for Rome. In the distance is heard the Pilgrims' chant, and the strains seem to bring the erring knight to his senses. He cries: "To Rome!" and dashes from the hall.

ACT III

SCENE—The Valley beneath the Wartburg—at one side a Shrine

As the curtain rises Elizabeth is seen kneeling at the shrine in prayer. Wolfram comes down by the path, and observing her, sadly notices her changed appearance, and muses on his own hopeless love. The song of the Pilgrims is heard in the distance, and Elizabeth eagerly rises and scans the approaching band. Tannhäuser is not among them, and the despairing maiden kneels again at the shrine, and offers her prayer to the Virgin.

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano

This prayer of the sainted Elizabeth is one of the most beautiful and touching of the master's compositions. "He will return no more!" cries the unhappy girl, and falls on her knees.

ELIZABETH:
Oh, blessed Virgin, hear my prayer!
Thou star of glory, look on me!
Here in the dust I bend before thee
Now from this earth, oh, set me free!
Let me, a maiden pure and white,
Enter into thy kingdom bright!
If vain desires and earthly longing
Have turn'd my heart from thee away,
The sinful hopes within me thro'ing,
Before thy blessed feet I lay;
I'll wrestle with the love I cherish'd,
Until in death its flame hath perish'd.
If of my sin thou wilt not shrieve me,
Yet in this hour, oh grant thy aid!
Till thy eternal peace thou give me,
I vow to live and die thy maid.
And on thy bounty I will call,
That heav'nly grace on him may fall!

She remains for a long time in prayerful rapture; as she slowly rises she glances at Wolfram, who is approaching. She bids him by gesture not to speak to her, but he asks that he may escort her.

Elizabeth again expresses to him by gesture that she thanks him from her heart for his faithful love; her way, however, leads to Heaven, where she has a high purpose to fulfill; she wishes him not to accompany or follow her now. She slowly ascends the height and disappears gradually from view.
Wolfram gazes sadly after her for a long time, then seats himself at the foot of the hill, begins to play upon his harp, and finally sings the noble and beautiful ode to the evening star.

O douce étoile (Song to the Evening Star)

By Maurice Renaud, Baritone (In French) 91067 10-inch, $2.00

WOLFRAM:

Like Death's dark shadow, Night her gloom extendeth,
Her sable wing o'er all the vale she bendeth;
The soul that longs to tread your path of light,
Yet dreads to pass the gate of Fear and Night,
I look on thee, oh, star in Heaven the fairest,
Thy gentle beam thro' trackless space thou bearest;
The hour of darkness is by thee made bright,
Thou lead'st us upward by pure light.
O ev'ning star; thy holy light
Was ne'er so welcome to my sight,
With glowing heart, that ne'er disclos'd;
Greet her when she in thy light reposed;
When parting from this vale a vision,
She rises to an angel's mission.
(He continues to play, his eyes raised to Heaven.)

Tannhäuser now appears, wearing a ragged Pilgrim's dress, his face pale and drawn, and supporting himself with difficulty by means of a staff. Wolfram greets him with emotion and learns that he is still unforgiven and has resolved to re-enter the Venusberg.

The unhappy Tannhäuser tells of the Pope's refusal of a pardon:

TANNHÄUSER:

Rome I gained at last; with tears imploring,
I knelt before the rood in faith adoring.
When daylight broke, the silv'ry bells were pealing;
Through vaulted roof a song divine was stealing;
A cry of joy breaks forth from thousand voices—
The hope of pardon ev'ry heart rejoices.
I told what mad desires my soul had darkened,
By sinful earthly pleasure long enslav'd—
To me it seem'd that he in mercy harken'd—
A gracious word in dust and tears I crav'd.
Then he who thus I prayed replied:
"If thou hast shared the joys of Hell
If thou unholy flames hast nurs'd
That in the hill of Venus dwell,
Thou art forever more accurs'd!
And as this barren staff I hold
Ne'er will put forth a flower or leaf,
Thus shalt thou never more behold
Salvation or thy sin's relief!"

VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA—WAGNER’S TANNHÄUSER

Wolfram, in horror, urges him to remain, but Tannhäuser refuses until Wolfram mentions the name of Elizabeth. The unhappy man, in sudden repentance, sinks to his knees, while in the distance is seen a company of minstrels bearing the body of Elizabeth, who has suddenly passed away. As the procession approaches, a company of Pilgrims enter and announce that the staff of the Pope had put forth green leaves as a sign that Tannhäuser was pardoned.

The Minstrel, supported by Wolfram, gazes on the saintly face of the dead Elizabeth, then expires, while the Pilgrims and minstrels with great emotion exclaim:

The Lord Himself now thy bondage hath riven—
Go, enter in with the blest in His Heaven!

Time and Place: Alexandria and the Egyptian desert; early Christian era.

Thaïs the Egyptian, a woman of wonderful beauty and a courtesan, who was converted by Pafnuco and led by him into the righteous path, is the subject of this lyric opera. The librettist has given the name of Athanael to Pafnuco, who is a young and handsome monk living with an assemblage of holy men, called Cenobites, in the desert of Thebes.

ACT I

SCENE I—The Camp of the Cenobites near the Nile

At the opening of the opera Athanael has just returned from Alexandria, haunted by the story of the famous courtesan, Thaïs, whom he feels it his duty to save. Against the advice of the head Cenobite, Palemon, he calls his brother monks together and announces his intention of returning to Alexandria to convert the courtesan to the nobler life.

SCENE II—The House of Nicias at Alexandria

Athanael arrives and is warmly greeted by Nicias, who knew the monk years before. The traveler tells his old friend he has come to the capital to teach Thaïs the better life, but Nicias only laughs at him and scoffs at the idea. However, he has his slaves dress the monk in rich robes, and when Thaïs arrives she is soon curious about the handsome stranger, whose severe demeanor arouses her interest. The monk tells her he has come to Alexandria to teach her salvation and the life everlasting, but she says she believes only in joy and love and pleasure. In horror at the revelry which is planned for the evening, Athanael leaves, declaring he will see Thaïs at her home and show her the true light.

ACT II

SCENE I—Thaïs' Apartments

The second act takes place in the luxurious home of Thaïs. Athanael enters, steeling himself against the seductive charms of Thaïs, and eloquently pleads with her for the new and higher love and the life to come. Thaïs is at first frightened and then defiant, but Athanael declares that she will yet repent, and that he will await her coming.

SCENE II—A Street in Alexandria

The next scene is in the square at dawn, where Thaïs comes to Athanael, renounces her life of pleasure, and tells him she will follow wherever he leads. He urges her to put a torch to all her earthly possessions, and she permits him to set fire to her palace. Nicias now appears with his joyous companions, singing and dancing. In the midst of the revelry they discover Thaïs in her sombre garments, and becoming infuriated over her departure, and the firing of her house, threaten to hang Athanael. Nicias, realizing the seriousness of the situation, diverts his followers by scattering gold coins among them, and in the scramble which follows Thaïs and Athanael make their escape.

ACT III

SCENE I—A Desert Oasis

In Act III the pair are seen on their way to a convent. Thaïs is almost exhausted with fatigue, and Athanael tenderly supports her. Saint Albine and the White Sisters come to meet them, and the monk delivers Thaïs over to them to remain with them till the end of life. Thaïs is happy with a great spiritual peace, but Athanael, who has grown to love her with an earthly love, is troubled at the thought of parting with her forever.

SCENE II—The Cenobites’ Camp

Athanael, returned to his retreat, no longer finds there the peace of former days, and endures mental torture, continually thinking of Thaïs. He has a vision in which she appears to him first as the courtesan and then as a nun dying in the convent. Awakening in terror, he rushes out in the darkness and makes his way again to the retreat of Thaïs.

SCENE III—The Convent of the White Sisters

Athanael arrives, finds Thaïs ill, and in a frenzy of love implores her to return to the earthly life, but Thaïs has a vision of heavenly bliss and is deaf to his entreaties, dying with a glow of happiness on her face, while Athanael falls to the ground in despair.

No opera of Mr. Hammerstein’s producing made such a deep impression on opera-goers as did Massenet’s wonderful and mystic work, although its beauties were almost intangible and hard to realize without many hearings and by Mr. Whitehill with a noble quality of voice and much dramatic force. A very fine record of the D'acqua aspergimi, the duet between Thaïs and Athanael in Act III, by Janni and Battistini, is also presented.

The Story

Tosca is Puccini's fifth opera, and by far the most popular, next to Mme. Butterfly, which probably holds first place in the affections of opera-goers. The opera is a remarkable example of Puccini's skill in adjusting both instrumental and voice effects to the sense of the story, interpreting both the characters and the situations.

The plot is gloomy and intensely tragic, following closely the Sardou melodrama, but is relieved somewhat by the beauty of the musical setting, which confirmed Puccini's place in the first rank of modern operatic composers. The three acts of the opera are crowded with sensational events and highly dramatic situations.

The work has neither introduction nor overture. The first scene occurs in the church of San Andrea, where the painter, Mario Cavaradossi, is at work on the mural decorations. Here he has been accustomed to meet his fiancée, the beautiful Floria Tosca, a singer. While awaiting her, he contemplates the Magdalen he is at work on, the face being that of the unknown beauty who had frequently prayed at the altar.

Suddenly a political refugee, Angelotti, who has just escaped from the castle, appears, recognizes his friend Cavaradossi, and asks his assistance. The painter gives him food and sends him to his (Cavaradossi's) villa, just as Tosca arrives. Her lover's confused manner arouses her curiosity, and when she sees the likeness on the easel, she is jealous. He soothes her, and after her departure hurries out to guide Angelotti, a cannon shot from the castle meanwhile announcing the escape of the fugitive.

Scarpia and his police enter in search of the prisoner, who has been traced to the church. Cavaradossi is suspected as an accomplice, and Scarpia, who is secretly in love with Tosca, plans his ruin, with a view to removing from his path a dangerous rival.
In the second act Scarpa, putting into execution his schemes, orders Mario’s arrest, and when the painter is brought in, sends for Tosca and contrives that she shall hear the cries of her lover as he is being tortured to induce him to reveal Angelotti’s hiding place. Unable to endure Mario’s agony, she tells Scarpa where the refugee is concealed. Mario is sent to prison, and Scarpa tells Tosca that unless she looks with favor on him, her lover shall die within an hour. To save his life she consents, but demands that they be allowed to depart in safety the next day. A mock execution is planned by Scarpa, who writes out a pass for the lovers. As he gives it to Tosca, she stabs him and runs to Mario with the release.

In Act III the mock execution takes place as planned, but through Scarpa’s treachery, it proves to be a real one, and Mario is killed. Tosca afterwards throws herself from the castle parapet as they attempt to arrest her for Scarpa’s murder.

ACT I

SCENE—Interior of the Church of St. Andrea

Mario Cavaradossi, the painter, enters the church where he has been at work on a Madonna. As he uncovers the portrait, the Sacristan, who is assisting Mario, is surprised to discover in the face of the painting the unknown beauty whom he had noticed of late in the church. Mario smilingly confesses that while she had prayed he had stolen her likeness for his Madonna. Then taking out a miniature of his betrothed, Tosca, he sings a lovely air in which he compares her dark beauty with the fair tresses and blue eyes of the unknown worshipper, calling it “a strange but harmonious contrast.”

Recondita armonia (Strange Harmony)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor

His musings are interrupted by the hurried entrance of a man in prison garb, panting with fear and fatigue, whom Mario recognizes as an old friend, Angelotti, a political prisoner. Mario, in response to his friend’s appeal for assistance, hastily closes the outer door, and conceals Angelotti in the chapel, just as Tosca’s voice is heard impatiently demanding admittance.

He admits her, but is anxious and ill at ease, fearing to intrust even Tosca with so dangerous a secret, but she notices his preoccupation and is somewhat piqued because he is not as attentive as usual. She is at first jealous and asks him if he is thinking of another woman; but soon repents, and in the charming love scene which follows endeavors to smooth his brow by planning an excursion for the morrow.
She sings of the delights of the proposed visit to the villa, and the romantic forest where they will wander and forget the cares and troubles of their professional life. He listens but seems absent-minded, and she continues her recital of the joys of their secluded little retreat among the hills. Mario says she is an enchantress, and in this duet they exchange anew their vows of love.

Tosca now perceives the Madonna and recognizes the face as that of the Attavanti, sister of Angelotti. Her jealousy revives, and she declares that Mario has fallen in love with the blue eyes. Beginning another duet, he swears that none but Tosca’s eyes are beautiful to him.

Qual occhio al mondo (No Eyes on Earth)

Mario promises to meet her at the stage door that evening, and she bids her lover a tender farewell and departs. The painter hurries to the chapel and bids Angelotti escape, showing him the path to the villa, where he will be safe. A cannon shot from the fortress tells that the escape of the prisoner has been discovered.

He is no sooner gone than the Sacristan and choir enter, followed soon after by Scarpia and his police, who have traced Angelotti to the church. The Attavanti’s fan and Mario’s empty basket are found in the chapel, and when the Sacristan says it should contain the painter’s lunch, Scarpia suspects Mario of aiding the prisoner.

Tosca now returns, still doubting her lover, and Scarpia, divining the state of affairs, decides to add fuel to the flame of jealousy. He approaches her respectfully and sings his first air, Divine Tosca.

Tosca Divina (Divine Tosca!)

By Gustav Berle-Resky, Baritone
In Italian
16745 10-inch, $.75

He praises her noble character and devout habits. She is inattentive and scarcely hears him, until he insinuatingly says that she is not like other women who come here to meet their lovers. She asks him what he means and Scarpia shows her the fan which he had found in the church. Tosca is now convinced that Mario has been deceiving her, and in a jealous rage she leaves the church, weeping.

Te Deum

By Giuseppe Magge, Bass, and La Scala Chorus (In Italian)
55008 12-inch, $1.50
The act closes with a Te Deum, sung in celebration of the defeat of Bonaparte, and the scene at the fall of the curtain is a most impressive one, the solemn strains of the service sounding through the church, while Scarpia kneels, apparently in reverence, but secretly plotting his diabolical crimes.

ACT II

SCENE—A Room in Scarpia's Apartments in the Farnese Palace

When the curtain rises Scarpia is shown at his supper, restless and agitated, awaiting the report of his police, who have been sent to arrest Mario and Angelotti. Hearing Tosca's voice in the apartments of the Queen below, where she is singing at a soiree, he sends her a note saying he has news of her lover. He is certain she will come for Mario's sake, and sure that his plan will succeed. He then sings his celebrated soliloquy. Scarpia loves such a conquest as this—no tender vows in the moonlight for him! He prefers taking what he desires by force, then when wearied he is ready for further conquest. This, in short, is his creed—God has created divers wines and many types of beauty—he prefers to enjoy as many of them as possible!

Mario is brought in by the police who report that Angelotti cannot be found. Scarpia is furious, and tries to force Mario to reveal the hiding place of the fugitive; but he refuses to speak, and is ordered into the torture chamber adjoining. Tosca comes in answer to Scarpia's summons and is told that Mario is being tortured into a confession. Unable to bear the sound of his groans, she reveals the hiding place of Angelotti. Scarpia, in triumph, orders the torture to cease, but sends Mario to prison, telling him he must die. Tosca tries to go with him but is forced to remain.

Then begins the great scene of the opera, which Scarpia begins by offering to save Mario's life. She scornfully asks him his price, and he proposes that Tosca shall accept his attentions in order to save her lover's life. He then sings his famous Cantabile.

Gia mi struggia (You Have Scorned Me)
(Last Part of Cantabile)

He tells her that he has long loved her and had sworn to possess her. She scorns him, but when he tells her that Mario shall die in an hour and exults in his power, her spirit is broken, and weeping for shame, she sings that loveliest and most pathetic of airs, Vissi d'arte.

Vissi d'arte e d'amor (Love and Music)
By Nellie Melba, Soprano (In Italian) 88075 12-inch, $3.00
By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano (In Italian) 88192 12-inch, 3.00
By Emma Eames, Soprano (In Italian) 88010 12-inch, 3.00
By Lucille Marcell, Soprano (In Italian) 76018 12-inch, 2.00
By Maria Bronzoni, Soprano (In Italian) 45017 10-inch, 1.00
By Agnes Kimball, Soprano (In English) 60070 10-inch, .75
One of the most interesting comparisons to be found in the Victor's opera list is in a hearing of these six renditions, by six famous Toscas—Melba, the Australian; Farrar, Eames and Kimball, the Americans; Marcell, the Frenchwoman; and Bronzoni, the Italian, the latter record being doubled with Mario's 3d Act air.

This highly impassioned number is given its full dramatic value by Mme. Melba, whose performance of the ill-fated Floria Tosca is always an impressive one. Farrar, in her rendition, delivers this touching appeal of the unfortunate Tosca with much pathos and simplicity. It is probably the most perfect and beautiful of all the Farrar records. The air is also a fine test of Mme. Eames' dramatic ability, and this scene is one in which she has made one of her greatest triumphs.

The unhappy woman asks what she has done that Heaven should forsake her. Scarpia, who is watching her intently, calls her attention to the sound of drums, summoning the escort for the condemned prisoners, and demands her answer. She yields, bowing her head for shame. Scarpia is overjoyed, and when she insists that Mario shall be set free he consents, but says a mock execution is necessary.

It is agreed that after this pretended execution, Mario shall have his liberty, but Tosca demands a safe escape from the country for them both. While Scarpia is writing the document, Tosca contrives to secure the dagger from the table, and as Scarpia approaches to give it to her and then take her in his arms, she stabs him, crying that thus she gives him the kiss he desired. In a prolonged and highly dramatic scene she takes the paper from Scarpia's dead fingers, then washes her hands in a bowl on the table, places the two candles at the dead man's head and the cross on his bosom, then goes out, turning for a last look at the lifeless body as the curtain falls.

ACT III

(A terrace of San Angelo Castle, outside the prison cell of Cavaradossi. View of Rome by night)

The music of the opening act is most effective, with its accompaniment of pealing church bells, and it is splendidly played by Mr. Pryor in the Tosca Selection. This entire prelude is also given by an Italian orchestra under the direction of Sabaino, doubled with the Te Deum of Act I.

Prelude

By La Scala Orchestra 55008 12-inch, $1.50

Mario is brought out from his cell, is shown the official death warrant, and told he has but one hour to live. He asks permission to write a note to Tosca, and is given paper and pen. He begins to write, but engrossed with memories of the past, he pauses and sings passionately of his loved one, whom he expects never to see again.
E lucevan le stelle (The Stars Were Shining)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor
(In Italian) 87044 10-inch, $2.00
By Riccardo Martin, Tenor
(In Italian) 87050 10-inch, 2.00
By Franco de Gregorio, Tenor
(In Italian) 45017 10-inch, 1.00

Mario at first recalls their former meetings on starlight nights in quiet gardens; then, feeling the bitter regret of loss of life and all that he holds dear, the voice rises in passages of tragical import and power as the air proceeds. The regret, the grief and the hopelessness of the situation are depicted by Caruso with intense pathos, the air closing with a sob—an effect by which this singer can effectively express the extremity of passionate grief.

In Martin's rendition this tenor is at his best, singing the lovely Puccini music with much beauty of tone. The de Gregorio record is a double-faced one, being paired with Mme. Bronzoni's Vissi d'arte.

Tosca now enters, and joyfully telling Mario he is to be free, shows him the safe conduct, telling him how she has killed Scarpia. He gazes at her with compassion and regrets that these hands—such tender and beautiful hands—should be compelled to foul themselves with a scoundrel's blood. She then explains that a mock execution has been arranged, and instructs him to fall down when the volley is fired, and when the soldiers are gone they are to escape together.

In a beautiful duet, recorded here in two parts, they rejoice in their hopes for the future.

Amaro sol per te m'era il morire (The Bitterness of Death)

By Elena Ruszcowska, Soprano, and Egidio Cunego, Tenor
(In Italian) 88274 12-inch, $3.00

Trionfa di nuova speme (A New World)

By Elena Ruszcowska and Egidio Cunego
(In Italian) 87069 10-inch, $2.00

The squad of soldiers now enter and the pretended execution takes place as planned; the shots are fired and Mario falls as if dead. Tosca waits till the firing party is gone, whispering to her lover not to get up until the footsteps have died away. "Now, Mario, all is safe," she cries, but is astounded that he does not obey her. She rushes to him, only to find that Scarpia had added another piece of treachery to his long list, having secretly ordered Mario to be killed. She throws herself on his body in an agony of grief.

Spoletta and soldiers now come running in and announce the murder of Scarpia; but when they attempt to arrest Tosca she leaps from the castle wall and is killed.

(1810-1876)
LIBRETTIST OF TRAVIATA

Prelude to Act I

By La Scala Orchestra (Double-faced—See page 441) 68027 12-inch, $1.25

The prelude, one of the loveliest bits in the opera, is played in fine style by the famous orchestra of La Scala.
ACT I

SCENE—Drawing-room in the House of Violetta

A gay revel is in progress at the house of Violetta, and the act opens with a lively chorus, followed by a rousing drinking song, given by Alfred, in which Violetta joins.

Libiam nei lieti calici (A Bumper We'll Drain)

By Amelia Rizzini, Soprano; Emilio Perea, Tenor; and La Scala Chorus

(IN ITALIAN) *62415 10-inch. $.075

ALFRED:

A bumper we'll drain from the wine-cup flowing,
That fresh charms to beauty is lending,
O'er fleeting moments, so quickly ending,
Gay pleasure alone should reign.

CHORUS:

Enjoy then the wine-cup with songs of pleasure
That make night so cheerful and smiling,
In this charming paradise, beguiling,
That scarcely we heed the day.

The dance commences, and all go into the ballroom except Violetta and Alfred, who remain for a charming love scene. In a beautiful duet the lovers speak of their first meeting.

Un di felice (Rapturous Moment)

(IN RUSSIAN) 61138 10-inch. $1.00

By Emma Trentini, Soprano, and Gino Martínez-Patti, Tenor

Alfred now bids her a tender farewell and takes his departure, and Violetta sings her great air, one of the most brilliant of all colorature numbers.

By Luisa Tetrazzini, Soprano

The aria occurs at the close of the act. Violetta, wonderstruck at finding herself the object of a pure love, begins the soliloquy, E strano, saying:

How wondrous!
His words deep within my heart are graven!
No love of mortal yet hath moved me.

She then sings the plaintive air, Ah, fors' è lui, and gives herself up to the spell of awakening love:

VIOLETTA:

Ah, was it he my heart foretold, when in the throng of pleasure,
Oft have I joy'd to shadow forth one whom alone I'd treasure.
He who with watchful tenderness guarded my waning powers,

Strewing my way with flowers,
Waking my heart to love!
Ah, now I feel that 'tis love and love alone,
Sole breath of all in the life, the life universal,
Mysterious power, guiding the fate of mortals,
Sorrow and sweetness of this poor earth.

The animated last movement follows, as the unhappy woman shakes off the illusion and once more vows to devote her life to pleasure.

*Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED LA TRAVIATA RECORDS, page 441.
What folly! what folly!
For me there's no returning!
In ev'ry fierce and wild delight,
I'll steep my sense and die!
I'll fulfill the round of pleasure.
Joying, toying from flower to flower,
I will drain a brimming measure from the cup of rosy joy.
Never weary, each dawning morrow
Flies to bear me some new rapture
Ever fresh delights I'll borrow,
I will banish all annoy!

Victor customers have no fewer than six renditions of this great air at their command and are likely to be embarrassed in their attempts to choose between them.

Melba's singing of this air is marked not only by great brilliancy, but by dramatic fervor, and she makes a marked contrast between the sadness of the prelude and the forced gayety of the finale. Both portions of the aria (formerly issued in two parts) now are included in one record.

Mme. Tetrazzini chose this opera for her first appearance both in London and New York, and the choice was an admirable one, as Verdi's work exhibits all the soprano's fine qualities—not only her wonderful coloratura but the warmth and color which she possesses in a high degree. Many operatic sopranos regard the part of Violetta merely as a background for a vocal display. Tetrazzini on the other hand, while not neglecting the opportunities for coloratura, brings to the part a human tenderness and a pathos which are most affecting. Her rendering of this familiar Ah, fort è lui is a most musical one, with its astonishing feats of execution; and the ease with which she trills an E in all can only be described as amazing.

Mme. Sembrich in her turn fully realizes the composer's ideal in the presentation of this florid and ornamental air, and seldom has a more satisfying rendition been heard.

Other fine renderings are provided by Miss Marsh and Mme. Huguet.

ACT II

SCENE—Interior of a Country House near Paris

Alfred enters and soliloquizes upon his new-found happiness.

Alfred: Three months have already flown
Since my belov'd Violetta
Left for me her riches and admirers.
Yet now contented in this retreat, so quiet,
She forgets all for me,

He then sings his Dei mei bollenti, a lovely air, in which he speaks of his wild youth, and the peace and happiness which have come to him through his love for Violetta.

Dei mei bollenti spiriti (Wild My Dream)

By Aristodemo Giorgini (Italian) 76011 12-inch. $2.00
By Herman Jadlowker (Italian) 76024 12-inch. 2.00
By Emilio Perea, Tenor (Italian) *68156 12-inch. 1.25
By Alberto Amadi, Tenor (Italian) *63314 10-inch. .75

Alfred: Fever'd and wild my dream of youth,
No star on high to guide me,
She shone on me with ray benign,
And trouble fled away!
When low she whisper'd: "Live for me, on earth I love but thee."
Ah, since that bright, that blessed day,
In Heaven, 'mid joys celestial,
In Heaven I seem to be!

Alfred learns from Violetta’s faithful maid that she has been obliged to sell her jewels for their support. He is much ashamed and leaves for Paris to secure some money.

Violetta returns and is surprised at Alfred’s sudden departure. A visitor is announced, who proves to be Germont, the father of Alfred. He has been greatly distressed at his son’s entanglement, and comes to beg Violetta to release the young man from his promises. She is much moved, and her bearing makes a favorable impression on Germont, especially when he learns that she has sold her property for Alfred’s sake.

Pura siccome un angelo (Pure as an Angel)

Non sapete (Ah, You Know Not)

*By Ernesto Badini, Baritone (Italian) *45028 10-inch, $1.00

In this air Germont pleads for his own daughter, whose engagement to a youth of Provence will be broken if Alfred does not return home. Violetta at first refuses, saying that her love for Alfred is above all other considerations, but when Germont says:

Be to my home and lov’d ones
Our angel, good, consoling,
Violetta, oh, consider well
While yet there may be time.
’Tis Heav’n itself that bids me speak,
These words in faith sublime!

she finally yields, agreeing to leave Alfred forever, and they sing a melodious duet:

Dite alla giovine (Say to Thy Daughter)

*By Maria Galvany and Titta Ruffo (In Italian) 92503 12-inch, $4.00

VIOLETTA:

Say to this child of thine, young, pure and lovely,
Thou hast a victim found, whose life of sadness
Had but one single ray of rapture and gladness,
Which she will yield to her, then gladly die.

GERMONT:

Weep on, thou hapless one,
Weep on; I witness thy trial
In what I ask of thy self-denial.
Bear up, thou noble heart, triumph is nigh.

VIOLETTA:

Embrace me as thy daughter, then will my heart be strong.
(They embrace.)
Ere long restor’d you’ll find him.

Germont expresses his gratitude, embraces the weeping Violetta and departs, while the unhappy woman writes to Alfred of her decision and returns to Paris.

When the young man returns he is driven to despair by Violetta’s note, and repulses his father, who pleads with him to return. Germont then sings his most beautiful number, the Di Provenza.

Di Provenza il mar (Thy Home in Fair Provence)

*By G. Mario Sammarco, Baritone (In Italian) 88314 12-inch, $3.00

*By Ernesto Badini, Baritone (In Italian) *45001 10-inch, 1.00

In this touching appeal he asks his son to return to his home in Provence and to his father’s heart.

Sammarco sings the number with a wealth of tenderness and expression, revealing a smooth, rich and resonant baritone which is good to hear; and a popular-priced record by Badini is also offered.

*Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED LA TRAVIATA RECORDS, page 441.
GERMONT:
From fair Provence's soil and sea,
Who hath won thy heart away?
From thy native sunny clime,
What strange fate caus'd thee to stray?
Oh, remember in thy woe
All the joy that waits for thee,
All the peace thy heart would know,
Only there, still found may be.
Ah, thy father old and worn,
What he felt thou ne'er canst know,
In thine absence, so forlorn
Seem'd his home, with grief and woe.
But I find thee now again,
If my hope doth not mislead,
If yet honor doth remain
With its voice not mute or dead.
Heav'n sends me aid!

Alfred refuses to yield to his father's plea,
and departs for Paris in search of Violetta.

SCENE II—A Richly Furnished Salon in Flora's Palace. On the Right a Gaming Table

As the curtain rises Flora and her friends are discussing the separation of the lovers and Flora says she expects Violetta will soon arrive with the Baron. Alfred enters, and remarking with assumed indifference that he knows nothing of Violetta's whereabouts, begins to gamble and wins heavily.

The Baron appears, accompanied by Violetta, who is agitated at the sight of Alfred, but he pretends not to see her and challenges the Baron to a game, again winning large amounts. Supper is announced and all leave the room except Violetta and Alfred, who linger behind. He charges her with her falseness, and, in furtherance of the promise made to Germont, she pretends to him that she loves the Baron. Alfred then loses all control over himself, and throwing open the doors, he calls to the guests to re-enter.

Questa donna conosceste (Know Ye All This Woman?)
By Alberto Amadi, Tenor
(In Italian) *63314 10-inch, $0.75

Pointing to Violetta, Alfred cries wildly:

ALFRED:
But there is time to purge me yet
All she possess'd, this woman here,
From stains that shame, confound me.
I, blindly, basely, wretchedly,
That here I pay the debt!

and completes the insult by throwing at her feet the money he had just won.

At this moment Alfred's father, Germont, enters, and is horrified at the scene which confronts him. Then follows the splendid finale, one of the greatest of Verdi's concerted numbers.

Alfredo, di questo core (Alfred, Thou Knowest Not)
By Giuseppina Huguet, Soprano; G. Pini-Corsi, Tenor; Ernesto Badini, Baritone; and Chorus
(In Italian) 58392 12-inch, $1.00

The emotions of the various characters are expressed by the librettist as follows:

GUESTS:
Oh, to what baseness thy passions have led
To wound thus fatally one who has loved thee!

GERMONT:
of scorn most worthy himself dost render
Who wounds in anger a woman tender!
My son, where is he? No more I see him;
In thee, Alfred, I seek him; but in vain!

ALFRED (aside):
Ah! yes, 'twas shameful! a deed abhorrent!
A jealous fury—love's madd'ning torrent.
But now that fury is all expended,
Remorse and horror to me remain.

BARON:
This shameful insult against this lady
Offends all present; behold me ready
To punish the outrage!

VIOLETTA (receiving):
Ah, love Alfredo, this heart's devotion
Thou canst not fathom yet—its fond emotion!
When, hereafter the truth comes o'er thee
May Heven in pity then spare thee remorse!
(Germont goes out supporting Alfred, who is almost in a state of collapse. The fainting Violetta is led away by her friends, and the guests begin to disperse as the curtain falls.)

*Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED LA TRAVIATA RECORDS, page 441.
ACT III

(Violetta’s apartment. She is asleep on the couch, while her maid dozes by the fire)

As the curtain rises the doctor’s knock is heard, and Dr. Grenvil, Violetta’s physician, enters and attends his patient, afterwards telling the maid that she has not long to live. Left alone, Violetta reads again a letter she has received from Germont.

"Thou hast kept thy promise. The duel took place and the Baron was wounded, but is improving. Alfredo is in foreign countries. Your sacrifice has been revealed to him by me, and he will return to you for pardon. Haste to recover; thou deservest a bright future."

Georgio Germont

"Alas, it is too late," she exclaims, and sings her beautiful and pathetic “Farewell.”

Addio del passato (Farewell to the Bright Visions)
By Alice Nielsen, Soprano
By Marie Michailowa, Soprano

(VIOLETTA:
Farewell to the bright visions I once fondly cherish’d.
Already the roses that deck’d me have perish’d;
The love of Alfredo is lost, past regaining.
That cheer’d me when fainting, my spirit sustaining.

Alfred now enters, filled with remorse, and asks forgiveness, which is freely granted; and Violetta, forgetting her illness, plans with Alfred to leave Paris forever. They sing this melodious duet, "Gay Paris We’ll Leave With Gladness."

Parigi o cara (Far from Gay Paris)
By Alice Nielsen and Florencio Constantino
By Amelia Rizzini, Soprano, and Emilio Perea, Tenor

At the close of the duet Violetta’s overtaxed strength gives way, and she collapses in her lover’s arms. He notices for the first time her paleness, and is much alarmed, sending the maid to call the doctor. Dr. Grenvil soon enters, accompanied by Germont, and after an affecting scene, in which Germont blames himself for all that has occurred, Violetta expires, and the curtain falls on a sorrowful tableau.

OPERA IN THREE ACTS

Words and music by Richard Wagner, the plot being derived from an old Celtic poem of the same name, written by Gottfried of Strasburg, who flourished in the thirteenth century—though Wagner has changed the narrative sufficiently to make it his own. Tristan is one of the most popular of legendary heroes and has been treated of by numerous writers, among them Tennyson, Matthew Arnold and Swinburne.

Wagner’s Tristan und Isolde was first presented in Munich, June 10, 1865. First London production June 20, 1882. First American performance in New York, December 1, 1885.

Although completed in 1859, Tristan was not produced until six years later. Through the strenuous efforts of King Ludwig II of Bavaria, it was ultimately brought out in Munich with distinct artistic success—Schnorr, the tenor, scoring brilliantly in the rôle of Tristan. Previous to this time, however, it had been underlined for performance in Vienna, but was abandoned after fifty-seven rehearsals.

The opera did not find its way to America until it was more than twenty years old, but since that time has grown steadily in popularity.

This great drama of love and hatred, with its wonderful music, is now quite generally admitted to be the finest of the master’s operas. Written at the time of Wagner’s own love affair (with Mathilde Wesendonck), it is supposed that he sought to emphasize the fact that love cannot always be bound by conventions.

Tristan, a Cornish knight, has a quarrel with Morold, an Irish chieftain who had been sent to collect tribute, and kills him; and after the custom of the time, sends back his head, which is given to his fiancée, an Irish princess, Isolde. Tristan himself had received a dangerous wound which fails to heal, and he resolves to assume the name of Tantris and seek the assistance of Isolde, who is famed for her knowledge of the art of healing. Isolde, however, recognizes him by a notch in his sword, which fits exactly a piece of metal she had extracted from the head of Morold. She plans to kill him, but falls in love instead, while he merely sees in her a good wife for his uncle, King Mark.

Preludio (Prelude)

By La Scala Orchestra 68210 12-inch, $1.25

The first act shows the deck of the ship which is conveying Isolde and Tristan to Cornwall, she having accepted King Mark’s proposal, made through his nephew. During the voyage, however, the refusal of Tristan to see her, the exultation of the sailors over the killing of Morold (which freed Cornwall from its subjection to Isolde’s royal father), and detestation of the loveless marriage she is about to contract, infuriate the Princess, and she resolves to die and drag Tristan down to death with her. She tells Tristan she is aware of his crime in killing her lover, and demands vengeance. He admits her right to kill him and offers his sword, but she bids her maid, Brangäne, prepare two cups of poison from her casket. Brangäne, unwilling to see her mistress die, secretly substitutes for the poison a love potion, the effect of which is immediate, and the lovers sink into each other’s arms just as the ship approaches the shore and the King arrives to claim his bride.

Act II takes place in the garden outside Isolde’s chamber. The King has gone on a hunting expedition, but Brangäne fears that it is merely a ruse, and thinks the King's court-tier, Melot, suspects the true state of affairs. Brangäne then confesses that she intentionally substituted the philtre for the poisoned cup intended for Tristan.

Brangäne:
Fatal folly!
The fell pow'r of that potion!
That I framed
A fraud for once
Thy orders to oppose!
Had I been deaf and blind,
Thy work were then thy death!
But thy distress,
Thy distraction of grief,
My work has contrived them,
I own it!

This confession meets with but faint reproaches from Isolde, who gives herself up wholly to the intoxication of the potion, and sings with growing exaltation:

Dein Werk (Thy Act)

By Johanna Gadski, Soprano

(In German) 88165 12-inch, $3.00

I took into my own hands;
Love's goddess saw
And gave her good commands.
Planning our fate in her own way,
How she may bend it, how she may end it,
Still hers am I solely;
What she may make me, whereso'er take me
So let me obey her wholly!

Refusing to heed Brangäne’s warning, Isolde gives the signal for Tristan’s coming by extinguishing the torch. He appears, and a long love scene ensues, interrupted by the return of the King, who surprises the lovers in a fond embrace. Mark bitterly reproaches his nephew, and Melot, shouting “treason,” stabs Tristan, inflicting a fatal wound.

The third act shows Tristan dying of the wound at his castle in Bretagne, whither he has been carried by his faithful servant, Kurvenal, who has sent for Isolde, knowing that she alone can cure his master’s wound by means of her healing arts.
Despairing of her coming, Tristan in his delirium tears off his bandages and is at the point of death when Isolde arrives, and dies in her arms. King Mark and his courtiers, closely pursuing Isolde, now arrive and are attacked by Kurvenal, who kills Melot and is himself slain by Mark's soldiers. Mark, seeing Tristan dead and Isolde senseless on his body, repents his rage and gives way to grief. Isolde revives, and when she realizes that Tristan is dead, her grief bursts forth in the heartrending Love-Death motive:

The Love Death:

Then she sings this wondrous death song, so full of touching sadness and inexpressible sweetness, and expires upon the body of Tristan.

Isolde (unconscious of all around her, turning her eyes with rising inspiration on Tristan's body):
Mild and softly he is smiling;
How his eyelids sweetly open!
See, oh comrades, see you not
How he beameth ever brighter—
How he rises ever radiant
Steeped in starlight, borne above?
See you not how his heart
With lion zest, calmly happy
Beats in his breast?
From his lips in Heavenly rest,
Sweetest breath he softly sends.
Harken, friends!
Hear and feel ye not?
Is it I alone am hearing
Strains so tender and endearing?
Passion swelling, all things telling,
Gently bounding, from him sounding,
In me pushes, upward rushes
Trumpet tone that round me gushes.
Brighter growing, o'er me flowing,
Are these breezes airy pillows?
Are they balmy beauteous billows?
How they rise and gleam and glisten!
Shall I breathe them? Shall I listen?
Shall I sip them, dive within them?
To my panting breathing win them?
In the breezes around, in the harmony sound,
In the world's driving whirlwind be drown'd—
And, sinking, be drinking—
In a kiss, highest bliss!
(Isolde sinks, as if transfigured, in Brangane's arms upon Tristan's body. Profound emotion and grief of the bystanders. Mark invokes a blessing on the dead. Curtain.)

ACT I

SCENE I—Vestibule in Aliaferia Palace

As befits a tragic work, Il Trovatore opens in an atmosphere of romance and mystery. The retainers of Count di Luna await the arrival of their master, and to beguile the time Ferrando relates the history of the Count’s childhood and the loss of his brother.

Abbietta zingara (Swarthy and Threatening)
By Torres de Luna and La Scala Chorus (In Italian) *62416 10-inch. $0.75
The brother, as an infant, came under the evil eye of a witch, who was seized and condemned to the stake. This witch had a daughter, who determined to avenge her mother's fate, with the result that the Count's younger son disappeared; and after the witch's burning there was discovered upon the pile of charred embers the bones of a child. This story is told in the Abbietta to a fierce rhythmical tune, expressing all shades of horror.

Ferrando:
With two sons, heirs of fortune and affection,
Liv'd the Count in enjoyment;
Watching the younger for his safe protection
A good nurse found employment.
One morning, as the dawn's first rays were shining.
From her pillow she rose,—
Who was found, think ye, near the child reclining?

(Impressively.)
Sat there a gypsy-hag, witch-like appearing;
Of her dark mysteries, strange symbols wearing.
O'er the babe sleeping—with fierce looks bending,
Gaz'd she upon him, black deeds intending!
Horror profound seized the nurse at that dark vision;
And the dark intruder was soon expelled.
Soon they found the child was failing,
Coming darkness appall'd him,
The hag's dark spell enthralld him!

(All appear horrified.)
Sought they the gypsy, on all sides turning,
Seiz'd and condemn'd her to death by burning.
One child, accursed, left she remaining,
Quick to avenge her, no means disdaining;
Thus she accomplished her dark retribution!
Lost was the Count's child; search unavailing;
But on the site of the hag's execution
They found, 'mid the embers,
The bones of a young infant,
Half consumed and burning!

In the second part Ferrando concludes his narrative, which is mingled with the comments of the listeners, who tell of the reputed appearance of the witch in ghostly shape.

Sull' orlo dei tetti (As a Vampire You May See Her)
By Torres de Luna, Bass, and La Scala Chorus

To the voice of the narrator is added the awe-stricken whispers of the chorus, which afterwards swell into a cry of fierce denunciation. The foreboding bell and an instrumental diminuendo complete the picture, which makes a fitting conclusion to a gruesome story.

The clock strikes twelve, and with cries of "Cursed be the witch infernal!" the retainers disperse.

SCENE II—The Gardens of the Palace

The fair Leonora now appears with her faithful companion, Inez. She confides to Inez her interest in the unknown knight whom she had first seen at the Tournament, and sings her first number.

In this wistful air, so unlike the weird music preceding it, she speaks of the Troubadour who serenades her, and of the feelings which have been inspired in her breast by his song.

Leonora:
How calm, how placid, was the night!
The cloudless sky, how clear, how bright!
The moon in splendor shed her light,
And all was hushed in peace around!
Suddenly, on the midnight air,

The ladies go into the house just as the Count, who is also wooing the fair Leonora, appears to watch under her window. He has barely taken his station when the lovely song of the Troubadour is heard:

Deserto sulla terra (Naught on Earth is Left Me)
By Nicola Zerola, Tenor (In Italian) 64172 10-inch, $1.00

In this beautiful serenade, one of the gems of the opera, the Troubadour sings of his lonely life and the one hope that remains to him.

Manrico:
Lonely on earth abiding,
Warring 'gainst fate's cruel chiding,
Hope doth one heart implore,
To love the Troubadour!

But that fond treasure gaining,
In faith and love obtaining,
High o'er all kings would soar,
The happy Troubadour!

The Count is filled with rage as Manrico appears and confesses his love in song, and when Leonora comes forth to greet her lover, the anger of di Luna bursts in a storm upon them both, in the strain with which this number opens.

Di geloso amor sprezzato (Now My Vengeance)

By Maria Bernacchi, Soprano; Luigi Colazza, Tenor; Ernesto Caronna, Baritone (In Italian) *16808 10-inch, .75

Manrico defies him and they agree to fight to the death. Leonora implores her lover to stay, but is unable to restrain the jealous passion which inspires the rivals, and after the powerful and exciting trio they rush out with drawn swords, while Leonora falls senseless.

ACT II

SCENE I—A Gypsy Camp in the Biscay Mountains

We are now in the gypsy encampment at early morning, as the shadows of night are passing away before the dawn. The men are beginning work, and in this, the famous Anvil Chorus, they hammer as they sing.

La zingarella (Anvil Chorus)

By Victor Orchestra 17231 10-inch, .75
By Victor Male Chorus 12584 10-inch, .60

The swinging tune is accompanied by the ring of blows on the anvil, and the rough voices of the men and the sound of the hammers make a truly impressive musical picture.

Chorus of Gypsies:
See how the shadows of night are flying!
Morn breaketh, Heav'n's glorious arch unveiling:
Like a young widow, who, weary of sighing,
Lays by her garments of sorrow and wailing.
Rouse up, to labor!
Take each his hammer.

Who makes the gypsy's, a life with pleasure laden?

Women:
Who makes the gypsy's, a life with pleasure laden, who?

All:
The gypsy maiden!
See how the sunlight, radiantly glowing,
Borrows new beams from our wine cups o'erflowing:
Resume our labor! Take each his hammer!
Who makes the gypsy's life, etc.

*Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED IL TROVATORE RECORDS, page 457.
Azucena, the gypsy, who now appears, proves to be none other than the witch's daughter spoken of in the first act. In the highly dramatic song allotted to her she relates to Manrico the dreadful story of the death of her mother, who had been burned at the stake as a witch by the father of the present Count di Luna.

Stride la vampa (Fierce Flames Are Soaring)
By Louise Homer, Contralto
(In Italian) 87033 10-inch, $2.00
By Lina Mileri, Contralto
(In Italian) *16808 10-inch, .75

In the aria she mentally lives again through the scene of her mother's execution, each horrible detail of which is indelibly imprinted upon her memory.

This wild contralto air in the minor, with its deep, rich, and ever-changing tones, is well suited to so grim a recital.

Upward the flames roll; the crowd presses fiercely on,
Rush to the burning with seeming gladness;
Loud cries of pleasure from all sides re-echoing!
By guards surrounded—forty comes a woman!
While, o'er them shining, with wild, unearthly glare,
Dark wreaths of flame curl, ascending to heaven!
Upward the flames roll! on comes the victim still;
Robed in dark garments, ungirt, unsandal'd;
Fierce cries of vengeance from that dark crowd arise;
Echo repeats them from mountain to mountain.
O'er them reflecting, with wild, unearthly glare.
Dark wreaths of flame curl, ascending to heaven!

The rendition of this thrilling air by Mme. Homer is a most dramatic and impressive one; while an excellent lower-priced record is furnished by Mme. Mileri.

Questioned by Manrico, Azucena tells him the story of her past. In obedience to her mother's last cry for vengeance, she stole the Count's young child, and threw it on the flames where her mother was consumed. But she soon discovered that in her frenzy she had destroyed her own infant, and preserved the child of the noble. Wild as was the previous air, this proves a still more dramatic setting of the conclusion of the story. The orchestral accompaniment crashes, wails and sob's, the voice rises and falls in hatred or terror, until at last the gypsy sinks exhausted with the stress of emotion that her tale has excited.

Condotta ell'era in ceppi (In Chain's to Her Doom They Dragged Her)
By Lina Mileri, Contralto (In Italian) *35176 12-inch, $1.25

The story has set Manrico thinking. "If your son perished," he asks, "whose child am I?" But the gypsy, with a born instinct for dissimulation, avoids the question, still claiming him as her son. She reminds him of the almost fatal wounds received in an attack from the Count di Luna and his men, from which she had nursed him back to life.

AZUCENA:
To me thy life's protection thou owest.
At midnight, on the field of battle
My cares revived the vital spark
Many hours did I tend thee, healing thy wounds,
So ghastly and numerous!

Mal reggend' o all' aspro assalto (At My Mercy Lay the Foe)
By Louise Homer and Enrico Caruso (In Italian) 89049 12-inch, $4.00
By Clotilde Esposito and Luigi Colazza (In Italian) *16550 10-inch, .75

In the opening strain of this air, Manrico tells of his single combat with the Count, in which by an irresistible impulse, after telling his antagonist to earth, he spared the noble's life. The voice of the gypsy then bids him never again to allow their enemy to escape, but to unhesitatingly administer the death-blow. Manrico's story of the duel is expressed by a

By Francesco Cigada, Baritone (In Italian) *16812 10-inch, .75
By Alan Turner, Baritone (In English) *16521 10-inch, .75

This solo almost wins the Count our sympathy, in spite of ourselves, so genuine and heart-felt an expression of the tender passion it is.

COUNT:
Of her smile, the radiant gleaming,
Pales the starlight's brightest reflection,
While her face with beauty beaming,
Brings me fresh ardor, lends to my affection.

Ah! this love within me burning,
More than words shall plead on my part,
Her bright glances on me turning,
Calm the tempest in my heart!

The convent bell is heard tolling as a signal for the final rites which make Leonora a nun. The Count, in a burst of passion, declares they must seize her before she reaches the altar.

Per me ora fatale (This Passion That Inspires Me)
By Ernesto Caronna, Baritone, and La Scala Chorus (In Italian) *16814 10-inch, $0.75

This declaration is expressed in a vigorous air.

COUNT (furiously):
Oh, hour of fate to me,
Hasten thy lagging moments,
The joy that I anticipate
Is of more than mortal worth!

No rival can I have;
No one dare my love to thwart!
For me hath fate design'd her,
And to me she shall belong!

They conceal themselves among the trees as the chant of the nuns is heard.

Ah! se l'error t'ingombra ('Mid the Shades of Error)
By Francesco Cigada, Baritone, and La Scala Chorus (In Italian) *16550 10-inch, $0.75

They sing of the coming retirement of Leonora from the world, while from their place of concealment the Count and his retainers speak of their coming triumph.

CHORUS OF NUNS:
Ah! when the shades of night,
Oh, daughter of Eve, shall close on thee,
Then wilt thou know that life
Is but a shadow, a fleeting dream—
Yes, like the passing of a shadow
Are all our earthly hopes!

Come, then, and let this mystic veil
From human eye enshroud thee;
Hence let care and worldly thought
For evermore be banish'd;
To Heaven now turn thee, and Heaven
Will open to receive thee!

* Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED IL TROVATORE RECORDS, page 457.
COUNT:
Triumphant hour impending,
Thy moments urge with speed elating,
The joy my heart's awaiting,
Is not of mortal birth,
In vain doth Heaven, contending
With rival claims, oppose me.
If once these arms enclose thee,
No power in heav'n or earth,
No pow'r shall tear thee from me!

FERRANDO AND RETAINERS:
How bold! Let's go—conceal ourselves
Amid the shades in haste.
How bold!—Come on—and silence keep,
The prize he soon will hold!

As the nuns appear, conducting the penitent, the Count's retainers rush out and seize Leonora.

The calculations of di Luna are once more upset, for just as he interrupts the ceremony, Manrico unexpectedly appears. Leonora, overjoyed to find her lover still living, begins the great trio.

E deggio e posso crederlo (Blessed Vision)
By Grisi, Sangiorgi, Cigada and Chorus
(In Italian) *35176 12-inch, $1.25

Leonora foregoes her religious vows, and the lovers, for the time united, make their escape, to the chagrin of the baffled Count, while his men are defeated by Manrico's followers.

ACT III

SCENE I—The Camp of di Luna

Squilli echeggi la tromba (Soldiers' Chorus)
By New York Grand Opera Chorus (In Italian) 64050 10-inch, $1.00

Act III opens with the chorus of di Luna's men—called the Soldiers' Chorus. In spite of the wealth of melody already heard in this work, here is yet another marvelous number, which works up to a powerful climax, and then dies away softly, as these Trovatore choruses so frequently do.

Soldiers:
Now let the trumpet in war tones resounding,
Call to arms, with courage bold, we'll march undaunted.
Haply, to-morrow, our proud foes confounding
On those walls shall our banners be planted.

Ne'er more brilliant were prospects victorious
Than the hopes which our hearts now elate.
Thence, we'll gather renown, bright and glorious
Pleasure, honor and profit there await us.
Honor and booty for us there await.

Giorni poveri vivea (In Despair I Seek My Son)
By Ida Mamelli, Soprano; Renzo Minolfi, Baritone; Cesare Preve.
Baritone: La Scala Chorus (In Italian) *35177 12-inch, $1.25

A scouting party from the Count's troops have fallen in with Azucena, and now bring her to the Count as a possible spy. Inquiries as to her past immediately connect her with the episode of the Count's childhood, and Ferrando declares her to be the murderess of di Luna's lost brother. Azucena in her extremity, cries out the name of Manrico, and the Count, finding she claims the Troubadour as her son, vows upon her a double vengeance, and she is bound and dragged away. The gypsy's pleading, the Count's threatening anger and triumph, with the accompanying chorus, combine to make a moving and dramatic ensemble.

SCENE II—Manrico's Castle

The scene changes to the castle wherein Manrico and Leonora are at last enjoying a brief honeymoon, though in expectation of an attack from the baffled Count di Luna. Here Manrico sings a tender and affectionate farewell to his beloved ere he departs to repel his rival's assault.

Ah, si ben mio (The Vows We Fondly Plighted)

* Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see list on pages 456 and 457.
This beautiful lyrical number is a delightful relief after so much that is forcible and dramatic.

Manrico:

'Tis love, sublime emotion, at such a moment
Bids thy heart still be hopeful.
Ah! love; how blest our life will be
Our fond desires attaining.
My soul shall win fresh ardor,
My arm new courage gaining.
But, if, upon the fatal page
Of destiny impending,
I'm doom'd among the slain to fall,
'Gainst hostile arms contending,
In life's last hour, with fainting breath,
My thoughts will turn to thee.
Preceding thee to Heaven, will death
Alone appear to me!

Quietness soon departs, for the news comes that the attacking party have captured Azucena, and are piling up faggots around the stake at which she is to be burnt. Maddened at the approaching outrage upon one whom he believes to be his mother, Manrico prepares to rush to her assistance. The air with chorus which forms the climax to this scene is full of martial fire.

It is led up to by a very powerful introductory passage, and the high notes at the end, delivered in robust tones, never fail of their effect.

Manrico:

Ah! sight of horror! See that pile blazing—
Demons of fury round it stand gazing!
Madness inspiring, Hate now is raging—
Tremble, for vengeance on you shall fall.

Oh! mother dearest, though love may claim me,
Danger, too, threaten, yet will I save thee;
From flames consuming thy form shall snatch'd be,
Or with thee, mother, I too will fall!

Caruso's singing of this number is absolutely electrifying in its effect on the listener, the two famous high C's being easily taken and with the full power of his great voice.

Tamagno's Manrico was a figure of noble proportions, and he endowed it with all his splendid vitality. Such a high C had never before been heard, and it electrified the audiences. The record of Di quella pira is a faithful reproduction of the great singer's rendition of the famous aria. Paoli, the famous Milan tenor, also gives a vigorous performance of this great air.

Other fine renditions, at a lower price, are given by Zerola and by Signor Valls, assisted by La Scala Chorus.

SCENE I—Exterior of the Palace of Aliaferia

The last act brings us outside the palace of Aliaferia, wherein Manrico, defeated by di Luna’s men, and the gypsy, are confined in the dungeons. Hither Leonora has wended her way to be near her lover, and she now sings the plaintive D’amor.

This sad but melodious air reveals her heartfelt grief for the sorrows which she cannot relieve.

Leonora:

In this dark hour of midnight
1. hover round thee, my love!
Ye moaning breezes round me playing,
In pity aid me, my sighs to him conveying!
On rosy wings of love depart,
Bearing my heart’s sad wailing,
Visit the prisoner’s lonely cell,

Console his spirit failing,
Let hope’s soft whispers wreathing
Around him, comfort breathing,
Recall to his fond remembrance
Sweet visions of his love;
But, let no accent reveal to him
The sorrows, the griefs my heart doth move!

And now comes Verdi’s most famous operatic scene, the great Miserere.

Leonora is terror-sticken at the solemn tolling of a deep-toned bell and the mournful chorus of priests chanting for the soul of a doomed prisoner.

Priests:

Pray that peace may attend a soul departing,
Whither no care or thought of earth can follow;
Heav’nly mercy allays the pangs of parting,
Look up beyond this life’s delusions hollow.

Then follows an impressive series of chords in the orchestra, leading to a sobbing lament of Leonora.

Leonora:

What voices of terror! For whom are they praying?
With omens of fear unknown, they darken the air,
New horrors assail me, my senses are straying,
My vision is dim, is it death that is near?

In upon this there breaks the beautiful air of the Troubadour, sung within the prison, followed by a joyful cry of devotion from his beloved.

Manrico:

Ah! I have sighed to rest me; deep in the quiet grave—
Sighed to rest me, but all in vain I crave.
Oh fare thee well, my Leonora, fare thee well!

These fragments, first given separately, are next combined and heard together, forming a most impressive scene of touching beauty, for which the opera of Il Trovatore will ever be remembered.

The entrance of di Luna brings from Leonora a prayer for mercy for the prisoner. The appeal is unheeded, or rather it appears to increase the triumph which belongs to the Count's vengeance. The appeal of the unhappy woman and the fierce joy of the gratified noble are powerfully expressed in this magnificent duet.

In the extremity of despair, Leonora makes one last effort. If the Count will spare the one she loves, she will consent to become di Luna's wife. She swears to perform her promise, at the same time intending to take poison as soon as Manrico is free. Di Luna's wrath is now changed into joy, while Leonora, forgetting her own fate, is filled with happiness at the thought of the Troubadour's release. This situation gives opportunity for another wonderful duet of a most thrilling character.

In this number the Count expresses his rapture at the success of his conquest, while Leonora exclaims, aside: "Thou shalt possess but a lifeless bride." As the scene changes they enter the tower to secure the release of Manrico.

SCENE II—The Prison Cell of Manrico

Yet a third duet—the famous Home to Our Mountains. The scene has changed to the prison interior, where Azucena and Manrico are together, and the gypsy, with the second-sight of her race, predicts her approaching end.

This familiar duet is considered by many to be the gem of Verdi's opera, and when given by such artists as the Victor offers, it is doubly enjoyable. Manrico is watching over the couch of Azucena, whose strength is exhausted, and who is full of vague terrors; and he endeavors to soothe her fears.

Manrico:

If any love remains in thy bosom,
If thou art yet my mother, oh, hear me!
Seek thy terrors to number,
And gain repose from thy sorrows in soothing slumber.

Azucena:

Yes, I am grief-worn and fain would rest me,
But more than grief have sad dreams oppressed me:
Should that dread vision rise in slumber
Rouse me! its horrors may then depart.

Manrico:

Rest thee, oh mother! I'll watch o'er thee,
Sleep may restore sweet peace to thy heart.

A fierce and avenging gypsy no longer, but a broken woman whose consuming passions of remorse and revenge have died away, she dreams of the happy days gone by.

Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see list on pages 456 and 457.
Azucena (dreaming): Home to our mountains, let us return, love,
    There in thy young days peace had its reign:
    There shall thy song fall on my slumber,
    There shall thy lute, make me joyous again.
Manrico: Rest thee, my mother, kneeling beside thee,
    I will pour forth my troubadour lay.
Azucena: O sing and wake now thy sweet lute’s soft numbers,
    Lull me to rest, charm my sorrows away.
Both: Lull { me thee } to rest!

Matters now move swiftly to a climax. Leonora arrives on the scene, bringing Manrico the news of his freedom. The joy of meeting is all too soon destroyed when the prisoner finds his liberty to have been purchased at the cost of a happiness which is to him dearer than life itself. He accuses Leonora of betraying his love.

Here Azucena, who cares nothing for his passion, counsels flight. This gives the el-ments of the closing trio: Manrico’s reproaches, Leonora’s ineffectual protestations, and the gypsy’s voice through all, singing dreamily of her mountain home. With these mingled voices dying away into soft peaceful harmonies the musical portion of the opera draws to a close.

Manrico:
    Thou giv’st me life? No! I scorn it!
    Whence comes this power? what price has bought it?
    Thou wilt not speak? oh, dark suspicion!

Leonora, who had already taken the poison, now sinks dying at Manrico’s feet, and he pleads forgiveness as he learns the truth. Di Luna now enters, and furious at finding himself cheated of his promised bride, orders the Troubadour to instant execution. Manrico is taken out by the guards and beheaded.

At the moment of his death, the gypsy awakes, and not seeing Manrico, realizes that he has gone to his execution. She drags the Count to the window and cries to him: “You have killed your brother!” Di Luna utters a wild cry of remorse and falls senseless as the curtain slowly descends.

Time and Place: Heidelberg and Säckingen; seventeenth century.

Nessler has taken Scheffel's poem and built the charming little metrical romance into an operatic production. The story tells of a young student of Heidelberg, Werner Kirchofer, who, with his comrades, is banished from the university for serenading an English princess. The youths join the army, and in due time Werner reaches the town of Säckingen, where the peasants are on the eve of an uprising against the nobles. He manages to protect the Countess of Wildenstein and her niece, Maria, from the insults of the rabble, and later becomes trumpeter in the castle of Maria's father, the Baron von Schonau. Werner and Maria fall in love with each other, but it has already been planned that the young girl shall marry Damian, the son of the Count of Wildenstein, who is expected at the castle shortly. The Countess surprises Werner making love to Maria, and the Baron angrily orders the bugler from the castle. As Werner is departing, the Hauenstein peasants rebel against the Baron and attack the castle. The trumpeter, gathering the besieged forces together, succeeds in driving off the assailants. In the meantime, Damian and his father have arrived, and during the conflict the young man shows himself to be a coward. Count Wildenstein happily recognizes Werner as his long lost son, who had been stolen as a child by gypsies, and the Baron, reconciled, gives the Trumpeter of Säckingen his daughter Maria for a bride.

OPERA IN FIVE ACTS

Text by Scribe and Duveyrier. Music by Verdi. First given at the Académie, Paris, June 13, 1855. An Italian version was given at La Scala, Milan, in 1856. The first London production was at Drury Lane, 1859, with Tietiens, Mongini and Vialletti. The work was presented in New York in 1859, with Colson, Brignoli and Ferri.

Verdi’s Sicilian Vespers followed the composer’s Traviata and was written for the Paris Opéra, being produced there June 13, 1855. It is a brilliant work, but has never been popular, and much wonder has often been expressed that Verdi, in writing for the French stage, should have selected so inappropriate a subject as the Sicilian massacre of the French.

But the young composer could hardly help himself, as the libretto was offered to him by the great Scribe, then in the height of his glory. The French, however, kindly overlooked the plot and welcomed the composer’s fine music most generously.

The scene is laid in Sicily at the time of the French invasion, and tells of the slaughter of the French at vespers, Easter Monday, 1282. This massacre was caused by the Viceroy’s brutal attitude toward the Sicilians.

Arrigo is in love with Hélène, and the plot turns on his attempt to rescue her. He is afterward discovered to be the son of the Viceroy.

The Victor offers a fine record of the splendid O tu Palermo, by Mr. Witherspoon.

Fatherland, beloved country!
At last I now behold thee!

Oh, thou Palermo,
Land of my devotion,
Thy loving smile shall ever be mine!
Summon thy pride from shameful emotion,
In ancient glory once more to shine!
I have sought near and far for an ally,
I have call’d on the town and the tow’r;
But never heeding the voice of my pleading,
Came the reply:

Walküre is the second in the series of music-dramas composing the Niebelung Ring, and to most opera-goers perhaps the most melodious and pleasing. The story is beautiful and compelling, the situations by turn thrilling and pathetic, while the glorious music written by the master to accompany the adventures of his mythical personages is easily understood and appreciated by the average listener.

A perusal of the preceding description of the story of the Niebelung in Rhinegold (page 360) will help the reader to understand more fully the Victor synopsis of Walküre.

Wotan has been warned by Erda, the Earth Goddess, that if Alberich regains the Ring the gods must perish. Brooding over this impending fate, Wotan descends to earth and weds the goddess; this union resulting in nine splendid daughters, the Walküre, who are to aid in the salvation of the gods. Riding forth each day among the tumult and the strife which prevail on the earth as a result of the Curse of the Ring, they carry to Walhalla, on their flying horses, the bravest of the warriors who fall in battle. These revived heroes keep themselves ready to defend Walhalla from the Niebelungs. But in order to regain the Ring, a brave hero is necessary, who shall be free from the universal curse and who can take it from Fafner, now changed into a dragon the better to guard the treasure. With this in mind Wotan visits the earth again and weds a mortal who bears him twins, Siegmund and Sieglinde. While these children are quite young, the brutal Hunding finds their cottage, burns it, kills the mother and carries off Sieglinde, whom he afterward forces to become his bride.
VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA—WAGNER'S DIE WALKÜRE

The father and son return and swear vengeance on Hunding. Wotan (known as Volvo on earth) returns to Walhalla, leaving the young Siegmund to fight alone and become a self-reliant hero. This is the situation when the action begins.

ACT I

SCENE I—Interior of Hunding's Hut in the Forest—a Large Tree rises through the Roof

The prelude represents a fearful storm in the forest, in the midst of which Siegmund rushes in exhausted, and falls by the fire. Sieglinde gives him to him by some strange attraction. While they are conversing, Hunding enters, and after questioning the stranger, recognizes in him his mortal enemy. He says, "Thou shalt have shelter from the storm to-night, but to-morrow thou diest!" and goes to his room, bidding Sieglinde prepare his evening drink. She does so but puts a drug in it to make him sleep soundly, and returns to Siegmund, unable to control her interest in the mysterious youth who has so strangely affected her.

Then occurs the lovely Liebeslied, the gem of this beautiful first act.

Siegmund's Liebeslied (Siegmund's Love Song)

By Riccardo Martin, Tenor
(In German) 88276 12-inch, $3.00
By George Hamlin, Tenor
(In German) 74111 12-inch, 1.50

The hut, which has been in semi-darkness, is suddenly illumined by the blowing open of the great door at the back, and without can be seen the beauty of the spring night after the storm. The full moon shines in upon them, so that they see each other clearly for the first time. Siegmund, in ecstasy, rhapsodizes Spring and Love:

Winter storms have waned, to the winsome moon, In mild a-cen-dance smileth the Spring.
Brünnhilde Bearing a Wounded Warrior to Walhalla
He takes her hand, seats her beside him on the rude bench, and continues:

Sieg mund:
With balmy breezes, soft and soothing,
Wonders weaving, on he wends,
Through wood and meadow wafts his breathing,
Wide and lustrous laughs his eye;
In songs of birds his silvery voice resounds,
Wondrous fragrance he outbreathes;
From his living blood the loveliest flowers are blooming
Leaf and spray spring forth at his voice,
With gentle sceptre's sway he ruleth the world;
Winter and storm wane as his strength awakes:
By dint of his hardy striving
The stoutest doors he is cleaving,
Which, stubborn and strong, once held us from him!
To greet his sister swiftly he flies;
Thus Love the spring hath allured,
Within our bosoms Love lay asleep
That now laughs out to the light
The bride and the sister is freed by the brother;
Destroyed the walls that held them apart;
Joyous meet now the youthful pair;
United are Love and Spring!

Although the true charm of this poetry can be realized best by those on intimate terms with the German tongue, this excellent translation from the Ditson Wagner Lyrics for Tenor will add to the enjoyment of the record.

Sieglinde then tells Siegmund the story of the Sword—how at her wedding a stranger had suddenly appeared and thrust into the trunk of the tree a magic sword which should belong only to him who could take it out. The stranger had secretly told Sieglinde that no one but Siegmund would have power to remove it.

Siegmund rises eagerly, and going to the tree withdraws the sword with a mighty effort. The reunited brother and sister embrace each other and agree to fly from the power of Hunding. The curtain falls as they pass out into the moonlit forest.

The love scenes between Sieglinde and Siegmund should be considered in their allegorical and poetical sense, and not judged by modern ethical standards. Wagner intended this episode to represent the union of Love and Spring.

ACT II

SCENE I—A Wild and Rocky Pass

Wotan and his favorite Valkyrie daughter, Brünnhilde, are discovered in full armor. He tells her to go to the rescue of the Volsung (Siegmund), whom Hunding is pursuing.

Wotan:
Make ready thy steed, warrior maid,
Soon will come battle and strife;
Brünnhilde, haste to the field,
Give aid to Volsung to-day!

The Valkyrie eagerly prepares for her flight, and sings her famous Battle Cry.
Ho, yo, to, ho! (Brünnhilde's Battle Cry)
By Johanna Gadski, Soprano

Gadski is always a statuesquely beautiful Brünnhilde, and her voice glorifies this music, in which many persons, insensible to the poetic depth and power of the story, hear only noisy declamation. In this first scene especially, she brings into beautiful relief the joyful nature of the Valkyrie, and her cries are full of eager, happy vitality. Some idea of the difficult nature of this famous Battle Cry may be had from these few measures

Mme. Gadski, however, surmounts these difficulties with ease, and the aria is a really wonderful specimen of both singing and recording.

Brünnhilde:
Ho-yo-to-ho! Ho-yo-to-ho! Hei-aha!
But listen, father! care for thyself; Fricka, thy busy wife, approacheth in her ram-impelled car.
Ha! how she swings her golden whip! The frighten'd goats are fainting with fear, Wheels rattling and rolling whirl her here to the fight.
At such a time away I would be, Tho' my delight is in scenes of war! Take heed that defeat be not thine, For now I must leave thee to fate!

Brünnhilde is right—Wotan is in for a scolding, as Fricka now appears in an extremely bad humor. Hunding has appealed to her, the guardian of marriage, for help, and she insists that Siegmund be punished. Wotan protests that this true love romance should not be interfered with, but the wrathful wife reminds him that the whole difficulty is but the result of his own infidelity, and he is finally forced to swear that Siegmund shall be punished.

Fricka then triumphantly calls to Brünnhilde that Wotan has further instructions for her. Brünnhilde finds her father in deep dejection, and when she questions him he confides to her his efforts to find a hero who shall banish the curse, but says his quest has been in vain. He bids her see that victory goes to Hunding. She protests, but he sternly commands obedience and leaves her.

Siegmund and Sieglinde now appear, fleeing from the wrath of Hunding. Sieglinde's strength has failed her, and she falls down exhausted. Brünnhilde comes to the lovers and tells Siegmund he must die. He scorns her prophecy and says his sword will not fail him. Hunding's voice is now heard, and in a sudden wave of sympathy Brünnhilde resolves to defend the young lovers.

Siegmund rushes to meet Hunding, and amid flashes of lightning the warriors can be seen in deadly combat, while Brünnhilde is visible flying above Siegmund and protecting him. Wotan, seeing the situation, then appears and causes Siegmund to fall by his opponent's sword, but also strikes down Hunding.

Brünnhilde retreats in terror from her father's wrath, and runs to protect Sieglinde. She lifts the helpless maiden on her horse and they disappear.

Wotan (suddenly bursting into terrible wrath):
But Brünnhilde!
Vengeance shall break on her,
If my steed may stay her flight!
(He disappears amid thunder and lightning.)
ACT III

SCENE I—The Summit of a Rocky Mountain

The act opens with the wonderful Ride of the Valkyries, one of the most striking of all the master's compositions. This is graphically pictured in the splendid Fantasia by Pryor's Band, and in the La Scala record.

Cavalcata (Ride of the Valkyries)

By La Scala Orchestra
(Double-faced) 62693 10-inch, $0.75

Fantasie
(Including Ride of the Valkyries)

By Arthur Pryor's Band
31333 12-inch, $1.00

The Fantasie contains some of the finest portions of this second opera of the Niebelungen Ring. At first we hear the motive of The Sword theme

\[ \text{Motive of The Sword} \]

by full band, followed by the tumultuous Ride of the Valkyries, one of the most tremendous compositions in existence. The wild shouts of the goddesses as they ride their winged steeds through the air to the Rock, the warlike cries of Brünnhilde and the neighing of the war horses are splendidly portrayed.

A skillful modulation brings us to the last act, and a part of the great scene between Wotan and Brünnhilde is given, beginning with the wonderful Siegfried, Guardian of the Sword theme on the trombone, and which is repeated magnificently by the basses in another key.

\[ \text{Siegfried Theme on the trombone} \]

The closing line of Wotan's Farewell, So kusst er die Gottheit von dir ("with a kiss I divest thee of godhead"), is heard on the cornet, followed by the Fire Music, an exquisite blending of the two fire motive with Brünnhilde's Sleep.

The Valkyries see Brünnhilde flying toward them, evidently in great distress. She alights and asks her sisters to shield her from the wrath of Wotan, who is riding in pursuit; but they dare not help her.

Brünnhilde:
Shield me! Oh, help in hardest need!

The Valkyries:
Why fleest thou in all haste?
Art thou in fear? So flee but culprits who fear!

Brünnhilde:
I am for the first time pursued in flight;
Host-father hunts me down!

She then bids Sieglinde flee alone, telling her that she is destined to bear a son who shall be the hero Siegfried.
Wotan's Farewell
Fort denn eile (Fly Then Swiftly)
By Margarete Matzenauer, Contralto
(In German) 87102 10-inch. $2.00

Brünnhilde:
Fly then swiftly, and speed to the cast!
Bravely determine all trials to bear.
Hunger and thirst, thorns and hard ways,
Smile through all pain while suffering pangs!
This only heed and hold it ever:
The highest hero of worlds hidest thou, o
wife,
In sheltering shrine!
(She produces the pieces of Siegmund's sword from under her breastplate and hands them to Sieglinde.)
For him keep these shreds of shattered sword-blade;
From his father's death-field by fortune I saved them:
Anon renewed this sword shall he swing;
And now his name I declare—Siegfried, of vict'ry the son!

Sieglinde:
O marvelous sayings! maiden divine!
What comfort o'er my mind thou hast cast!
For his sake I live and save this belov'd one!
May my blessing frame future reward!
Fare thee well! Be Sieglinde's sorrow thy weal!
(She hastens away. The rocky peak is enveloped in black thunder-clouds; a fearful tempest roars up from the back; between the peals of thunder Wotan's voice is heard.)

Wotan:
Where is Brünnhilde? Where the rebellious one?
Dare ye to veil her from Wotan's vengeance?
(Brünnhilde comes out from the group and faces her father, saying):

Brünnhilde:
Here stand I, father, to suffer my sentence!

Wotan:
I sentence thee not; thou hast shaped the stroke for thyself.
Wish-maid art thou no more.
One time a Valkyrie wert thou,
Remain henceforth but merely thyself!

Brünnhilde (violently startled):
Thou disownest me? Thine aim I divine!

Wotan:
From heavenly clans art thou excluded,
Bann'd, degraded from thy blessed degree;
For broken now is our bond; exiled for aye
Art thou banished from bliss.

He then tells her that she must be put in a deep sleep, and shall be wakened by the first man who passes. She pleads with him in a beautiful appeal.

Wotan Invoking the Fire God

Brünnhilde:
Was it so shameful, what I have done,
That for my deed I so shamefully am scourged?
Was it so base to warp thy command, that thou
For me such debasement must shape?
Was't such dishonor what I have wrought?

Wotan, deeply moved, softens his stern decree, and consents that she shall be won only by a great hero who can brace the flames with which she is to be surrounded. He then bids her farewell in the splendid Abschied.

Wotan's Abschied (I) (Wotan's Farewell, Part I)
By Clarence Whitehill, Baritone

Wotan:
Farewell, my brave and beautiful child!
Thou once the light and life of my heart!
Farewell! Farewell! Farewell!
Loth I must leave thee; no more in love
May I grant thee my greeting;
Henceforth my maid no more with me rideth,
Nor waiteth wine to reach me!
When I relinquish thee, my beloved one,
Thou laughing delight of my eyes,

Brünnhilde sinks, wrapt and transfigured, on Wotan's breast; he holds her in a long embrace. She throws her head back again and gazes with solemn emotion into her father's eyes.

Wotan's Abschied (II) (Wotan's Farewell, Part II)
By Clarence Whitehill, Baritone

Wotan:
Those eyes so lustrous and clear,
Which oft in love I have kissed,
When warlike longings won my lauding,
Or when with lisping of heroes leaf thy honied lips were inspired;
Those effulgent, glorious eyes,
Whose flash my gloom oft dispelled,
When hopeless cravings my heart discouraged,

He imprints a long kiss on her eyes; she sinks back in his arms with closed eyes, her powers gently departing. He tenderly helps her to lie upon a low mossy lounge, closes her helmet and completely covers her with the great steel shield of the Valkyrie. He slowly moves away, then directs the point of his spear toward a huge stone, and summons the God of Fire.

\[\text{Wotan:} \text{ Loki, hear! Listen and heed!} \]
\[\text{Appear, wavering spirit, and} \]
\[\text{spread me thy} \]
\[\text{Fire round this fell!} \]
\[\text{Loki! Loki! Appear!} \]

A stream of fire issues from the stone, which swells to an ever brightening glow of flame; bright flames surround Wotan, leaping wildly.

Magic Fire Spell (Feuerzauber) (Transcription by Brassin)

By Alfred Grünfeld, Pianist

The leave-taking and the breaking out of the flames are musically pictured in one of those marvelous bits of writing which only Wagner could produce, and this beautiful transcription is artistically played here by Herr Grünfeld. The record begins with the passage just preceding Wotan’s summons to Loge.

Then follows a long modulation ending in E major, when the fire motive begins and continues with all its varied changes and modulations to the close of the opera.

\[\text{Wotan directs, with his spear, the fiery flood to encircle the rocks.} \]

\[\text{Wotan: He who my spear in spirit feareth,} \]
\[\text{Ne'er springs through this fiery bar!} \]

He casts a last look on Brünnhilde and disappears through the fire.

As the curtain rises, Charlotte, surrounded by her brothers and sisters, is engaged in preparing the noonday meal. Werther, a serious-minded and romantic young man, comes to the house with his friend Albert, who is betrothed to Charlotte. The charming domestic picture appeals to Werther greatly, and he promptly falls in love with the young girl. When Werther finds an opportunity to tell Charlotte of his love, she confesses that she returns his affection, but feels it her duty to marry Albert to fulfill a promise made to her dying mother, and begs him to leave the village.

After Charlotte and Albert are married Werther returns and tells Charlotte that he still loves her. She admits that he still possesses her affections, but entreats him to spare her and go away forever. Werther then writes a message to Albert, telling him he has resolved to go on a long journey, and asking him for his brace of pistols. Charlotte, greatly alarmed at this request, follows Werther, but is too late, as she finds him mortally wounded, and he dies in her arms. Overcome with grief, she faints on the body of her lover, while in strange contrast to this affecting scene the pealing of bells and the joyous voices of little children singing Christmas carols are heard in the distance.

Two of the best selections from the opera, by Clement and Battistini, are offered here.

THE PLOT

The story of Tell, the distinguished patriot, and chief instrument of the revolution which delivered the Swiss cantons from the German yoke in 1207, has been taken by Rossini for the theme of one of his most admired operas, the dramatic interest being heightened by the introduction of love scenes and other episodes.

In the libretto by Jouy and Marast Gessler is endowed with a beautiful and amiable daughter, Matilda, who has been saved from a watery grave by Arnold, son of Melchthal, the patriarch of the country, and a determined opponent of the tyrannies of Gessler. As a matter of course, mutual attachment ensues, and leads to the troubles which might have been expected from so ill-sorted a connection.

At the opening of the opera we learn that an agent of Gessler’s has attempted an outrage on the daughter of a herdsman, and has been slain by her father, Leuthold. Obliged to fly the country after this act of vengeance, it becomes necessary to cross Lake Lucerne while the weather is so adverse that none of the boatmen will row the old man across the tempestuous waters. William Tell finally undertakes the rescue, and by so doing incurs the mortal hatred of Gessler.

As time progresses, the people become more and more disaffected; and the father of Arnold, suspected of inciting them to acts of insubordination, is seized by Gessler and executed. The son’s feelings are thus subjected to a severe conflict between his love for Matilda, Gessler’s daughter, his duty to his country, and his desire to avenge his father’s death. He, however, renounces his love, and joins the band of patriots now marshaled under William Tell. Events are brought to a climax by Gessler causing a cap to be elevated on a pole, and requiring all passers-by to bow to it. Tell firmly refuses to do so, and is thereupon subjected to the ordeal of the apple, being required, under pain of death, to shoot at an apple placed on the head of his son. Although the distance was considerable, he was able to strike the apple off without injuring the child. The tyrant, perceiving another arrow concealed under Tell’s cloak, asks him for what purpose it was intended. To which he boldly replies, “To have shot you to the heart, if I had killed my son!” The enraged governor orders him to be hanged; but the Swiss, animated by such fortitude and patriotism, fly to arms, attack and vanquish Gessler, who is shot by Tell. Matilda and Arnold are united, and the independence of the country is assured.

OVERTURE

This great overture, which Berlioz has called a symphony in four parts, is a fitting prelude to such a noble and serious work, and is full of beautiful contrasts.

The first movement is reposeful, expressing the solitude of Nature, and is followed by the contrasting Storm, a majestic and awe-inspiring tone picture. To the Storm succeeds a beautiful pastoral with a delicious melody for the English horn, and as Berlioz says, "with the gamboling of the flute above this calm chant producing a charming freshness and gayety." As the last notes of the melody die away, the trumpets enter with a brilliant fanfare on the splendid finale, a fitting climax to a great work.

ACT I

SCENE—A Village in the Canton of Uri

The curtain rises on a peaceful scene, showing a charming village with the house of William Tell in the foreground. Tell and his family are engaged in rural occupations, and the fishermen, while they prepare to put out the boats, sing a lovely barcarolle.

Accours dans ma nacelle (Come, Love, in My Boat)

M. Regis, Tenor (Double-faced—See p. 478) (In French) 45026 10-inch, $1.00
Fishermen:
Come hither, my dearest love!
In my little boat embark;
Ah! hither come, and with thy smile
My loving heart rejoice.
Though leave I must, Eliza, dear,
Do not let me alone depart;
See how the shining sky above
A brilliant day doth augur.
Gentle as the bending rosebud,
Born in the morning's early dew,
Heaven's threaten'd tempests wild
Will thy presence, love, appease;
When by your side I'm seated,
What new life my soul receives!
There's a Providence above us
Our heart's affections will protect.

A horn sounds as the signal for the beginning of the annual Shepherds' Festival, at which three marriages are to be celebrated by Melchthal, the patriarch of the village. Arnold, Melchthal's son, is saddened at the signal, thinking of his own love, Matilda, who is the daughter of the tyrant Gessler.

Tell confides to Arnold some of his plans for overthrowing the power of Gessler, and asks Arnold to assist.

Che' finger tanto invano (Vain is the Attempt!)

(In Italian) 92048 12-inch, $3.00
ARNOLD: His grief his repentance doth attest.
(To Arnold):
We have no need for doubt or fear—
If true to ourselves, we must conquer.
ARNOLD:
What power do we possess?
TELL:
Strength enough has he who doubts not.
If our valor fail us not,
The tyrant will surely fall.
ARNOLD:
When the hour of danger comes,
Faithfully I will stand by you.

The young man hesitates between duty to his country and his love for the tyrant’s daughter, but finally casts his lot with Tell, and goes to bid a last farewell to Matilda.

ACT II

SCENE—A deep valley in the Alps.  On the left the Lake of the Four Cantons.  Twilight
Matilda appears and muses upon her love for Arnold.  Her lover now joins her, and an effective love scene ensues, which is interrupted by the approach of Tell and Walter, and Matilda departs.  Tell has seen the young man talking to the daughter of his mortal enemy, and accuses him of being false to the Swiss.  Arnold confesses that he loves Matilda, but says he will renounce her if his country demands the sacrifice.

They then break to Arnold the news that Gessler has put his father to death, and feelings of vengeance drive from his mind all thought of Matilda.  In a fine trio the three patriots call upon Heaven to aid their righteous cause.

Troncar suoi di (His Life Basely Taken)
By Paoli, Cigada and Sillich
(In Italian) 92051 12-inch. $3.00
ARNOLD:
His life the tyrant wickedly hath taken,
And yet my sabre in its sheath reposeth;
Alas! my father his son was needing,
While I Helvetia e’en then betraying.
Heavens! never again shall I behold him!
Trio:
May glory our hearts with courage exalt

Berlioz writes of his attempt to analyze this great trio: “What! Analyze the awful despair of a son who learns his father is brutally slain? Note the details of a flute or second violin passage! No,—I can only cry, ‘Wonderful, superb, heart-rendering!’”

The men of the cantons now assemble, and in a splendid finale swear to conquer or die.

ACT III

SCENE—The Grand Square of Altorf—Gessler’s Castle in the background.  In the Foreground a Pole surmounted by a Cap

Tell Refuses to Bow to the Tyrant

Gessler, who, with much satisfaction, has been watching the populace bow to the cap which he has had placed on a pole as a symbol of his authority, suddenly notices that Tell and his son fail to pay honor to the standard, and he orders them seized and brought before him. He asks if the boy is Tell's son, and when Tell replies, "My only son," a fiendish idea strikes the tyrant. He orders Tell to shoot an apple from the boy's head on pain of instant death for both. Tell refuses, but Jemmy urges his father to obey, saying, "Father, remember your skill! Fear not, I will not move!"

Tell embraces his boy, and selecting an arrow, manages to conceal another in his coat. He casts a fierce look at the tyrant, then aims with care and strikes the apple fairly in the centre. When he realizes Jemmy is safe, Tell faints and the concealed arrow is discovered. "For whom was the second arrow?" demands Gessler. "For you, tyrant, if I had harmed my child!"

Gessler then orders both put to death, but Matilda, who has entered, demands the life of the boy and takes him under her protection. Tell is taken to prison amid the curses of the Swiss.

ACT IV

SCENE—The Ruined Village of Act I

Arnold, who knows nothing of the capture of Tell, has come to his native village to bid farewell to the home of his boyhood. He gazes at the desolate cottage and sings his charming and pathetic air, Oh, Blessed Abode.

O muto asil (Oh, Blessed Abode)

- By Francesco Tamagno, Tenor
- By M. Gautier, Tenor
- By Leon Beyle, Tenor

This number, one of the most effective of those allotted to Arnold, is reposeful and offers a fine contrast to the tumult of the last scene.

Arnold:

I will ne'er abandon my resolve, My heart's thirsting for revenge! William the tyrant has in chains imprison'd! The hour of battle impatiently I wait! What silence in this lone place doth reign; I listen,—my own steps alone I hear!

Oh! bless'd abode, within whose walls Mine eyes first saw the light, Once so belov'd, yet now thy halls, Bring mis'try to my aching sight. In vain I call; no father's greeting, Which fancy now to me's repeating, Will e'er again these ears be meeting, Then home once lov'd, forevermore, farewell!

Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED WILLIAM TELL RECORDS, page 478.
A company of Swiss patriots enter hurriedly and tell Arnold of recent events at Altdorf. He calls on them to follow him to the rescue of Tell, and all depart.

SCENE II—Lake of Four Cantons.

A Storm is Gathering

Tell's wife is resting here on her way to demand of Gessler her husband and son. Suddenly she hears her son's voice and is overjoyed to see him brought to her by Matilda. She clasps him in her arms, and anxiously inquires for her husband. Matilda says that Tell has been removed from Altdorf Prison, and taken across the lake. She has no sooner spoken than Tell appears, having escaped from the boat and sent an arrow through the tyrant's heart. Arnold and the patriots appear, rejoicing that Gessler has been slain and that the Swiss are free once more.

The storm breaks, and as if to announce liberty to Switzerland the sun bursts forth, revealing the glittering, snowy peaks of the Alps in all their dazzling beauty. An invocation to Freedom comes from every throat:

Tell:

Let us invoke, with hearts devout,

Thee, oh Freedom, to sway each heart!

Thou gav'st us pow'r to strike and conquer,

Do thou ne'er depart!

All:

Thou gav'st us pow'r to strike and conquer!

We are free, do thou ne'er depart!

Time and Place: Paris; the present time.

Zaza has had some success in London, Paris and Berlin, but has never been given in New York, although several Zaza excerpts were given at the Leoncavallo concerts in 1906, when the composer visited America. The story is quite familiar to American audiences, however, through the performances of the play of that name, which has been heard in many countries and many languages, and the musical version follows closely the original play.
The rising curtain discloses a stage set in two sections, at one side the dressing room of Zaza, and at the other the end of a stage setting. Zaza, a concert hall singer, is in love with Dufresne, and boasts to Buzzy, the journalist, that she will have his love in return. She exerts all her charms, and Dufresne finally falls in love with the fascinating singer.

The second act takes place in the reception room of Zaza's house. Dufresne tells Zaza that he must leave her to go to America for several months. She pleads with him not to go, and he finally consents to postpone his trip, but tells her he must go to Paris at once on business. Cascart, an old lover of Zaza's, enters and hints that Dufresne may have other reasons for the trip, and speaks of seeing him in Paris with another woman. Zaza's jealousy is aroused, and she announces her intention of following him to Paris.

The third act shows a room in Dufresne's house in Paris. Zaza enters, accompanied by her maid, and, discovering a letter addressed to Signora Dufresne, she realizes that he is married. His little girls enter, and finally Signora Dufresne herself, who gazes with astonishment at the visitor. Zaza merely says she has made a mistake in the house and goes away.

The scene of the last act is again Zaza's house in the suburbs. Cascart, who has learned of the singer's visit to Paris, pleads with her to give up Dufresne, but she only laughs at the suggestion and Cascart reminds her sternly that it is a matter of duty. Cascart leaves and Dufresne is announced. He greets Zaza in the old affectionate way, but she informs him she knows of his marriage, but that she forgives his deception. She declares she has told Signora Dufresne of their intimacy, and in a rage he curses her. She then sends him away, crying she is cured of her love, after assuring him that her first story was untrue, and that Signora Dufresne really knows nothing of the affair.

The rôle of Cascart is one of Titta Ruffo's best, and his rendition of the great air, Buona Zaza, del mio buon tempo, from the second act, is a magnificent one.

The second selection made by the baritone is the air from Act IV, sung by Milio just before the parting of the lovers. It is a highly effective number, emotional yet very melodious. Those who hear these fine airs are likely to regret that the work has not been adequately presented here.
